GEORGE N. DAY,

The green postage stamps after tomorrow will cease to be and all future requisitions for 2-cent stamps will be filled by the government with the new stamps which are of a carmine color.

The Motley Register appears this week under the proprietorship of John T. Drawz. The Register is above the average country paper and would be a credit to a town many times the size of Motley.

There is talk in the Third district of running Joel Heatwole for Congress. The people in that district could go a long ways and not find a man as well able to represent them as the editor of the Northfield News.

The people at Fergus Falls are endeavoring to secure the reopening of the land office at that place, and with good prospects. What's the matter of agitating again the removal of the St. Cloud land office to Brainerd where it rightfully belongs?

The people of Cass county are clamoring for the publication of a financial statement so they may know just what has been done with the funds and how things stand at present. The commissioners have it in their power to publish a statement and as the law requires it, it is their duty to do so.

Explanatory.

On account of the crowded condition of our columns with official advertising, we are obliged to print a half sheet supplement which contains the local and other news. The tax list requires one more publication and then we will have ample room to give our many readers the usual amount of reading matter. The list is published entirely in the paper for the reason that it will in that way become a permanent record for all time, and will not be lost as easily as a supplement.

Want the Finances Shown Up.

A correspondent of the Motley Register from Cass county who is evidently after the commissioners publishes the following under the head of "Enquirer" in the last issue of that paper:

I have a few questions to ask in regard to matters over here in Cass county. Of course we will admit (for argument's sake, at least) that our present members of the county board are for retrenchment and reform, at least so I am told on good authority, and hence ? ? ?.

In the year 1888 the full tax levied in Cass county was about $10,000: in the year 1889 it is about $12,000, and the county is much smaller now.—Where does that extra $2,000 go to? I fail to find that the state and school tax is any greater than in the former year. No extra levy is necessary for the new schools, for there are $3,300 belonging to this fund in the Crow Wing county treasury. Rumor says there are several thousand dollars of school money lying around Gull River, and if so, why don't the county fathers get it out and show it up?—In other counties of the state a financial statement is published annually, showing the county's standing and the business transacted during the year. Why is this not done in this county? And lastly. How can a resident of Crow Wing county legally serve on the Cass county board?

Minnneapolis is Frightened.

The Minneapolis Lumberman is very much disturbed over the recent developments in the Weyerhauser syndicate deal by which they are to locate a mammoth plant in this city. The fact that when the arrangements are completed and opperations are commenced at this point it will forever place Minneapolis in the shade as a lumbering center is enough to put the people of that city on their mettle. This extract, from the columns of that paper, shows how badly they dislike to admit the facts:

There has for a long time been a current rumor that is conceded to have been an element of probability about it to the effect that the Weyerhauser syndicate would erect a big mill at Brainerd and acqure large tracts of pine land in that vicinity.—The Brainerd people have all the time referred to these posibilities as a fact settled beyond all dispute instead of as a rumor.

Following this is another article intended to show why it would be the heighth of folly for any one to build mills at Brainerd, but a careful perusal of the article dispells the terrible hallucination. The article is as follows:

The Gull River Lumber company, at Gull River and Curtis & Lawrence, whose mill is at Motley, Minn., are not to operate their mills during the coming season. This conclusion has been reached in view of the fact that the lumber trade in North Dakota, upon which these manufacturers must be necessarily dependent, is pretty sure to be limited during the coming season. The owners of these mills are probably wise in their conclusions.—The circumstance only demonstrates, however, that manufacturers who are dependent upon a single market are at a disadvantage by the side of the lumbermen located at other points, where if one market fails another becomes available. The day will undoubtedly come when there will be business enough for the mill men now located on the Northern Pacific, but until it comes it will be folly for Mr. Weyerhauser or anybody else to build mills at Brainerd or any other point where the product must be distrbuted over the line of a single road.

Half Hour Reduction in Time.

The reduction of one-half an hour in time, giving earlier hour of arrival in Chicago, over the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway, insures connections with all fast line trains leaving Chicago in the morning for Pittsburgh, New York, Washington, Cincinnati, Louisville, and the East and South.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss
County of Crow Wing. }

On this 20th day of January A. D. 1890, personally came before me Louis Tache, Auditor of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, who being first duly sworn deposes and says: That the foregoing is a true and correct list of delinquent taxes upon real estate within the county of Cass and State of Minnesota for the year 1888, which became delinquent on the 1st day of June A. D. 1889, and remaining delinquent on the 20th day of January A. D. 1890.

LOUIS TACHE,
Auditor Crow Wing County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me me this 20th day of January, 1890.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies, but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

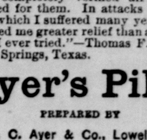

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas P. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

BENTON, LAF. CO., WIS., Dec., '88.

Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 1½ years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenigs Nerve Tonic cured him. 67

St. Francis Wis. Oct 24, 1888

A member of my congregation used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with good results. The patient was so nervous that he could not find sleep for weeks. He suffered from the most intense anxiety which bordered on insanity. I gave the person some of Koenig's Nerve Tonic and he continued to use it. The appetite returned gradually, the anxiety disappeared the headache left, and to day the sufferer, who had almost despaired, is enjoying excellent health.

Bern. Elskamp, Pastor.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Harry P. Cragg and Kate Cragg, his wife, mortgagors, to The National Building Loan and Protective Union, mortgagee, dated the first day of October, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of October, A. D. 1888, at 9:10 o'clock a. m., in book I of Mortgages, on page 10 on which there is claimed to be past due, at the date of this notice, the amount of thirty dollars ($30), being the interest and premium for nine months and the mortgagee elects to consider the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable and therefore there is due thereon the sum of four hundred and thirty dollars, ($430.00), and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Notice is hereby given, That by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House in the City of Brainerd, in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, and costs and expenses of sale, including twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, for foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at a point sixty-two and one-half (62½) feet east of the northwest corner of Block number seventy-seven (77), in the First Addition to the City of Brainerd, (properly the First Addition to the Town of Brainerd), according to the plat of said Addition of record in the Registry of Deeds of said County, thence running south one hundred fifty (150) feet, thence east thirty-seven and one-half (37½) feet, thence north one hundred fifty (150) feet, thence west thirty-seven and one half (37½) feet, to the place of beginning. Being a part of Lots thirteen (13) to eighteen (18) in said Block.

THE power of gold is phenomenal. The discovery of gold in California gave population and a new life to the Pacific coast. A patriotic citizen of New York assumed the pious task, single handed, but meeting with financial disaster was compelled to abandon it.

What is said to be the most powerful electric light in existence has recently been put into operation in a lighthouse at Householm, on the dangerous coast of Jutland. It is of 2,000,000 candle power, and mounted on a tower about 200 feet high, and can be seen at a distance of thirty-five miles even in rainy weather. Besides the lights there are two great sirens, one about 650 yards and the other about three miles from the tower, which are sounded in foggy weather by electrical connection with the same currents that supply the light.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

The coroner's jury in the Tracy fire at Washington has rendered a verdict that the cause of the fire is unknown, and that the loss of life was largely due to its exceptionally rapid spread.

RECORD OF CASUALTIES.

At Staunton, Va., a locomotive ran into a hand car in the suburbs, killing two men and seriously injuring six others.

It is estimated that the loss by the university fire at Toronto will be $1,000,000. This includes the library, valued at $100,000, and all equipment, which was generally of the most modern style.

George Ellison, Charles Reynolds, brakemen, and Bruce Raversox, a boy, were killed in a collission between freight trains at Bairdstown, Ohio. Considerable stock was killed and the loss will be heavy.

Caspar Sprangler, on old-time resident of Helena, Mont., died at Placer from injuries inflicted by a premature blast of powder. He was a miner, and was working in one of his own mines at the time of the accident.

The large brick and stone building at the corner of Adams and Market streets Chicago owned by J. V. Farwell & Co., caught fire and before the flames could be subdued, the southern half of it was gutted. This portion of the building was occupied by Taylor Bros., dealers in hats and caps, and Work Bros., dealers in clothing and uniforms. Loss, about $450,000.

A fire broke out in the dry goods establishment of D. Davidson & Co., at Sioux City, Io., the fire department was out promptly in response to the alarm, but the flames were under such headway that one-half of the establishment was burned out and the other half gutted. The water and smoke drenched the large stock completely, and the loss is variously estimated from $25,000 to $30,000.

J. W. Kerr, a farming living 20 miles southeast of Wichita, Ka., was awakened and found his house on fire. He was in the second story, and on the lower floor were his three children. In the dense smoke he carried his wife to a window and dropped her to the ground. Kerr followed her and found that the children had perished. Everything was burned. He put his wife in a carriage and took her two miles to a neighbor's, They had only night clothes on, and the exposure, it is feared, will prove fatal to Mrs. Kerr.

SINFUL SIFTINGS.

It is rumored that the agent of a well known Liverpool lumber firm at Quebec is short in his accounts between $100,000 and $200,000. He has disappeared.

Suits have been entered in Chicago by the county of Cook against all the "boodlers" returned, escaped or compromised, for $200,000, in trespass.

Harry Lebos, a dissolute character of Reading, Pa., shot and fatally wounded his wife. Daniel Fisher, Mrs. Lebos' father, died of heart disease immediately after the shooting. Lebos escaped.

A. Barenther, a member of the firm of Hume & Barenther, attorneys at law of Oshkosh, Wis., has absconded with some $3,000 or $4,000 belonging to the elients of the firm. His family received word from Toronto, Ont., stating Barenther had arrived safely in the queen's dominion.

During a recess in the trial of William Mayne, on the trial of assault to murder Bertha Johnson, at San Diego, Cal., the prosecuting witness, shot Mayne three times, taking effect in the head, neck and shoulder, inflicting probably fatal wounds. Mayne was sitting in a chair in the court room when the woman passed back of him, turned quickly, drew a revolver from under her handkerchief and fired. She was arrested.

Dr. Marvin Fosdick was sitting by a table at his home in Pawpaw, when some unknown person fired both barrels of a double-barreled shot-gun through the window, the charge entering Fosdick's head, neck and shoulders. He still lives and may recover. The affair is surrounded in mysteries and no clue has yet been discovered to the perpetrator of the outrage.

Philip Brammer, a weak-minded and inoffensive farmer, at Bloomington, Ind., was seized, while on his way home, by masked men. They took him to an orchard, tied him to a tree and whipped him almost to insensibility. Brammer was left, covered with blood, lying on the ground and was nearly frozen before he recovered sufficiently to go home, where he arrived about daylight.

At New York some unknown person threw a bomb into an alley-way on Elizabeth street. The missle exploded blowing down a brick wall, and part of a wooden fence, and shattering a window in the rear house. No person was found in the place and nobody was injured. The police are investigating the matter.

Thomas Kane was hanged in the jail-yard at Toronto, Can., for the murder of his wife in November last. He met his fate resolutely. The murder for which Kane suffered the death penalty was of the most atrocious character. He and his wife had been drinking and quarreled. He attacked her, and, after pummeling her body in a shocking manner, knocked her brains out with a flat iron. The murderer was a plasterer.

The Cincinnati Cremation society has discharged its superintendent, Valentine Heiman, and he has been put under bond by a magistrate to answer to the charge of grand larceny. The articles stolen were coffins. At the crematory the bodies are removed from the casket, and it has been the understanding that the caskets were broken up and burned. Recently it has been discovered that, instead of burning them the thrifty superintendent has sold them, sometimes as low as $1 each, to thrifty village undertakers.

Bert Stoner, the settling clerk of Chicago, said to have cheated his employer, supposed to be the board of trade operators, B. P. Hutchinson, out of some thousands of dollars, was back to work in Mr. Hutchinson's office. The report was that some weeks ago after bilking "Old Hutch" by a ridiculously simple expedient, young Stoner suddenly took a journey to Canada. Upon what basis the clerk and the operator now resume their old relations could not be readily ascertained. Both of them flatly declined to talk.

Miss Mary Dietzen was shot at Hastings, Minn., by Louis Sommers, Both parties are respectable young people and aged eighteen and twenty-one years respectively. The cause assigned is jealousy, the young lady refusing to marry Sommers. Miss Dietzen was walking up the street with a young lady named Miss Emma Link, when they met Sommers, who, without saying a word, shot at her three times with effect, the bullets passing through her back and in the region of the heart. She expired almost instantly, after exclaiming "Oh, Lou." At last accounts the officers were in hunt of Sommers.

The body of Hiram Sawtelle was found in the woods near Lebanon, Maine. It had been decapitated and the head has not yet been discovered. When found the body was projecting from a poorly made grave and had a bullet in the heart. It was not three yards from where Officer Shields found the paper that was wrapped around the axe. The body was entirely naked with the exception of the feet which had on a pair of socks. Besides it was a lot of clotted blood, where the arms and head had been cut off. The brother of the deceased, Isaac Sawtelle, is charged with the murder, and is in jail he was visited by Wm. B. Gale, the well-known criminal lawyer of Boston, who will defend him. By his instruction the prisoner has thus far absolutely refused to say anything regarding the crime. Regarding his confederates there has been nothing ascertained. At least nothing has been made public. There is great excitement over the finding of the body, and search for the missing portions will be vigorously prosecuted.

FOREIGN CULLINGS.

At Pontivy, France, the vehicle conveying a bride and bridegroom and a number of their friends was upset, and the whole party was precipitated into the river. The bride and bridegroom and ten others were drowned.

IN GENERAL.

One hundred citizens of Point township, near Chillicothe, Ohio, tired of an epidemic of crime, organized into a jailing club and in one night made thirty-six arrests.

The contract for three and one-half miles of elevated railway in Chicago was let to Carnegie, Phipps & Co. of Pittsburg. The price will be between $800,000 and $1,000,000.

L. Edwin Dudley, secretary of the Citizens' Law and Order League of the United States, announces that the eighth annual meeting of the league will be held in Toronto, Can., on the 22d, 23d and 24th instant.

The Hekla Fire Insurance stockholders, at Madison, Wis., ratified the sale of that company's stock to the German Insurance Company, of St. Paul. The total amount of stock is $300,000, for which the purchaser pays $318,000. All Hekla risks will at once be reinsured in the St. Paul organization.

The New York Sun prints a five-column article on Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, entitled, "Is Talmage a humbug?" It dwells upon the preacher's advertising methods and describes his peculiar efforts to secure publicity for all his movements and sayings. It says he has acquired a large fortune by pursuing methods not hitherto considered proper in a clergyman, and accuses him of profaning sacred places for the selfish purposes.

A number of old soldiers are to leave Eldora, Iowa, in a few days for the Sioux reservation to take up some new land. They are all hired by a Mitchell (S. D.) capitalist, who will pay them a certain salary per month, and at the end of a year, or the time they have stayed on the land, will take the claim off their hands and allow them $500 for it. It is a very good chance for a number of these men, who are able to do much manual labor.

The boat St. Ignace, which runs between Mackinaw and St. Ignace point, carrying the train of the Michigan Central and Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic roads, is ice bound about three miles from Mackinaw City. There are sixty passengers aboard the train she carries. The passengers left the imprisoned train and accomplished a perilous journey of eight miles on the floating ice in order to reach the shore. They arrived in safety and reported the captain of the St. Ingace had given up all hope of moving his boat until the wind changes and breaks the ice. A party of five who started soon after those who reached Shore, have not yet been heard from.

James McKeen Arnold was released from the insane asylum, in California having developed no signs of insanity. Arnold is a young man who created a scene on the Union Pacific train near Pendleton, Ore., Dec. 3, and was arrested by the sheriff there on a telegraphic request of the railway conductor. When arrested he had a revolver and a knife in his hands, but did not use them. Arnold is a member of a well known Philadelphia family, and contends that he has been persecuted by Eastern relatives, who had tried to incarcerate him in an insane asylum. He claims that the influence of his relatives caused him to be taken out of Oregon without a trial to San Francisco where he was examined before a commissioner of insanity and incarcerated without any evidence in open court, and that until within the past week he has not been permitted to notify his friends of his whereabouts.

The story of a plucky 4-year-old baby comes from Oskaloosa, Iowa. It is the child of Mrs. Wilson, and while playing about a deep well covered by loose boards, fell in. The well is 30 feet deep, and contained 10 feet of water. The mother saw the child fall, and frantically grabbing a clothes line, lowered it into the well. The child grasped the line, but of course, could not hold on tight enough to be drawn out, so the mother tied her end above, "Will Pet hold on tight till mamma runs for papa?" tremblingly cried the mother to her little one. "Ess" came a brave little sob from below. The mother hurried away and soon returned with the father and several other men, who, after much difficulty, rescued the the child from its chilly bath. The child was almost unconscious from cold when taken out, but had bravely clung to the clothes line, all the time holding its head above water

Col. Taylor Called at Last.

New York Sun.

When the first weekly in Washington Territory was established the editor, who was an Ohio printer, made a break in the first issue to establish his reputation as a dangerous man to fool with. He was surrounded by a rough crowd and he realized that the proper thing to do was to put himself in shape to be sized up according to Hoyle. To effect this he led off with an article abusive of Col. Taylor. The colonel was an imaginary individual, and it was therefore safe to call him a liar and a coward, and to declare that if he ever appeared in town he would be horsewhipped up and down the street. Every issue for two months contained a hit at Col. Taylor, and he was scored so vigorously, and the editor seemed so anxious for some sort of shooting match with him, that "the boys" treated him with that deference always accorded to a fearless man.

When anybody inquired who the colonel was he was informed that he was a desperado of the worst type, and that he had solemnly sworn to have the editor's life. He was never exactly located or identified, but was always dared to come in like a man and have it out.

One day, just after an issue in which Col. Taylor was stigmatized as a white-livered coyote and defied to a duel with bowie knives in a dark room a stranger came slouching into the office, looked about him for a while with curiosity, and then said to the editor:

"Well, I'm here."

"Yes, I see, but what for?"

"I'm Col. Taylor!"

"No!"

"Him and nobody else, You've been lighting into me like wildcats for a long time past, and I haven't been saying a word. I've got tired of it, however, and now it's got to stop!"

"My dear sir, the Col. Taylor mentioned in—"

"Pull yer gun!" interrupted the colonel, as he pulled his.

"But, sir, I beg to assure you that"—

"Git down on yer knees!"

"Now eat that!"

The colonel took from his pocket a lump of the clay and tossed it on the floor, and he stood there with leveled pistol until the last crumb of it was devoured. Then he put up his weapon and turned to go, saying:

"Next time you open on me I'll come in with a whole bag full of it, and I may conclude to drive the last of it in with a bullet! Go fur the rest of 'em all you want to, but when you strike the name Col. Taylor, handle it with care!"

And inside of a week the affair leaked out, and so many men came up to lick the editor, and so many did lick him, that he jumped the plant one night and was never heard of again.

Too Smart.

In the "dry goods emporium." Mr. Figg—Well, have you selected that 5 cents' worth of ribbon yet? Mrs. Figg—No, not yet. Did you get tired of waiting outside? Mr. Figg—Oh, no. I have been around to the office and cleared $700 in a real estate deal since you came in here. Mrs. Figg (calmly)—Indeed! Then we will just buy that new silk dress I have been wanting so long. And Mr. Figg stood on one foot and reflected all to himself that there were times when a man got really and entirely too smart for his own good.—Terre Haute Express.

MINNESOTA EDITORS

They Meet in St. Paul in State Convention and Transact Business.

An Interesting Gathering and Much Done that was Valuable and Pleasant.

The twenty-third annual convention of the Minnesota Editors and Publishers' association assembled at the chamber of commerce in St. Paul for business, Joel P. Heatwole, of the Northfield News, the president, occupying the chair. There were present about one hundred and fifty members, representing the principal papers in the state. Immediately upon calling the meeting to order Mr. Heatwole began the reading of the president's annual address, of which the following is an abstract:

"I regard the local newspaper as one of the strongest moral agencies of modern times. The great weakness of the country newspaper of to-day is, that there is no fixed or recognized standard for admission to the profession, and, therefor, it often becomes the common plunder-ground of the members of all the other professions. If a doctor, clergyman or lawyer fails to secure adequate support from the public, he at once gets types and press and blossoms into a full-fledged country journalist.

"It seems to me there is too little recognition among the local newspaper fraternity of the fact that they are the monitors and teachers of the communities which give them support. I would remark that no calling among men needs a more painstaking apprenticeship than that of weekly journalism. In no business is the technical field wider, or the details to be mastered more complicated. The country journalist must be printer and pressman; have a fair knowledge of the stationer's business; be thoroughly posted in politics; know individually all or nearly all of the people of his town; understand human nature in all its phases, and finally will fail unless he knows the science of finance in all its minute details better than the banker. He ought to be a fairly good writer, have the instinct and the cheek of the reporter, that perfect independence which is only born of clear conscience and perfect rectitude of motives which under no possible combination of circumstances would place his opinions in the public market for sale to the highest bidder. The local newspaper should be clean, printed clearly with good type, and pure morally, so that its influence will always be good in the community. Indulgence in coarse wit and slanderous allusions bespeak of low moral tone in a community that supports no less than in the man who publishes the local newspaper. Next to cleanliness and courtesy should be reckoned the virtue of reliability and truthfulness. Of course, those of us who conduct partisan newspapers will readily understand that the demands of party frequently interfere seriously with our highest individual conception of entire rectitude. Who of you has not been compelled to support, in obedience to the command of the convention or caucus, some man whom you believed to be unfitted for the position? It makes no difference; there is only one way over the difficulty. Take your medicine. And, after all, this may be the best thing to do, for perhaps the voice of the majority is more wise and judicious than any one individual's sense of right or wrong. The editor should be cautious that he does not mistake spleen for virtue, and the virulent assaults of a disordered liver for the whispering of the deity within his bosom. The manager of a newspaper should mercilessly exclude purely personal matters, and not base his excuse for acting in opposition to his friends and party associates upon the purely arbitrary and altogether selfish axiom, 'I own this paper.' There is too little profit to-day in the newspaper field, and the poverty of our profession is clearly traceable to bad men who fasten themselves upon our honorable guild."

W. J. C. Kenyon, general passenger agent of the Burlington road, the accredited editor and publisher of the Burlington Hustler, read a paper upon the "Relation of the General Passenger Agent to the Public." He asserted that the country was overrun with editorial mileage, and hinted that the editors who sold this mileage were known and recorded in the confidential memoranda of the railroads. At the same time, he frankly stated that many editors gave very much more advertising than they got mileage in return for.

A general discussion of this mileage question followed, in which nearly every one agreed that when an editor put his name to the agreement upon the mileage book that he would not transfer any of the mileage he was bound to keep that agreement. One leading member of the association said that he knew two or three prominent editors in the state who sold their mileage and boldly said they owned it and had a right to sell it. He had accidentally seen the confidential memoranda of one of the railroads, and the names of two of these editors were recorded thereon.

George N. Lamphere read a paper upon the "Business Management." It was full of practical suggestions. It mattered not how ably a newspaper was edited with poor business management a paper could not succeed.

H. E. Hoard's address was upon partisan journalism. The gentleman contended that no man owns his newspaper. "He may be in possession and control, own the office, types, presses, material and stock. He may control its issue, dictate its course, sell its advertising space, and sell or transfer this interest, possession and control; but he is not the sole owner of the paper. The public is a part owner, and its interest is no less certain and positive because no papers are drawn or recorded that establish the fact of co-partnership." A newspaper should treat subjects on all sides rather than in a partisan way.

A heated discussion followed, which was taken part in by nearly every one. Several contended that a man owned his own newspaper and was at liberty to run it to suit himself, so long as he kept within the bounds of decency.

Mr. J. A. Johnson was called upon for a paper upon the "Law of Libel," in the absence of D. Sinclair, to whom the subject was originally assigned. Mr. Johnson had nothing prepared in writing, and made only a brief humorous talk upon the subject.

President Heatwole appointed the following committees: Committee on resolutions, L. P. Hunt, G. N. Lamphere, Ed C. Grotty; delegates, Irving Todd, W. B. Mitchell, A. B. Allen, H. E. Hoard and W. G. Day.

Mr. Kenyon informed the association that if they would secure for St. Paul the National Editorial association for 1891 the Burlington road would carry all editors and publishers coming via Chicago to St. Paul and return free of charge.

BANQUET AT THE WINDSOR.

In the evening a banquet was given to the editors and publishers at the Windsor hotel by the Northwestern Newspaper Union, A. N. Kellogg Newspaper Co., Minnesota Type foundry, Marder, Luse & Co., American Press association and Wright, Barrett & Stillwell. Many of the wives and daughters of the editors and publishers were present, and it was pronounced the largest and most brilliant social event in the history of the association. H. P. Hall was toastmaster. Hon. Ignatius Donnelly responded to "What I Know About Journalism," and made one of his characteristic side-splitting speeches. He began with a tribute to the ladies, and said that the Lord, before making Eve, must have been making angels, and left some of the clay sticking to the board, too much for one angel and not enough for two, and in experimenting with it Eve was evolved as a natural consequence.

"Independence, Now and Forever," was assigned to Mr. John A. Johnson, of the St. Peter Herald, as Mr. Hall said, because he lived in the city where there was an insane asylum, and yet had the independence to criticise it. Mr. Johnson was equal to the occasion and made a very humorous effort. Maj. T. M. Newson, he of ready tongue, followed upon "The Power of the Press." "What I Know About County Printing" brought W. B. Mitchell, of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, to his feet. "Looking Backward" afforded Mr. H. A. Castle an opportunity to be very amusing, also instructive, to the company. Rev. Dr. S. G. Smith, and others, contributed to the fun and edification of the occasion.

ORGANIZING AS A CORPORATION.

Editor Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News, strongly advocated the formation of a stock company. One of the chief benefits of such an organization would be to secure advertising at good rates. The convention was not unanimous in favor of the plan, but its friends were strong enough to have a committee appointed to report a plan at the next meeting. The committee consists of Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News; W. B. Mitchell, of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, and H. G. Day, of the Albert Lea Standard.

A paper on "The Mechanical Department of a Newspaper" was read by David Ramaley. H. P. Hall read a paper on "The Political Emoluments of Newspapers."

The committee on resolutions offered its report, the first resolution creating quite a commotion. In substance it denounced the practice on the part of newspaper men of selling their railway mileage. Many of those present opposed the resolution on the ground that it reflected upon the editors. It was claimed by some of the opponents that most of the advertising tickets on the market were given out directly by the roads themselves. The resolution was finally laid on the table.

Joel P. Heatwole, H. P. Hall and W. J. C. Kenyon were appointed a committee to examine into the feasibility of taking an excursion through the South in connection with the meeting next winter. Resolutions were adopted declaring the rates charged by express companies to be unreasonably high and calling upon the legislature to remedy the matter by law; expressing appreciation of the National Education association, and declaring the government to be guilty of unjust discrimination in printing return cards on envelopes. The Minnesota delegation in congress were asked to work for the discontinuance of the latter custom. A resolution endorsing Maj. T. M. Newson for a consular position was adopted. The resolution of E. V. Smalley providing for the establishment of a bureau of immigration was indefinitely postponed.

The committee on delegates to the National Editorial convention, to be held in Boston in June, reported the following delegates, who were elected:

Irving Todd, Hastings Gazette; W. B. Mitchell, St. Cloud Journal-Press; G. S. Pease, Anoka Union; H. E. Hoard, Montevideo Leader; E. H Dearth, Le Sueur News; William Hinds, Shakopee Argus; W. C. Brown; Wells Advocate; A. C. Bellyea, Elbow Lake Herald; A. F. Ingalls, Pine Island Journal. Alternates, H. A. Castle, F. S. Verbeck, J. S. Pinney, H. P. Hall of St. Paul, and Fred N. Van Duzee, of the Luverne News.

Mrs. Lila M. Chapman, of the St. James Journal; Miss Anna E. Rathburn, Pelican Rapids Pioneer; and Miss O'Brien, Atwater Press, were elected active members of the association without fees.

President, L. P. Hunt, of the Mankato Free Press; first vice president, George N. Lanphere, Moorhead News; second vice president, Ed A. Paradis, Midway News; third vice president, Gen. S. P. Jennison, Red Wing Republican; recording secretary, E. H. Dearth, Le Sueur News; corresponding secretary, T. M. Newson, St. Paul; treasurer, David Ramaley, St. Paul. Executive Committee—S. F. Verbeck, St. Paul, chairman; F. C. Gottrey, Pine City Pioneer; and H. E. Hoard, Montevideo Leader.

The convention voted thanks to the officers for their work, H. P. Hall for work on the executive committee, to the chamber of commerce for the use of the room for the convention and to the St. Paul publishers for the banquet at the Windsor. It was resolved to meet in 1891 in St. Paul or Minneapolis.

After adjournment the editors paid a visit to the historical society rooms. Afterward the Pioneer Press building was inspected by a majority of the visitors, all of them expressing delight and surprise at the magnitude and convenience of the edifice.

HALF-BREEDS HAD A GRUDGE.

A Hardware Man Unmercifully Beaten in Fort Pierre.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram.—Boomers continued to cross the river all night last night, and the scene at Fort Pierre has been very exciting. Building was done by the light of the lantern, and a large number of fights took place. About midnight a fight took place between a number of half-breed bullies and a fellow called Jesse James, who took over a load of hardware and started a store in a tent. The half-breeds have a grudge against him, and assaulted him. He was unmercifully beaten about the head and face with the butt end of a six-shooter. His nose was smashed and he was dangerously wounded in the head. He was carried over to Pierre this morning in an unconscious condition. Revolvers were flourished and firing continued all night, but no one was shot. About twenty-five houses were up by this morning. The citizens have formed a vigilance committee, and claim-jumpers will be seriously dealt with.

FURTHER COMPLICATIONS.

A man named Wolgemath is also badly hurt, and a number of others were sandbagged and hurt in the general melee. A A public meeting was held at Fort Pierre, and committees were appointed to organize the county and city, and for various other purposes, including one to confer with Northwestern railway regarding the conflicting claims of the road and settlers who now occupy every foot of the mile square. A vigilance committee went to a widow named Evans, who had moved a house on to a lot which, she claimed, had been jumped by a man named McKee, and ordered her to move the building at once or they would do it for her. She defied them, and to-day a mob bodily lifted the house off and set it in the street. A car containing prominent Northwestern officials came in to-night, and they will at once take means to enforce their claims as owners of the mile square. This will still farther complicate matters, and will surely lead to trouble. Men who were at the opening of Oklahoma say the disorder on that occasion was small compared with what can now be seen here.

WANT A VOICE.

Strike of Miners Over the Appointment of a Mine Physician.

HURLEY, Wis., Special Telegram.—The entire force of miners at the Aurora mine, 400 in number, struck to-day, the trouble being over the appointment of the mine physician. It is customary in the iron country for each mine to appoint a physician, who receives $1 a month from each employe. Doctors Thomas and McCabe held this position at the Aurora for a number of years until a couple of weeks ago, when General Manager Dickerman discharged them, substituting Dr. McLeod. This appointment was anything but satisfactory to the miners, who claim that as they pay the physicians, they were entitled to some voice in the matter. A number of meetings were held, and a committee of miners was appointed to wait on the management and request that Doctors Thomas and McCabe be reinstated. The management, however, refused to make any concessions, and the trouble culminated in a strike to-day. The miners held a secret session this afternoon, the result of which could not be learned. Work at the Aurora is entirely suspended, only enough men being at work to keep it clear of water. Threats of violence have been made against any one who attempts to work. If the matter is not settled to-morrow the trouble is likely to be very serious, as it may result in a general strike on the Gogebic against the present system of employing mine physicians.

MONTANA'S MINES.

EXtract From the Annual Report of the Mining Inspector.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram.—State Mining Inspector Swallow will say, among other things, in his first report on the mines of Montana:

More than 12,000 mining claims have been located in Montana under the mining laws of the United States. Probably one-quarter of that number have been so developed as to show the kind and size and general character of the veins, and thus enable one to form some safe opinion of the quantity and richness of the ore and what machinery is best adapted to work it; and enough work has been done on these to show they are bright prospects, and to give them a market value. There are fully 2,000 mines so well opened, and show ore enough to place them on a paying basis by erecting mills or furnaces for reducing the ores, or by shipping them to works already erected. But comparatively few of this great number have really been put on such paying basis. And yet these few are wonderfully productive. In fact we have, with very few exceptions, merely scratched the surfaces of our thousand mines, and yet they have for several years yielded so much gold, silver, copper and lead as to place Montana at the head of the mining states.

Firemen Injured.

CHICAGO, Special.—The large brick and stone building at the corner of Adams and Market streets, owned by the great dry goods house of J. V. Farwell & Co., caught fire early this morning, and before the flames could be subdued the southern half of it was gutted. This portion of the building was occupied by Taylor Brothers, dealers in hats and caps, and Work Brothers, dealers in clothing and uniforms. A heavy fire wall, which runs runs through the middle of the structure, prevented the spread of the flames to the northern half of the building, which is filled with the heavy wholesale stock of dry goods of the Messrs. Farwell. Loss, $475,000; fully covered by insurance. William Salander fell from a ladder striking on his head on the stone pavement. He was terribly cut, his skull fractured, and he will probably die. John Meyers fell with the crashing in of the third floor, and was dragged out unconscious. It is thought he will recover. Three other firemen were badly cut about the face and hands by flying glass, but not dangerously hurt.

May Give a Bonus.

ROCHESTER, Special, Telegram. There was a joint railroad meeting of the townships of Pleasant Grove, Marion and High Forest to discuss the matter of giving the Winona & Southwestern a bonus. Messrs. Simpson & Lamberton, of the Winona & Southwestern, were present besides several from Rochester. Almost all of High Forest expressed themselves as in favor of granting them a bonus of probably $10,000, and they will undoubtedly ask Marion and Pleasant Grove for about $3,000 to $5,000 apiece. This move is now being opposed by many Rochester men, as it will cut off some of the best tributary country of this city. No definite proposition was submitted, but probably there will be in a short time.

Rumored Stickney-Hill Combine.

MASON CITY, Iowa, Special Telegram.—It is rumored here that the Stickney and Hill railroad interests in this territory are to combine. The Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City line is to push through from Manly over ten miles leased from the Central and connect here with the Mason City & Fort Dodge, giving it an excellent south and southwest opening. What effect this deal would have on the Winona & Southwestern, an extension of the Lackawanna system, is not known, but it is thought they also will push through to this city.

WILL MAKE A TEST.

Arrests Likely to be Made for the Violation of the Montana Lottery Law.

The Louisiana Concern Will Try to Purchase the Montana Lottery Company.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram.—It is possible that in short time some arrests will be made for the violation of the lottery law, and a test case made either in the Silver Bow or Lewis and Clarke courts. It is a well known fact that lotteries are openly conducted in Montana, and the business of selling lottery tickets is extensively carried on, though both appear to be prohibited by law. Section 2, article 19 of the Montana constitution reads:

The legislative assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets in this state.

This would in itself seem to prohibit the conducting of lotteries or sale of tickets, as it is generally conceded that the constitution repeals all territorial laws in conflict with its provisions. At the last session of the territorial legislature a law was passed prohibiting lotteries in Montana. This law contains one section providing that lotteries existing prior to the passage of the act, and having advertised drawings to take place after May 1, 1889, the date at which the law took effect, should on that date place their affairs in the hands of a receiver appointed by the court, who would finish up the business. Last May the Montana lottery placed their business in the hands of a receiver and have been continuing it in that way ever since, claiming, it is said, that the law permits this. The intent of the law was evidently to prohibit all lotteries and not to allow but one drawing after the first of last May. If the lottery company are right they will be allowed to operate until further legislation on the subject. What lends interest to this question at present is that it is reported that the Louisiana lottery schemers, who were knocked out in North Dakota, are negotiating to buy out the Montana Lottery company so as to gain a foothold in this state. This is but a rumor and lacks confirmation, yet many believe it in view of the boast of the lottery schemers that if they were defeated in North Dakota they would try to work Montana. Further developments are expected in a few days.

MAY REQUEST SENATOR CASEY'S PRESENCE.

BISMARCK, N. D., Special Telegram.—Chairman Robinson, of the senate investigating committee, has not yet returned, but is expected back in time for a meeting of the committee to-morrow. One of the members said to-day that the committee was considering the question of requesting the presence of United States Senator Casey as a witness.

ITS NEXT MOVE.

NEW ORLEANS, Special—The Louisiana Lottery company is making a desperate effort to retain its corporate life. It has failed to obtain a charter from North Dakota, and its next move, it is said, will be an enormous bribe to the Louisiana legislature for a renewal of its present charter, which will expire in two years hence. Its proposition will be to pay the entire state debt, amounting to from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. The lottery is earning $250,000 a month, or $3,000,000 per year net. Many prominent Louisianians fear that the bribe may be accepted.

CAUSED EXCITEMENT.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., Special Telegram.—Considerable excitement was caused to-day by a report that the Indians occupying the land at Lower Brule, sought by the town siters, had concluded to abandon the land as a result of a proposition made them by the town siters. If the report is true as it undoubtedly is, coming from a source considered absolutely reliable, it will simplify matters somewhat and probably result in a continuance of work on the part of the town siters. There is considerable apprehension, however, as to the position the interior department will take in cases where certificates have been issued the Indians for lands now occupied by them under the severalty act, as to whether the certificates could now be canceled or not. Many buildings belonging to the town siters are still upon the ground, and the troops stationed on the ground have not as yet resorted to the extreme of removing or destroying them. If the proposition of the Indians is accepted it will still leave the matter in a decidedly complicated condition, as there are many conflicting interests between the boomers occupying the ground, and a great deal of confidence would have to be reposed in the Indians, as by the Sioux bill and demand the land any time before the expiration of a year. The Milwaukee Railroad company has taken action in regard to preventing settlement on the lands granted it by the Sioux bill which had previously been treated for by the company with the Indians, which will have the effect of removing again those settlers at Lower Brule, who on Saturday moved their buildings on the company's ground in order to avoid the troops. It does not affect the settlers at Lower Brule, however, so deeply as it does those persons on the tract on the east side of the river immediately adjoining Chamberlain on the north. Here a large number of people settled in 1885, when thrown open to settlement by President Arthur, and they have since remained there and in many instances established and built up large and comfortable homes, expecting to take advantage of the town site act, which allows each settler a two-acre tract. They were unable, however, to secure a filing, as the land was immediately withdrawn from the market by President Cleveland. The settlers claim to have a strong case, and many state to your correspondent that they will at least remain upon the land until reimbursed for their trouble and outlay, which was guaranteed them by the Sioux bill, but regarding which no action has as yet been taken by the department. Settlement on the lands west of the river goes steadily on, there being no diminution in the number to-day over previous days. The crossing has again become perfectly secure, the past few days being rather cold the ice bridge in the Missouri has frozen firm.

INDIANS CANNOT SELL.

MITCHELL, S. D., Special Telegram—Col. John H. King and F. M. Goodykoontz are in the city, en route to Chamberlain from Washington, where they have been for several weeks working for the opening of the reservation. Goodykoontz said there could be no doubt that the settlers, townsiters and all others on the river front either above or below Chamberlain would have to vacate. That land belonged to Indians, and the government would protect them in their right. Col. King and himself had been given positively to understand that before leaving Washington by the department of the interior. The talk about Indians selling their rights in the land was nonsense. They could not do that for the next twenty-five years, even if they should want to. Goodykoontz and King are accompanied by Capt. Henry Wahly, of the interior department, who is sent out by Commissioner Graff to open up the new land office at Chamberlain.

NOT OF ONE MIND.

Difference of Opinion as to a Reduction in the Revenues.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—The committee on ways and means are finding it very difficult to agree on any other reduction of the revenues than that to be accomplished by the repeal of the tobacco tax. The majority of the committee are in favor of free sugar, but they meet with opposition in their party in the house, which threatens the defeat of their bill if it includes this item. They are having a deal of trouble over this question, but one of the most perplexing features of the situation is that there is considerable doubt about the fiscal affairs of the government admitting of any reduction of revenue at this time. The regular appropriations and the differences for the ensuing year will amount to about $430,000,000, and the estimated revenues for that year are but $450,000,000. The passage of the Blair bill, or any of the proposed general pension bills, would wipe out this difference of $20,000,000 and leave a shortage. If any of these bills become law, all idea of reducing the revenue must be abandoned, and the only reductions of duties practicable would be such as would operate to increase revenue by encouraging importations. The friends of sugar in the house opposing the repeal of the duty propose to accept a reduction of between 20 and 30 per cent as a compromise, urging that the government cannot spare the revenue which would be wiped out by putting it on the free list, and it is possible that there may be a compromise on this basis. It is also claimed that the repeal of the tobacco tax is probable unless it is found that the revenue cannot be spared. This is based on the fact that certain Southern Republicans have said that they would not support any tariff bill if the tax on tobacco was not removed. To this proposition the Northwestern members strongly dissent. They will not, if they can help it, vote for any bill that repeals the tobacco tax. A great many Western men are of the opinion that the revenue derived from the tobacco tax may be profitably expended in improving rivers and harbors and erecting necessary public buildings. The necessary reductions of the surplus, many claim, should be made upon the necessaries rather than the luxuries, even if it would allow more importations. The majority of the committee will find it a serious task to frame a satisfactory tariff bill.

BESTED KILRAIN.

NEW ORLEANS, Special.—J. J. Corbett, teacher of the Olympian club at San Francisco, bested Jake Kilrain in a six-round contest for a purse of $3,500, at the Southern Athletic club rooms to-night. Kilrain had agreed to knock Corbett out in six rounds but was outfought at every point. Corbett is a giant youngster, well educated, ambitious, and is regarded in the West as the coming world's champion. He has never been defeated. Kilrain was in fine trim up to Thursday night, but the death of James at Dallas, Tex., unmanned him somewhat, according to Prof. Muldoon. Benziah, who was implicated in the James affair, defeated Johnson in four rounds. Mike Cleary whipped Mike Smith, the Cincinnati heavy weight, in two rounds. The club rooms were especially fitted up for the matches, and a large number of spectators were present. Kilrain stated his weight varied between 201 and 205 pounds. Corbett tipped the scales at 183 pounds. Although Corbett is six feet one and one-half inches tall, he looked a mere boy compared with his adversary. Muldoon and Cleary seconded Kilrain and Tony Danforth and Mike Smito were behind Corbett. George Scott was bottleholder and E. B. Violett referee. Both men sparred for an opening, watching each other's style. Corbett carried his left loosely, while his right held guard. Kilrain tried his rushing tactics, but Corbett was too lively for him. The referee decided at the end of the sixth round that Corbett had outfought Kilrain throughout. Kilrain says his defeat by Corbett is due to the fact that all in-fighting was barred. Corbett had the longer reach and could tip and get away. Kilrain would like to box him ten rounds with five-ounce gloves, but would prefer a finish fight with light gloves.

SMITH ALL RIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—The North Dakota delegation was surprised to-day by the withdrawal of the name of John A. Percival for receiver of the Devils Lake, N. D., land office. They knew nothing of the matter until the message came to the senate with the list of appointments. Percival was confirmed Friday last, but Secretary Noble went to the senate and asked that the confirmation be reconsidered, which was done. To-day followed the withdrawal. Receiver Smith, the present incumbent of the office, was among the number who were recently charged with being short in their accounts and Percival was appointed to succeed him. Since then the secretary has been informed that Smith was all right and by way of vindication wanted to prove his innocence and then resign. The secretary, in order to put Smith right, has held up Percival and continued Smith. Senator Pierce says:

Mr. Smith was removed by the secretary of the interior on a report of a clerk that he was short in his accounts, and Mr. Percival was appointed, the latter having been recommended for the place when a vacancy should occur. It now turns out that the clerk in charge of accounts was wrong, and that the removal of Mr. Smith under such charges was an injustice. I would not approve of such an act, and I am sure that Mr. Percival would not. The latter's nomination, therefore, has been withdrawn, so that whatever may be done in the future may be entirely independent of the charge preferred against Mr. Smith. The secretary telegraphed the facts to-day to Mr. Percival.

RECEIVED A REPLY.

Parnell Told That the Commission Will Be Thanked.

LONDON, Special.—In the house of commons to-day Mr. Parnell asked for information as to the government's intentions regarding the report of the special Parnell commission. Smith, the government leader, said that the government intended to ask the house to adopt the report and to thank the commission for its just and impartial conduct. Mr. Smith's answer was greeted with cheers, counter-cheers and laughter. T. W. Russell attacked the Parnellites, saying that they now bespattered praise on the Gladstonites whom before they had covered with the worst epithets. Thus, Earl Spencer was charged with murder and every effort made to blacken his character. Mr. O'Brien, interrupting Mr. Russell, said: "I certainly would not let any man say that outside of this house." Continuing, Mr. Russell said the charge he made against the Parnellites was certainly true. Now the Parnellites embraced Earl Spencer. The opposition asserted that Mr. Balfour had enforced the coercion law with needless severity. Probably the press clause in the Crimes act was unwise, but in other respects coercion had assisted to restore and maintain order in Ireland.

STOLE HIS WIFE.

Sad Experience of an Alabama Man Among Mormons.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Special.—George Preston of Clay county, Ala., has returned home from Utah, where he went ten months ago as a convert to Mormonism. He tells a thrilling story of the treatment of converts by the Mormons when they reach Utah. He says the women converts are married to elders, who in most cases have three or four wives already, and if they offer the slightest protest or resistance they are flogged or otherwise punished until they submit. The men who have been promised homes and farms are compelled to give up all the money they have to the church, and then they are turned adrift to live as best they can. Preston and his young wife were converted to Mormonism about a year ago by two elders who were proselyting in Clay county. They sold all they had and went to Utah. Preston says his wife was stolen from him and carried to Salt Lake City, he thinks, but he was never able to find any trace of her. He was then by threats compelled to give the church all the money he had, about $200, and then told he must look out for himself. He started home three months ago and worked his way back.

LAND DECISIONS.

A Number of Cases Disposed of in the Interior Department.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—Assistant Secretary Chandler, of the interior department, to-day reversed the general land office decision in the case of Berend Loers vs. James M. Way, the contest involving Way's timber culture entry for land in section 26, township 100, range 55, Yankton, S. D., district. The general land office had canceled Way's entry. The assistant secretary overrules this. The assistant secretary affirmed the order of the land office canceling E. W. Patton's entry of southeast quarter section 17, township 16, range 67, in the Mitchell, S. D., district. He also affirmed the general land office decision canceling the homestead entry of B. E. Crane for the northwest quarter of section 24, township 107, range 57 in the Mitchell, S. D., district. Secretary Noble modified the order of the land commissioner in the case of Frank E. Mease, allowing him to file supplementary proof for his pre-emption cash entry of the southwest quarter of section 26, township 105, range 161, Mitchell district. The secretary affirmed the decision of the land office denying the motion of Horatio Wales, Jr., assignee of C. G. Holbrook, for a review of a decision canceling the latter's entry in section 1, township 104, range 59 in the Mitchell district.

CAMPAIGN PLANS.

Rumor That Cleveland's Friends Will Buy the St. Paul Globe.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—An interesting bit of gossip is afloat here to-day. Daniel Lamont, the president's private secretary during the last administration, was here yesterday, and, in conversation with a friend, said that a proposition was made to some of the Democratic editors at the publishers' meeting in New York last week to purchase the St. Paul Globe. Mr. Lamont said that it was considered good property and would be a good chance for some one with an ambition to try journalism in that city. Mr. Lamont's statement, coupled with the fact that he is supposed to know as nearly as any one the campaign plans of Cleveland's friends, has started the gossip that Cleveland's supporters are already on the war path and that the purchase of certain newspaper plants to boom his candidacy early in the game is a part of the battle they have mapped out.

The First Death.

TOULON, Special.—The squadron, with the exception of the Yorktown, stood out of the harbor of Port Mahone and shaped a course for France. The Yorktown was left behind to bury its dead—the first death in the squadron —Sergeant Crane, who succumbed to a long and painful attack of pneumonia, superinduced by influenza. He commanded the Yorktown's marine guard, and was respected by all he came in contact with. He was a veteran of the civil war and was attached to the marine corps for over twenty years. Sergeant Crane was a native of Maine, a Free Mason and about forty-five years of age.

Agreeable People.

We all know people whom it is pleasant to meet; people from whom we are sure to receive a smile, a kind word, a cordial hand-shake, or some other token of good-will. When one is depressed in spirits, or, as the common saying is, "blue" the meeting with a genial, merry-hearted friend has a magical effect; indeed, I have known the encounter with such a person to turn the whole current of one's life.

Agreeability is dependent upon many conditions; it may be inherent, it may be the result of judicious early education, or of pleasant surroundings, or of a happy combination of circumstances, but all will agree that it is a desirable quality, and whether inherent or not, should be carefully cultivated. There are people whose mighty efforts to be agreeable are so distressing as to defeat their object. Such people should bear in mind that agreeability must proceed from the heart, and in a grown person is the result of continued practice. One feels so comfortable after having said or done something to brighten the pathway of another, that it pays one's self to be agreeable.

Some people allow all their little annoyances to affect their conduct toward others, whether their unfortunate friends are to blame or not. I was once visiting a charming family. All its members, with one exception, were interesting and agreeable. The only son of the house was in business in the town in which they lived. If his affairs had moved prosperously through the day he came home in a pleasant, entertaining mood, but if anything had annoyed him he was outrageously disagreeable and rude, no matter how many guests were present. The discomfiture of his mother and sisters may well be imagined; indeed, as the dinner hour approached they were in a state of nervousness which disappeared immediately if the "tyrant" came in with a bright face; otherwise it continued until he relieved us of his disagreeable presence. If the fact had not been so positively demonstrated to me, I would not have believed it possible that one disagreeable person could have counteracted the influence of four agreeable people. I believe that the young man's disposition was the result of continued indulgence by his mother and sisters. He had tyrannized over them for years, and had become a powerful despot in the household.

"Tired and cross" is a common expression, and most of us know what it means. A friend of mine, a most agreeable woman, says that when she finds herself getting "tired and cross," she takes a nap, a bath, a walk, or a drive, goes to see some one whose walk in life is less pleasant than her own—does anything different from the work that has tried and worried her. In this way she preserves health and temper, governs well her children, and keeps her entire household in a state of peace and happiness.

Many parents do not realize that in training their children a regard for others should be instilled into their minds. A spoiled, selfish child may be very dear to its parents, but after the parents have passed away the child has become a disagreeable man or woman, what disinterested parties will tolerate the selfish, tyrannical ways of such a person?—American Agriculturist for February.

Newspaper Women.

Brooklyn Times.

The number of newspaper women in New York increases steadily. A year ago or thereabouts a young woman anxious for journalistic laurels applied through the medium of a friend to Amos J. Cummings for a chance to shine a little for some small section of the world through the columns of the Evening Sun. Mr. Cummings swore a warm-hued and picturesque and withal good-natured though decisive oath that in his day there should be no woman bothering about the office of the Evening Sun. It is now the day of Mr. Brisbane, and under the new regime a more fortunate young woman—a very clever one, formerly of the staff of the Cleveland Leader—has found an opportunity. An appreciative part of my mail is made up of letters from girls who ask if there is any future for women in newspaperdom. There are many thing to be thought of by a woman who would apprentice herself to journalism; temperament, versatility and the power to live harmoniously in a newspaper office, which is a little world of its own. A girl may have every qualification, but she will not be successful if she makes herself felt as a restraint by trying to impose on busy men the formalities of parlor etiquette. She must have a good constitution to start with, a clear conscience and good nerves, so that she can be self-controlled. After a certain amount of literary talent she need sheer common sense more than anything.

The Miracle Gun.

The German press is discussing at length the merits of a new French repeating air rifle called the "miracle gun." The rifle was invented by M. Paul Giffard in Paris, the original projector of the Parisian pneumatic post. It is described thus: "The weapon is light, much lighter than any of the army rifles now in use. It resembles the magazine gun in that steel cartridge about a span and a half long and as thick as a man's thumb is attached to the one barrel by means of a screw. This cartridge contains 300 shots, which can be discharged as rapidly or slowly as a man desires. Since neither powder or any other explosive, but only compressed and liquified air, supplies the expelling force, no smoke and no flash accompany the discharge. Only a short, sharp, low report is heard as the ball leaves the cartridge. At the recent trial the ball traveled with wonderful accuracy and penetrated deep into the wall of the shooting room. As soon as one cartridge is emptied of its 300 shots, another cartridge can be screwd on the gun in the twinkling of an eye. M. Giffard says that the 300 shots in a cartridge can be produced at a cost of about 2½ cents. The gun itself can be manufactured for about $5."

Reading Faces.

It showed her appreciative temperament when a lady told with triumph the other day of such a pretty compliment paid her unconsciously. She said it happened three other persons with herself were approaching a crossing where a neat looking servant was standing, evidently sorely perplexed as to locality. With shrewd eyes the anxious domestic examined each lady's face in turn without a word. Then with perfect confidence turned to the narrator and very civilly inquired of a direction. Children and animals are said to be infallible judges of the integrity of those they come in contact with, and to this list may well be added the wayfaring person.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SCHOOL OVER A GROCERY.

Amusing Episodes Told by a Pioneer School Teacher of Leadville.

I taught one of the first schools ever taught in the great mining camp of Leadville. Colo., and naturally enough I had many unusual and amusing experiences. The schoolroom was the second floor of a two story log building, the lower floor being used for a grocery store.

Every thing in the schoolroom was of the most primitive kind. The seats were long pine benches. There were no desks, no blackboards and not an inch of plastering in the whole building. There was nothing between the grocery store and the schoolroom but a loosely laid floor of unseasoned pine that became looser as it seasoned. It was, unfortunately, full of knot holes, and whenever a customer came into the store for a bar of soap or a pound of sugar, the school heard the entire transaction, and as the merchant was a very loquacious man we often heard some funny things.

The schoolroom water pail was kept on a pine box at one end of the room and accidentally overturned a good many times that winter, and, strangely enough, the boys sitting near it could never tell just how these accidents happened, but they always occurred when there were more than the usual number of customers in the store below, and they never failed to throw the school into paroxysms of joy. The effect was different on the groceryman.

"Here you, Mister Teacher!" he would roar up to me.

"Well, what is it?" I would ask in as calm and dignified a manner as I could assume when talking through knot holes at my feet.

"Them boys it pourin' water down here ag'in and wettin' my goods and my customers, and I ain't goin' to stand it?"

"Boys!" I would say sternly, "did any of you upset that pail?"

"And they did!" the groceryman would shriek out, "you just come down here and see! If you can't make 'em behave I kin now and I'll do it too!"

One day he carried his threat into execution. There were several customers in the store and I was busy with a class in geography when an ominous splash and the giggling of two boys told me that the newly filled water pail had gone over again. There were litte feminine shrieks below, and the next minute the grocer sugar scoop in hand, appeared in the school room.

Without deigning to notice me he ran back to where the overturned pail was and began laying about him with the sugar scoop, and before I could recover from any amazement nearly every pupil had gone shrieking and laughing down the stairs, with the irate grocer in mad pursuit, hammering away with the scoop on the heads and backs of the guilty and innocent alike.

A few minutes later he roared up through the knot holes:

"Now, if you can't make them youngsters behave themselves and have some manners, I kin!"

This singular lesson in courtesy had such a salutary effect upon the school that the pail was not overturned again for two whole days. The next week we moved into a new and better room on the ground floor, greatly to the delight of the grocer.—J. L. Harbour in Wide Awake.

Unrolling a Mummy.

An Egyptian mummy was recently unrolled in an English university. It had for 50 years occupied a place in the college museum, but it is not known how it came into the possession of the authorities. The mummy was swathed in scores of yards of thick, yellowish linen of fine texture. The bands of linen varied in width from four or five inches to about a foot. Some of them were laid lengthwise along the body; others were wrapped round and round it. At the beginning of the process of unrolling, there was a perceptible sickly smell of aromatics, which, as the work went on, gave place to a more pronounced and decidedly disagreeable odor. When a great part of the linen had been removed, black stains, caused by the bitumen, became apparent, and nearer to the body the wrappings had suffered considerably from contact with this substance. Two small pieces of linen with fringes were discovered in the course of the unrolling, and these bore inscriptions more or less impaired by the bitumen. When at last the coverings had been removed, the body was found to be of a very dark brown color—so dark, indeed, as to be almost black. The skin where it remained was hard and shiny, the arms and hands lay lengthwise upon the abdomen, while the heart and intestines were placed beneath the knees. The features when disclosed stood out very clearly, and were those of a rather handsome person, but the sex could not be determined. Glass eyes had been placed in the head, and there was a linen plug in the ear. The mummy seemed to belong to a period about 800 years before Christ. The mummy was about 5 feet 3 inches in height, and was that of an Egyptian, probably one of the class corresponding to the lower middle class of modern times.

Knew The Value of Advice.

When D. K. Tenney was admitted to the bar he was one of the "boys." He enjoyed a good time as well as any one and the following story is told of him: He went to a country dance near Madison, Wis., one night and became smitten with one of the country girls. He danced with her nearly all the evening, regardless of the fact that a certain six footer in the room kept watching him threateningly. Finally a friend approached. "Dan," he said, "do you see that big fellow on the other side of the room?" "Yes." "Well, he's going to lick the life out of you."

"What for?" asked Tenny. "You've been dancing with his girl all the evening." "I didn't know it. What shall I do?" "Well, if I were you, I'd put on my coat and make a sneak for home. I'd get away from here just as quick as I could." The embryo lawyer said never a word, but reached down in his pocket and pulled out a two dollar bill. "What are you doing?" asked the friend. "Take it." "I don't want any money." "Take it," repeated Tenny. "I've taken five dollars for a blamed sight worse advice than that."—Chicago Tribune.

No Cause of Action.

A young man in New Jersey who sued his adopted mother for naming him Moses Exodus Matthew Luke Nnmbers Smith was beaten in the suit, but the court took occasion to tell the woman that lunatic asylums always quartered such as she in the left wing.

Fighting Parson.

During the Eighteenth century Presbyterian ministers settled among the people of northern Scotland needed to be men of great strength, piety and zeal. The Rev. Eneas Sage, whose story is told in "Parish Life in the North of Scotland," belonged to the order of muscular Christians, being more than six feet in height and stout in proportion.

A year or two after he had become minister of Lochearean, he announced one Sunday his intention of holding "a diet catechising" at the house of a dissolute man, a desperate character of great physical strength.

The minister's friends remonstrated with him, but he went to the man's house, and was ordered to go away.

"Easier said than done," answered the minister; "but you may turn me out if you can."

They were both powerful men, and neither of them hesitated to put upon the other his ponderous strength. After a short but fierce struggle, the minister became the victor, and the landlord, prostrated upon his own floor, was with a rope coiled round his arms and feet bound over to keep the peace.

The people of the district were then called in, and the minister proceeded seriously to discharge the duty of catechising them. When that was finished, he set himself to deal with the delinquent present. The man was solemnly rebuked, and the minister so moved his conscience that he afterwards became a decided Christian.—Youth's Companion.

A Steer in the House.

A drove of Texas cattle were being driven across the railroad tracks near the Martell house. One of the drove, a large steer, became separated from the others and ran down the tracks into the Vandalia yards. Being close pressed by William Little, the driver, the steer mounted the outside stairs of a two story tenement house situated close to the round house, and entered the kitchen and took possession. Mrs. A. O. Hennesy, with her baby in her arms, had just time to escape by a back stairway and save the life of herself and child. The infuriated steer upset the kitchen table, smashed the dishes, broke the chairs and other furniture, and overturned the stove. The driver mounted the stairs and, after some difficulty, managed to get a ring in the animal's nose, but it broke and was useless. The animal, after having completely wrecked the room, leisurely descended the stairs and was captured.

Disagreeable Agreement.

It is dangerous to make a confession unless one really means it, and we may add that it is sometimes dangerous to take a confession as honestly meant.

A husband and wife between whom a little unpleasant passage had occurred, had made the matter up, and the wife said, as if to clear her conscience:

"Oh, well, I suppose I have my faults."

"Yes, my dear," said the husband.

"What?"

"I simply said yes."

"That I have my faults!" exclaimed the wife, indignantly. "What are they, I should like to know?"

"Well, to begin with"——

"No. I don't want to hear."—Youth's Companion.

THE age of kingly chivalry has not entirely passed away. The king of Greece, walking in the street a few days ago saw a man thrashing a little boy. Indignant at the outrage, his Majesty insisted that the man should release the lad. The man shook his fist at the unknown person and raised his stick to strike him. The King knocked him down on the spot, called the police, and revealing his identity, ordered the man to be taken to the police station, and there beaten with the same stick and released.

"O to be dead and done with the trouble.
This is the moan of many a woman
Who thinks she can never be well again.
"It were better for me and better for others
If I were dead," and their tears fall fast.
Not so, not so, O wives and mothers,
There's a bow of hope in the sky at last,
and it tells you that the storm of disease which has spread its shadow over you will give way to the sunshine of renewed health if you are wise and try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It can and will effectually cure all female weaknesses and derangements and no woman who has not tried it need despair, for a trial will convince her that it is the very thing she needs to restore her to the health she fears forever lost.

Kelly, the would-be kidnaper, who last fall at De Witt, Iowa, made a futile attempt to carry off a little girl named Barr, was convicted and given four years in the penitentiary.

Prepare for Spring

Now is the time to attend to your personal condition in preparation for the change to spring season. If you have not "wintered well," if you are tired out from overwork, if your blood has become impure from close confinement in badly ventilated offices or shops, you should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It will purify and vitalize your blood, create a good appetite, and give your whole system tone and strength.

"For a first-class spring medicine my wife and I think very highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla. We both took it last spring. It did us a great deal of good and we felt better through the hot weather than ever before. It cured my wife of sick headache, from which she has suffered a great deal, and relieved me of a dizzy, tired feeling. I think every one ought to take something to purify the blood before the hot weather comes on, and we shall certainly take Hood's Sarsaparilla this spring." J. H. PEARCE, Supt. Granite Railway Co., Concord, N. H.

DON'T DO IT.

From the "Medical Review." "Upon the first symptoms of Liver Complaint the misguided sufferer applies blue pill, calomel and other mineral poisons, in the delusive hope of obtaining relief, whereas these powerful purgatives but aggravate the disease and debilitate the constitution. Dr. Tutt has had the courage to ignore this killing practice of the old school. His remedies, drawn from the vegetable kingdom, are almost miraculous in renovating the broken down body. The letters of cured patients in the Doctor's possession are a tribute of gratitude to his genius and skill which but few can exhibit. His Liver Pills are sent all over the world. They can be found in every town and hamlet in the United States."

THE NORTHWEST.

MINNESOTA.

During the year 1889 in the state there were 9,901 marriages and 492 divorces.

Arthur J. Carroll, postmaster at Plainview and a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, died of consumption.

Capitalists are making arrangements for the development of a valuable iron mine at Grand Rapids, Itasca county.

The Minnesota house at St. Charles was entered by burglars recently and a large amount of cigars and other articles taken.

A starch factory has been established at Lake City and the farmers in that vicinity are preparing to plant potatoes on an extensive scale the coming season.

While felling trees in the Mission Creek lumber camp Erick Nelson was hit by a limb, causing a fracture of the skull. His recovery is doubtful.

Three carloads of seed grain have been shipped from Kenyon this winter for the use of the needy in North Dakota who suffered the loss of their crop last year.

Oliver Watkins, a Minneapolis policeman, skipped from that city with a dress-maker, leaving a wife and family in straightened circumstances. He also left numerous creditors.

Martin Schmaudt and two workmen were terribly injured near Hutchinson by the bursting of the boiler of a threshing engine which they were using to run a saw mill. Schmaudt may die.

Miss Groh, of St. Paul, died the other day from blood poisoning, resulting from rubbing a pimple on her face with her gloved fingers. This poison is said to have been in the dye of the kid glove.

At Mankato William Lenz was convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of John Schwartz at Pleasant Mound last July. The verdict was a genuine surprise, as a verdict of acquittal was looked for.

John B. Gregoire of Mazeppa was riding on the spring seat of a lumber wagon and in turning a corner rapidly was thrown to the ground. His shoulder was broken and dislocated.

Three drunken Indians at Appleton engaged in a fight with knives and tomhawks and two of them were seriously injured, one perhaps fatally. The person who sold the whisky will receive the attention of the authorities.

James Lawther, of Red Wing, who is now absent in Europe, has brought suit against his brother Samuel for mismanagement of his property during his absence—the complaint referring specifically to certain leased real estate in Minneapolis involving some $6,000.

Mr. Hamingway, a patient in the hospital at Rochester from Dodge county, had his leg amputated above the knee. Three or four weeks ago he accidentally pricked his knee with the tine of a pitchfork, producing a slight wound. It became sore and finally blood poisoning set in, with the result as stated.

The little village of Maple Lake Minn., was nearly swept away by the fire fiend. The blaze originated in George Desmond's smoke house, and, owing to the high wind, spread very rapidly. The buildings burned are Rohrenbach's store, building and contents, Welton Bros.' dry goods store, Kohler & Taylor's drug store, George Desmond's butcher shop and the Mansor house.

Charles Larson, Ole Olson and Magness Falk, section men, were run over and killed by a Northern Pacific passenger train two miles from Clear Lake. The Manitoba and Northern Pacific tracks run side by side at the point where the accident occurred and the men stepped off the Manitoba track to let a freight go by just in time to be caught by the Northern Pacific train.

Letters from London state that Dr. C. N. Hewitt, secretary of the Minnesota board of health, who is at present in that country studying and inspecting sanitary methods there employed, is being recieved with the highest respect everywhere and accorded every aid in his work. The doctor will soon go to Paris to spend some time with Pasteur, and thence to Berlin to visit Dr. Koch.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The citizens of Bismarck and Mandan will tender Bishop Shanley a reception and banquet on his arrival in the former city.

Ex-King Milan would probably be willing to confess, for the edification of the North Dakota statesmen, that he considers gambling worse than drinking.

A car is being built by the Pullman company of Chicago, for Rt. Rev. Dr. Walker, bishop of North Dakota, to be used by the bishop in his official duties throughout his diocese.

Two burglars named Fell and Hilton are under arrest for breaking into Post Trader Cottle's store at Fort Meade and appropriating about $100 worth of goods. Most of the property was recovered.

A Bismarck liquor dealer has the following sign above his doorway: "By order of the prohibitionists I will sell my stocks of wines, liquors and cigars before July 1, 1890, at greatly reduced prices. This is no selling out fake. Wish it was."

It is said that for years North Dakota people have been singularly lucky in getting prizes in the Louisiana lottery. A good many persons there have captured big prizes. The indications are that the Louisania swindle has been carefully paving its way for the coup which it was just attempted to make.

The city of Fargo owes a $148.25 board bill and won't pay it. Two years ago the legislature was invited to visit the city by the city council, and while on the visit put up at a hostelry and got away with hash to the value of that amount. The council votes to pay the bill at every meeting and the mayor promptly bobs up with a veto.

The contracts have been let for the survey of thirty-four townships in North Dakota, and work will be commenced early in the spring. There are five townships in Rmsey county, ten or twelve in Cavalier, eight or ten in Benson, six in Towner and six in Rolette. Dakota has $15,000 in the surveying fund, and this was divided between the two sections.

Secretary Noble denied a motion for review of the case of P. McWeeney vs. Charles W. Greene, involving title to land in section 35, township 154, range 64, of the Devils Lake, N. D., district. This case was decided last summer, when a review was asked by Mary McWeeney, the wife of P. McWeeney. The land is almost in the city of Devils Lake. McWeeney held another tract when the Ward boys of Chicago were killed. He was one of the twelve who killed the Wards, and while his trial was pending was in jail at Devils Lake, Mary McGillecudy became attached to him there and married him. When McWeeney was released they went to Devils Lake. He was appointed a special officer, and was killed by Billy Oswald. The latter was sentenced to twelve years, but was pardoned by Gov. Mellette a short time before he ceased to be governor of Dakota Territory. Greene, who was in this suit, was opposed to the Creel gang, and the land in question was claimed as part of the Creel heritage on Devils Lake. After McWeeney's death his widow carried on the suit, but the last hope of securing the property vanished with the decision announced.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

A single mine in the Black Hills has already paid nearly $5,000,000 in dividends.

In answer to a correspondent, the Parkston Advance says that peanuts can be grown with success in South Dakota.

The mineral water of Hot Springs promises to become world famous. It is now being shipped by the carload.

Twenty-three members of the lower house of the South Dakota legislature are baldheaded.

Fourteen years ago the Black Hills were settled by white men. The average population since then has been about 30,000.

An idea of the growth of Yankton can be had from the fact that in 1880 the tax levy was $10,000, while in 1889 the levy reached $50,000.

Fifty-two different minerals are found in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Twenty-five of these are mined. Several other minerals are found not yet determined.

There was entered under the pre-emption homestead and timber culture laws in South Dakota in 1889, 2,382,948 acres of farm land.

George Burnam, the young man who got lost on his way from Newcastle to Deadwood a few weeks ago and was badly frozen, has had both his legs amputated.

Eastern parties are making an effort to secure the gaslight franchise of Rapid City, and if successful will put in a plant costing in the neighborhood of $60,000.

The Salvation army has raised the siege of Mitchell for the present. The Republican speaks very highly of the manner in which the meetings were conducted in that city.

In a shooting scrape at Pierre a cow puncher named Ballou had his ear shot off by a tough named Hull. Hull was arrested and bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $500.

At the meeting of the Farmers' alliance of the Black Hills district, held at Whitewood recently, a resolution was adopted protesting against the proposed reduction in the number of members in the general assembly. The opinion expressed was that where there is a large membership there is less danger of robbery.

At Waterbury the other day Squire Atkins had a miraculous escape from serious injury. He was being lowered into a well fifty feet deep by aid of a bucket and windlass. When about twenty feet down the crank slipped from the hand of the man above and Atkins tumbled clear to the bottom. When taken out he was found to have escaped with a few bruises.

The Oneida Watchman has received information that the Chicago and Northwestern company has concluded to continue its line from Gettysburg to Pierre, and that the line when constructed will cross the Okobojo near Clifton. It is thought the survey will be made and grading commenced early in the spring. The reason for building this short line is to connect the north country with the Black Hills extension at Pierre and to prevent the Manitoba from building its surveyed line from Aberdeen to Pierre.

While oiling the shaft of an ore crusher in the Old Abe mine at Lead City, the clothing of William Fullerton became entangled in the machinery, and he was whirled around the rapidly revolving shaft for some time before he was discovered and the belt thrown off. When taken out it was found that his lower limbs were terribly mangled, the flesh torn from one hand and one rib broken. He was removed to the Homestake hospital, were both both legs were amputated and his sufferings eased as much as possible, but there is small hopes of his recovery.

WISCONSIN.

William Thompson, who took poison in the Reedsburg jail, died a few hours later.

Will J. Walther, of Fond du Lac is under bonds on a charge that he robbed the mails.

William Witzel, an Oshkosh teamster, has glanders. He contracted the disease from a horse.

The warm weather of the past few days so honeycombed the ice at La Crosse that the icemen were obliged to suspend operations.

Phelps Perrin is to be arrested at Hurley for embezzling $1,500. He is the chap who is supposed to know more than he will tell about the theft of $41,000 of express money from a Hurley bank.

After digging a well through a drift formation, twenty-five feet deep, on the farm of John Crawlay, at Little Prairie, Walworth county, the workmen struck pieces of cedar that were in a good state of preservation.

G. Auwater, an old resident of Eureka, left ostensibly to visit his sons in the West. No information being received of him, it was supposed to be a case of mysterious disappearance until the family learned indirectly that he had recently been seen in Germany.

While E. L. Perry, a dentist at Springfield, Marquette County, was heating his vulcanizer in the kitchen stove at his residence, exploded, and blew the stove to fragments. There were four persons in the room, but no one was injured.

Congressman Caswell, who has returned to Washington from Ft. Atkinson, is accompanied by Miss May and Harlow Caswell, his daughter and son, who will remain in Washington during the remainder of the term of Congress.

The Racine Journal says that Jacob Larson, of that city, had a narrow escape from being killed. He was down in a well twenty feet deep, out near the Rapids road, when an eight pound stone became dislodged, and fell, striking him upon the nose. He escaped uninjured.

It is now stated that Ed. Bither, the Racine driver, has been engaged by St. Louis parties to take charge of an immense stock farm in Pennsylvania, at a salary of $5,000 per year. On this farm, it is said, there are some of the most promising steppers in the country.

Capt. Tainter, of Menomonie is fitting up his memorial building at that place regardless of cost. He has let the contract for a pipe organ for the auditorium that is to cost over $5,000. It is expected that it will be one of the very finest in that section of Wisconsin.

IOWA.

At Toledo $30,000 has already been raised by the citizens for the rebuilding of Western college.

Twenty-five citizens of Ottumwa will whack up $500 each as a starter for the coal palace fund.

Wild geese and ducks, northward bound, are reported from various sections of the state.

Nearly all the saloons in Keokuk have closed their doors. This has been caused the numerous injunction suits which have been filed lately. A few still remain open.

The soldiers' relief committee, of Burlington, distributed $200 among the needy soldiers or their families for the month of February of that city.

Will Andrews, late city editor of the Burlington Hawkeye, has accepted a position on the editorial staff of the New York World, and will enter upon his new duties next week

A vein of coal from three to five feet in thickness was discovered a few miles north of Fort Dodge. The mine will be developed immediately.

John Nicholas, of Morris, Ill., while in an intoxicated condition fell from a passenger train at West Liberty and had both feet cut off. He died a few hours later. He was on his way to St. Paul, Minn.

Mrs. Typton, the wife of Silas Typton, who was murdered at Moulton by Dr. Murdy last October, has become a raving maniac as the result of mental anguish caused by her husband's untimely death.

While nursing her sick mother at Spencer's Grove, Mrs. Sam Kelso, of Walker, suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, my heart!" and fell dead to the floor. The doctor attributed her death to apoplexy. Mrs. Kelso was one of the leading ladies in Walker

Dick Herndon, while watering his horses near a school house three miles south of Moulton, Iowa, was fatally shot in the back by an unknown party with a gun loaded with buckshot. Herndon is a brother to the Herndon who was stabbed at a dance in that vicinity some weeks ago.

Speaking of Iowa newspaper property, the Davenport Democrat says: "It is noted that for every newspaper man who is ready to sell or get out of the business there are two or more anxious to get into the profession. On the whole newspaper property in Iowa pays as well as it does in any other state in the union."

Mrs. LaFountain and John Beattie eloped from Kansas City the other day without the consent of the woman's husband. They were captured in Davenport and held to await the arrival of Mr. LaFountain. A few hours in jail had the effect of changing the woman's mind and after a dramatic meeting with her better half she decided to make back tracks for Kansas City, leaving Beattie to finish the elopement all by himself.

J. H. Wenger, of South Englieh, Keokuk county, has a clock with a history. It was brought to this country by Mr. Wenger's great-grandfather, in 1729, and has been in the family many years in the old country and is supposed to have been made sometime between 1690 and 1700. The clock is made of brass and has a solid silver face. It is artistically constructed and must have cost several hundred dollars when new.

CONGRESSIONAL.

A Resume of the Proceedings of Congress During the Past Week.

SENATE.

The Senate committee on territories ordered a favorable report on the bill for admission of Idaho into the union. The bill is reported substantially as introduced. A favorable report was ordered also on the bill approving, with amendments, the funding act of Arizona.

Among the bills introduced were these. By Mr. Platt—To prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor in the District of Columbia. By Mr. Wilson, of Iowa—Providing that in cases before the court of claims, involving a sum less than $3,000, where the decision will affect a class of cases or serve as a precedent, an appeal may be allowed to the supreme court without regard to the amount involved: also a bill appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Muscatine, Iowa.

HOUSE.

The House committee on Indian affairs heard arguments on the Senate resolution providing for the removal of the Apache Indian prisoners of war from Mt. Vernon Barracks to Fort Sill reservation in the Indian territory.

SENATE.

Senator Allen reported favorably his bills for two additional land districts in Washington from the committtee on public lands.

Senator Squire introduced a bill providing for a federal survey of the proposed Lake Washington and the Puget Sound ship canal.

HOUSE.

Mr. Wickham of Ohio introduced in the house for reference a bill providing that the representatives elected to the fifty-second congress shall be returned from the same districts as similar representatives elected to the fifty-first congress.

The senate committee on territories has directed Chairman Platt to favorably report the bill for the admission of Idaho as a state, and it will be reported to the senate on Wednesday.

SENATE.

When the senate committee went into executive session immediately after the routine business the nomination of Indian Commissioner Morgan was again taken up for consideration. Senator Spooner made a long and strong argument in favor of confirmation. He answered seriatim the charges reflecting upon Gen. Morgan's military record and respecting his discrimination against Catholics in the management of Indian schools and the letting of contracts. He refuted all these charges in detail, and extolled the public and private character of the nominee. Senator Spooner was followed by Mr. Dawes, chairman of the committee on Indian affairs. His argument was in much the same direction and was strong in favor of confirmation. Gen. Morgan's nomination was confirmed by a vote of 28 ayes to 16 noes.

HOUSE.

In the house the debate on the code of rules was continued. Messrs. Dockery of of Missouri, Morse of Massachusetts, Allen of Michigan, Chipman of Michigan and Henderson of Iowa defended the proposed rules, while Messrs. McCreary of Kentucky, Cummings of New York and Buckalew of Pennsylvania spoke against them. Referring to the election cases Mr. Henderson said that if there was a member on the floor entitled to his seat, the Republicans would stand up and defend his rights, but if there was on the floor one who held his seat by black-hearted fraud or red-handed murder, they would unseat him if they had the power.

SENATE.

In the Senate this morning a number of bills were reported from committees and placed on the calendar.

Among them one for the establishment and maintenance of Indian industrial schools in Michigan and South Dakota.

The bill appropriating $500,000 for a public building at Portland, Ore., was passed.

Consideration of the bill to provide a temporary government for Oklahoma was then resumed, the pending question being Mr. Plumb's amendment to include, "No Man's Land" within the territory. The bill was passed

HOUSE.

The Senate joint resolution congratulating the people of the United States of Brazil on the adoption of a Republican form of government was passed unanimously.

Consideration of the code of rules was then proceeded with. An amendment was adopted requiring the titles of committee reports to be entered on the journal.

Mr. Crisp offered an amendmet providing that the speaker shall not in any case refuse to entertain an appeal from his decision, which, after some discussion, was lost—yeas 114, nays 140. Pending further action the House took a recess.

SENATE.

Senate bill appropriating $25,000 for the relief of Indians at Devils Lake agency was reported and passed.

The bill to increase the endowment of the the Louisiana State University and Agricultural college led to considerable debate, participated in by Senators Gibson, Ingalls, Morrill, Plumb and Hoar, the objection being on the ground that colored pupils were excluded from attendance. The bill went over.

Senate bills were then passed for the relief of soldiers and sailors who enlisted or served under assumed names while minors or otherwise in the army and navy during the war of the Rebellion.

HOUSE.

The new rules were then adopted by a strict vote of yeas 161, nays 145.

Mr. Chandler, of Massachusetts, from the world's fair committee, submitted a report, which was ordered printed and re-committed.

SENATE.

The senate committee on privileges and elections began the hearing of the contested election cases in Montana. Mr. Payne, counsel for Messrs. Sanders and Powers, opened the hearing with an argument claiming that the legislature in joint assembly voted for Sanders and Powers and claimed that they were duly elected and entitled to seats in the senate, unless that body could go behind the legislature and prove that they were unqualified for the position or had obtained their seats by bribery and fraud.

HOUSE.

Mr. Baker, from the committee on territories, reported to the House the Carey bill to provide for the admission of Wyoming as a state.

Mr. Anderson, of Kansas, introduced a bill appropriating $250,000 for the purchase of a residence in or near Washington for the President of the United States.

Mr. Allen, of Michigan, presented in the House a resolution instructing the secretary of war to cause an examination to be made of the necessity, practicability and expense of tunnelling the Detroit river at or near the city of Detroit, with a view to the use of the tunnel for the passage of railway trains from the United States to Canada.

Consulting the Stars.

It is strange that many persons yet confound astronomy with astrology, a result of the undue importance which personal and private interests have over scientific principals in the thoughts of many persons. Not many weeks ago we received a letter from a subscriber who wished to be informed where he could find a text book of astrology.

It is said that the astronomer royal, who has charge of Greenwich observatory, frequently receives letters asking what his terms are for drawing a horoscope! The writers of these letters often promise to make known, if necessary, the true day and hour of their birth. Such incidents to call to mind a story told of Herschel, the astronomer.

During a very rainy season a farmer in his neighborhood came to ask his opinion, or rather the opinion of the stars, as to the day that would best suit for making his hay without any fear of losing it by showers.

The great astronomer led the man to a window and pointed with his finger to a meadow where the grass had been mown and was rotting in the wet.

"You see that field," said he. "Well, it is mine. Isn't that enough to show you that as regarding rain and fine weather I am not a bit more of a conjurer than any of my neighbors?"—Youth's Companion."

Our City Governors.

What would John Ruskin have said if, wanting pictures, we should have induced an untaught negro to take a broad, flat brush and with his coarse dyes pass rapidly over a series of canvases? Could art ever come from such savage manipulations of pencil and color? Yet when we wish a city governed and made beautiful and great we often hand it over to men who are standing with their feet in the lower world of both ignorance and dishonor; we had many of our benevolent institutions, with their sad inmates—the sick, the insane, the blind—to the care of men who would be arrested by the humane society were they plying their business not in an asylum but in the stock-yards.—Prof. David Swing.

JIM.

BY LAURENS BAYARD FREEMAN.

So Jim is dead. I don't know why
It should be so, but do you know,
It seems a most unnatural thing
That Jim should die?

He seemed so sure to win; in all he tried
He came out best; he beat the rest,
As sportsmen say, "Hands down,"
And yet he died.

When we were chums—I don't suppose
There ever were a warmer pair—
We used to speculate on death,
And now he knows.

He used to say: "You never can
Convince my mind that we shall find
A better world beyond than this."
How now, old man?

It seems so weak of Jim. But stop.
I comprehend—my dear old friend,
In this, as oft before, you have
Come out on top.

HOW SHE HELPED HIM.

New York Observer.

"WELL, tell me, about Henry Woodford. How did that match turn out?"

"Bad enough, thus far. He is the same delightful, good-hearted fellow as of old; always ready to do a kind or courteous act, but this woman will be the ruin of him."

"How? What is the trouble?"

"The trouble is, she fancies herself an invalid, lies around, does nothing but read Charlotte Braeme and Bertha M. Clay—has every foolish whim gratified, and, in fact, I don't see how he stands it."

"Did she have any property?"

"Not a cent. It was an out-and-out love match, She has expensive tastes, is indolent and extravagant. Why, his carriage hire is a big item of itself. She couldn't possibly walk a block, you know."

"Perhaps she is really a sufferer."

"Nonsense; she had that fall, you remember, at the skating rink. At first her spine was thought to be seriously injured. Woodford paid several hundred dollars to have her cured, and the doctors discharged her well, they said. But it has pleased her to drag around a load on his hand ever since. It is thought that he is much crippled financially. I know positively that he has lately mortgaged his interest in the firm. If he can't manage to make or save $5,000 by the end of this year, it is all up with him; and he will never do it at his present rate of living."

"Why doesn't he tell her? Has she no sense or feeling at all?"

"None, except for herself; and he is so fond of her that he will indulge her to his very last cent."

"I thought he looked a little down as he passed us this morning."

"Yes, he is beginning to realize that he has gone too far, and, poor fellow, it is tugging at him hard."

Did she hear aright? Was it of her, Eleanor Woodford, they were talking? Swiftly she sped out of the dark, heavily curtained back parlor of the stylish boarding house and into her room, a gorgeous alcove apartment on the first floor. She could not mount the steps on account of a weak spine. Weak spine? She forgot all about it as she paced the floor, angry tears gushing from her large, brown eyes. It was shameful—it was wicked—to be so abused. She had never in her whole petted life been found fault with. As to money, what did she know about it? Her father, before his failure and death, had always gratified her. Her husband had never made any difference. These were friends of his. Her bitter sobs ceased, and her wounded vanity gradually lost itself in better thoughts. Did all the world think of her like the scathing criticisms of these chance callers, who thus killed the time of waiting for some one to come down to see them?

She began to feel glad that she had overheard it. The merest accident had sent her into the back parlor. Was it true? What could she do! Her dear, kind husband in trouble and she the cause. Oh, she must help him somehow. Long she sat buried in thought, and when the well known step sounded at the door her face was radiant with a new resolve.

He came to her large easy chair with a step somewhat weary, but his kiss was as usual. "All right, Nellie? Had a good day? Why you look—let me see—how do you look?" he said cheerily.

"I look as if I love my big boy very much, don't I?" she answered merrily.

His answer was another kiss, and as he turned toward his dressing closet her heart ached with unspoken tenderness. Her dinner was brought up. She was not considered strong enough to sit at the table. For this service an extra charge was made.

Later, when he opened the evening paper, she sat and watched him. Surely those little lines of care were new, now that he was not fondly smiling upon her. O, foolish, selfish wife! Rising gently, her long handsome tea gown trailing behind her, she stood behind him, one slender white hand upon his shoulder. Then playfully putting by the paper, she sat down upon his knee.

She pressed her lips in a slow reverential fashion upon the broad, white brow, another pang at her heart. Then she spoke:

"Not this time, Harry dear; let's go to Mrs. Wickham's to board."

"Mrs. Wickham's!" he echoed, "why, you wouldn't stay in her dull little place a week." But even as he spoke there flashed through his mind, in rapid calculation, "$20 a week there, $40 here; $80 a month saved; nearly $1,000 a year."

"Don't you like it here?" were his next words, as he glanced around the luxurious suite.

"Yes," she said, "except that there are too many people here. It is so noisy."

"Very well, then we will try it—anything to please my darling; and he wrapped his arms around her as he would lull a restless child.

The move was made, and Eleanor found that she was not so much fatigued as she had often felt after a day's lounging with a novel. Her husband thought it only a new whim, but as it was not an expensive one he could not complain. When he wanted to take her driving, she playfully told him she was learning to walk—horses were not safe.

The first step, she thought. Now for the next. It came to her almost by magic. In a little rear hall room sat Margaret Dewees, clicking away at her typewriter. A strong clear-headed girl, who had maintained her savings.

She was soon to be married to a stalwart young farmer, the lover of her youth. They had worked and waited. From the first she took an intrest in the young wife, and it was given to her energy and common sense to help a suffering sister. Together they plotted and planned. Eleanor's lassitude passed away under vigorous rubbings and brisk walks.

Margaret's trousseau was a thing to be considered. From Eleanor's surplus stock of stylish gowns and garments the country girl's outfit was deftly concocted. Eleanor could sew neatly and rapidly. When all was ready the snug sum of $200 lay in her writing-desk. Her grand piano, too large for the new quarters, was removed from the storage-room to the dealer's and was sold for $300 more. She wrote at once to an uncle in Kansas City, told him of her little efforts and asked what she should do with her mite. He was a estate man, and promptly invested it in a lot in the rising town of Duluth.

In exchange for her service as seamstress Margaret taught her the use of the typewriter. When she was married she left the instrument for the summer months, in Eleanor's care. A nominal rent was agreed upon, and this was easy to pay, as Margaret's engagements were transferred to the new operator, while she herself attended to her chickens and cows and her six feet of husband.

Eleanor's energy did not stop here, she obtained pupils on the type-writer at $5 each. She shipped a lot of old party dresses, crushed and out of style, to costumer's on——street, and saved the proceeds. Every time her husband handed over her allowance of pin money she put at least half of it in her "strong box."

It was hard to hide this activity and cheerfulness from him, but she did. With her woman's enjoyment of a little mystery, and her high resolve to show herself worthy of him, she kept in the old rut as nearly as possible when he was at home. He saw that she was stronger and it lightened his labors. "My little woman does not ride or read any more," he said one evening in the indulgent tone he used toward her.

"Why, yes, I do read. Don't you see my little library there?"

"Yes, but it seems to me that I miss something."

He missed the litter of trashy novels he had been wont to see.

"I told you I was learning to walk," she added with a smile. "I really do walk somewhere every day."

"That pleases me most of all," he said in his cheery way; "but what will Dr. Buell think?"

"I don't care a bit; I have long since cut his acquaintance."

The end of the year rolled around. Eleanor watched her husband's face with increasing anxiety. One evening he sat buried in thought, from which all her endeavors could not rouse him. He did not feel well he said. All night he tossed and muttered. Calculations and figures were uppermost.

He was up early and away. Eleanor hastened her preparations and carefully counted her little hoard, the earnings of months. Late in the afternoon she came home with the proceeds of her last batch of typewriting, glowing with exercise and the happiness of contibuting at least several hundred dollars to meet her husband's creditors. He was there, lying on the sofa pale and hopeless. Forgetting all else, she flung herself beside him with a sob.

"Oh, Harry, my dearest, what is it? Tell me what it is that is killing you? I have a right to know."

"It is ruin, Eleanor. I have brought you to poverty—you whom I would have die to make happy."

"You are talking in riddles, Harry," she exclaimed rallying from her alarm.

"Am I not the happiest woman in the world? And don't you see how well and strong I am?"

She coaxed the whole story from his lips. Then with affected lightness she said: "Is that all! Why you frightened me terribly; I thought you were ill—had caught some terrible disease or other. See here." As she spoke she ran to her desk, took out her treasure and poured it into his hands in her impulsive fashion.

"Eleanor! What is this?"

"This? Why, this is only your wife's selfishness and laziness in another form."

Then her story had to be told. Their combined efforts still fell short of the required sum, but she triumphantly produced the deed to the western land. For a season there were caresses and even tears of mutual love and thankfulness.

"My precious wife!" he fervently exclaimed, as she clasped her close.

"What a treasure in you, if all the money in the world should fail!"

"But your piano?" he said with regret, overreaching his appreciation of her sacrifice.

"Let it go," she said, merrily. "I could not play worth listening to—this you must acknowledge. It was just an expensive toy—that's all."

Next day the balance of the debt was borrowed upon the security of the Western deed, and Horace Woodford was a free man once more. When the $500 jumped to thousands in a sudden boom he bought a neat home. Margaret, the valued friend, supplied their table with products from the farm. Eleanor was never quite content till Harry had looked up her two maligners and brought them to the home where she presided, and which her painfully awakened energy had helped to buy. In time she told her secret, and thanked them for that ten minutes' gossip. In time, too, sons and daughters came and found a mother prepared by self denial for the exigencies of life.

The Star of Bethlehem.

Prof. Pickering, of Harvard university, discredits the report from Vienna that "The star of Bethlehem" is again to be visible this year, being its seventh appearance since the birth of Christ. He says: "The report is probably the unauthorized revival of an old rumor that this star, erroneously called the 'star of Bethlehem,' was to make its appearance, but as this statement has been several times since 1884, when the star was looked for by some astronomers, there is doubtless nothing in it. The star was the one discovered by Tycho Brahe in 1572, and was named for him. It appeared quite suddenly in the constellation of Casseopela, and had brilliancy greater than that of any of the planets, so much so that it was visible in the day time. It was believed by some that this star had appeared in the same position 312 years before, or in 1260, and, assuming this interval of appearance to be correct, it would have been visible about the time of the christian era, and it was thus termed the star of Bethlehem. If its return was after 312 years, the time of its reappearance would have been in 1884, but nothing has yet been seen of it. Such a phenomenon at the present day would have the highest value to astronomical science for by the use of modern instruments observations could be taken and information be gathered that would be of the greatest assistance in a series of experiments now in progress. There is, however, so much doubt in the matter that it is of little use to surmise as the star's reappearance."

A Valuable Bit of Land.

From the Washington Post.

While passing a farm in Virginia the figure of an elderly man, whose attire was noticeable for the utter absence of any decorative efforts was to be seen leaning against the fence.

"How are you getting along down here?"

"Jes gettin' 'long; no mo'h."

"Good farm?"

"Fa'h."

"Can you raise anything on it?"

Jake Kilrain and his sparring troup exhibited at the opera house at Dallas, Texas. It was announced to be only a sparring and wrestling match. After some uneventful sparring by others, Tom James of Dallas encountered Bezenah, the combination champion light-weight, for $25, conditioned that James should stay four rounds. Bezenah had it his way from the first. In the fourth round Bezenah struck James in the neck, knocking him limp on the stage. James was unable to rise. He was sponged and restoratives applied. The show continued, no one supposing that James was hurt seriously. When the entertainment had about concluded Muldoon announced that James was unconscious, and called for a physician. James died the same night.

"I have thee on the hip," cried rheumatism, seizing his victim and tossing him on a suffering bed. "Not so," he cried, "not so! Wait my ancient foe, just five minutes, until the boy brings a bottle of Salvation Oil, then we'll see who wins the day."

THE GERMAN AND HIS CLOCK.

The story is told of a German who took the hands of his clock to the maker to have them fixed, because they did not keep proper time. Of course, the clock maker demanded the works, as in them lay the trouble. Boils and blotches, pimples and other eruptions on the exterior tell of a disordered condition of the blood within. Be you man or woman, or aught else human, if you have these indications, be wise in time and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the liver and kidneys in good working order, purifies the blood, cleanses the system from all impurities from whatever cause arising, and tones up the functions generally.

"Golden Medical Discovery" checks the frightful inroads of Scrofula, and, if taken in time, arrests the march of Consumption of the Lungs, which is Lung-scrofula, purifies and enriches the blood, thereby curing all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ulcers, Sores, Swellings, and kindred ailments. It is powerfully tonic as well as alterative, or blood-cleansing, in its effects, hence it strengthens the system and restores vitality, thereby dispelling all those languid, "tired feelings" experienced by the debilitated. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and lung remedy, sold by druggists, and guaranteed by its manufacturers, to do all that it is claimed to accomplish, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

$500 OFFERED for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head by the proprietors of DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness, difficulty of clearing throat, expectoration of offensive matter; breath offensive; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once. Thousands of cases result in consumption, and end in the grave.

By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Remedy cures the worst cases. This infallible remedy does not, like the poisonous irritating snuffs, "creams" and strong caustic solutions with which the public have long been humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the lungs, as there is danger of doing in the use of such nostrums, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, loss or impairment of the sense of taste, smell or hearing, watering or weak eyes, and impaired memory, when caused by the violence of Catarrh, as they all frequently are. By druggists, 50 cents.

Not Wholly Ornamental.

Every seat in the North State Street car was taken, and four or five persons were standing. One of the latter was a young woman, who stood near the middle of the car. A tall young man, rather too slim for his height from an athletic point of view, rose from his seat near the rear door and stepped forward to inform the young woman, who was looking the other way, that there was a seat for her. As he did so a man dropped into it.

"I beg your pardon," said the young man. I didn't get up to give you a seat."

"But I got it," said the man.

"I entended it for the lady," said the young fellow.

"But I got it," retorted the other with a sneer.

He was the bigger man, but the young fellow's hand descended on his shoulders and he was on his feet and on the platform before he knew it.

"Conductor! conductor!" he cried, but the conductor had a far-away look in his eyes, and was interested in something going on down the street. The man was in the street before he had time to call out again.

The hero—for he was a hero in the eyes of all the passangers by this time—reentered the car, and, lifting his hat, politely said:

"Madame, there's a seat for you."

And the passengers were so tickled that they actully began to clap their hands. The young man simply smiled, and said:

"College athletics are of some value now and then."

Then he leaned up against the front door and became absorbed in a paper, while the young woman watched him admiringly.

The Lady and the Cigar,

The train from Paris to Versailles was to leave there in five minutes, says the Texas Siftings. An elegantly dressed gentleman enters a first-class carriage. He has a burning cigar in his mouth. He is about to take his seat when he perceives an elderly lady is in the carriage. Being a gentleman he raises the window and is about to throw out the cigar, when the old lady says:

"Don't you know that you are forbidden to smoke in a first-class carriage when there are ladies in it?"

"My dear madame, you see I was just about to anticipate your wish by throwing away my cigar. However, I will not disturbe you further," and bowing very stiffly he left the car, and, purchasing a third-class ticket, he took his seat among some peasants where he could smoke undisturbed.

There was sitting near the gentleman a wretched-looking tramp, who smelt horribly of garlic and who was about as disagreeable a neighbor as can well be imagined.

"My good fellow," said the gentleman, "did you ever ride in a first-class carriage?"

"Never."

"Well, here's a ticket that I can't use. Just you go into that first-class carriage. There is a vacant seat next to an old lady; just take it."

The man, who was sadly in need of disinfectants, did as he was told. A few minutes after he entered the door of the first-class carriage was closed, and off went the train, which does not stop at any stations between Paris and Versailles. You can imagine whether or not the gentleman got even.

It Killed the Show,

From the New York Mail and Express.

Tom Jackson, the author of those funny stories of "Squatter Sovereignty" and the "Harlam Goat," was down in luck at one time and at a last resort took to the ministrel business. He and a brother of Judge Welde organized a company. The company turned out to be a funny one. Jackson and his partner, Welde, were the end men, and while showing at a little Maine town the former hit upon the idea of putting "poetry," as he called it, into the performance.

He circulated a number of blank cards, of the playing card style, among the audience, and requested the holders to write some subject on the pasteboard, and he proposed to compose a rhyme for any one of their selection. The business was old to the minstrel stage, but new to the audience, so all were a bit timid about sending up subjects. After a great deal of persuasion Jackson succeeded in convincing two of the auditors that they would not be fleeced alive if they followed his request, and these two returned their cards. On one was written the single word "Dog." The other bore this hint, "Pay for your washing."

Jackson glanced at the cards for a second and coming down to the footlights said:

Pay for your washing.
That's funny.
I didn't think I owed your mother money.

Then he came to the other card, and this is what he said:

Dog. That's hard.
I'm much obliged to the dog
For sending up his card.

Two-thirds of the audience insisted that Jackson had insulted them and they arose in a body and left the show. The news spread around that little Maine town, and the next night the minstrel show had empty benches to play to. That settled the card-rhyming business, and since that eventful night witty Tom Jackson has never aspired to the combined position of poet and end man.

The Sewing Machine Man's Say.

"Gentlemen," said the sewing machine man, "one spring father and I had a sugar camp down in the edge of the grove. About half a mile from us was a corn field owned by a widow, and this widow never picked her corn clean. On the other side was a man who owned a blind sow. She had one pig, and they used to go over into that corn field every day to eat the corn. Right in front of our camp was a creek. At one place about 40 rods from our camp there was a felled tree across the creek. This was the only place that the sow and pig could cross. Of course the sow could not see to cross on the log, so the way they used to do was for the old sow to take hold of the pig's tail, and the pig would lead her across. Well, one day we were sitting in front of our camp when the old sow and pig were crossing that log. I said to father, 'Hand me the rifle and see me cut that pig's tail off.' I took aim and fired, cutting the little pig's tail off smack smooth. The pig ran for the corn field, but the old sow didn't know which way to go. So father went over and took hold of the pig's tail and led the old sow clear into camp."—Lewiston Journal.

The Awful Alternative.

Little Marshall P. Wilder told a Washington Post reporter the following gem: Finucane called in on Mike Leary's oldest boy, Tim, one day and found that fine broth of a boy pale about the gills, losing flesh and the picture of dispair. "Howly Moses, Tim, it's murtherin' ill ye'er lukin! Fwat in the name av th' kraken's the mather?" "Finucane!" "Yis." "Ye know that blatherin' spalpeen av a Widdy Costigan's second husband's stepson, Jamie?" "That I do." "He bet me a dollar to a pint I couldn't schwally an igg widout br'akin' th' shell av it." "Naw!"?" "Yis." "Did ye do ut?" "I did." "Then fwhat's ailin' ye?" "Is's doon there. If I joomp about I'll br'ak it an' cut me stummic wid th' shell. If I kape quite the dom thing'll hatch oot an' I'll have a Shanghai roosther a-clawin' me insides."

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Sara E. Kindred and Charles F. Kindred, her husband, mortgagors, to Calvin L. Spaulding and Halsey J. Spencer mortgagees, dated the fourth day of November A. D. 1886, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the county of Crow Wing in the state of Minnesota, on the ninth day of November A. D. 1886, at eleven o'clock and forty-five minutes A. M., in book E of Mortgages, on page 85, on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the amount of four thousand six hundred thirty-seven and 50-100 dollars (4637.50) and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. And Whereas, mortgage was duly assigned by the said Calvin L. Spaulding and Halsey J. Spencer to J. J. Howe by assignment, dated the 24th day of December A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on the 27th day of December A. D. 1888, at two o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., in book H of mortgages on page 222.

Now, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House in the City of Brainerd in the county of Crow Wing and state of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1890 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, and fifty dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Crow Wing and state of Minnesota and known and described as follows, to-wit: Block numbered one hundred sixty-four (164) in the town (now part of the city) of Brainerd according to the plat of said town of record in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Crow Wing County.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, Default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed and delivered by Mrs Julia Lowe (widow) mortgagor, to Patrick H. Carney, mortgagee, dated the 22nd day of September, 1885, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, of the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota, on the 22nd day of September, 1885, at 3:15 p. m., in Book E of Mortgages, on page 30, on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the amount of two hundred twenty-five dollars and eighty-three cents ($225 83-100), and no proceeding or action has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Brainerd, in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, on Monday, the 24th day of February, A. D. 1890, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold, are, all those tracts or parcels of land, lying and being in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit:

The northwest quarter (NW¼), of Section number twelve (12), in Township number forty-four (44), of Range number thirty-one (31), according to the United States government survey, except a strip of land four rods wide, running from the southwest corner of the above described land east to the stream known as Buffalo Creek, being the land deeded to Julia A. STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss.
County of Crow Wing. }

On this 20th day of January, A. D. 1890, personally appeared before me, Louis Tache, Auditor of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, who being first duly sworn, deposes and says, That the foregoing is a true and correct list of delinquent taxes upon real estate within the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, for the year 1888, which became delinquent the first day of June, A. D. 1889, and remaining delinquent on the 20th day of January, A. D. 1890.

LOUIS TACHE,
County Auditor,
Crow Wing County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of January, A. D. 1890.

[SEAL.] S. F. ALDERMAN,
Clerk District Court,
Crow Wing County.

Delinquent Tax List.

—OF—

Cass County.

Counties of Crow Wing }
and Cass. }

District Court, Fifteenth Judicial District.

The State of Minnesota, to all persons, companies or corporations, who have or claim any estate, right, title, or interest in, claim to, or lien upon any of the several pieces or parcels of land in the list hereto attached, described:

The list of Taxes and Penalties on real property for the County of Cass, remaining delinquent on the 1st Monday in January, 1890, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the County of Crow Wing, to which Cass county is attached for judicial purposes, of which that hereto attached is a copy. Therefore, you, and each of you, are hereby required to file in the office of said Clerk on or before the 20th day of March, 1890, your answer in writing, setting forth any objection or defense you may have to the taxes or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have, or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien, and in default thereof judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and costs.

[SEAL.] S. F. ALDERMAN,
Clerk District Court, Crow Wing and Cass Counties, Minnesota.

A list of Delinquent Taxes upon Real Estate, within the County of Cass, State of Minnesota, for the year A. D. 1888, remaining delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1890, and the penalties accrued thereon.

THE BRAINERD DISPATCH.

SUPPLEMENT.

VOLUME 9, NUMBER 13. BRAINERD, MINNESOTA FRIDAY. FEBRUARY 21, 1890. INGERSOLL & WIELAND, PUBLISHERS

TAME RUFFED GROUSE.

The Possibility of Dymesticating a Hitherto Untamable Bird.

I recently witnessed a strange, and to me an almost unprecedented, sight—viz., a perfectly tame, full-grown, ruffed grouse, says a writer in Forest and Stream. It is a fine, large, male bird. I at first, in passing the window on the street, thought it a skilled specimen of the taxidermist's art. I stopped, went into the store, and, upon inquiring of the proprietor, learned its history. It was an acquisition of but a few days' possession. He found it in an almost expiring state from starvation in an unoccupied house in the suburbs of the city. You know of the wild, frenzied flight of these birds in autumn, frequently dashing themselves to death against houses or windows; several have been thus killed in our city this season. This one seems to have dashed through a window of a deserted house, and, not being able to find its way out, was almost in articulo mortis when picked up. With much difficulty it was restored. A drop of water was inserted in its mouth, then a bit of grape pulp, and so little by little nourished until the bird now feeds kindly and confidently from the hand. It is almost omniverous in its tastes—takes clover leaves, raw cabbage, grape, apple, parched corn, or what is known as "pop-corn," corn, birch buds, etc. Solitary, silent starvation seems to have annihilated the wild, unconquerable instinct.

The secret to a door seems here to have been opened to its possible domestication. Its kind-hearted possessor is already inquiring round among the boys for a partner and wife for his solitary pet. Some starving, imprisoned bird may yet be found by the farmer boys beneath the snow-crust after some winter storm and allow us to carry out this curious experiment to domesticate a hitherto deemed incorrigibly untamable bird.

ONLY NINE, YET A HERO.

A Little Black Boy's Gold Medal from the French Government.

A little black boy on the Senegal river, in Africa, is the proud possessor of a gold medal sent to him by the French minister of mariné and colónies. The boy is now 12 years old, and the act which has received this token of recognition from the French government occurred when he was only 9. He lives near Bakel, the chief town, far inland, on the upper Senegal, and he witnessed some of the stirring scenes three years ago, when the Marabout Lamame laid waste a large district and gave French interests in upper Senegal such a lively shaking up.

One day he was with his mother in their straw hut when he saw some of the Marabout soldiers set fire to some huts near by and then start to apply the torch to his own home. He picked up his father's breech-loader, and though he was not strong enough to hold the weapon to his shoulder he shot two of the soldiers dead and the others ran for dear life. The incident is mentioned in the official reports on the French campaign against the Marabout, and the boy now has a medal to show what a plucky 9-year-old he was.

A PRINTER'S EXPERINCE.

A printer, well known in Atlanta, says the Constitution had an experience during the last few days which he is likely to remember. Like many a better man he got hard up in Birmingham last week. He wanted to come to Atlanta and he crawled into the first vacant stock car he saw, and, as it was night, rolled into one corner and went to sleep. He was awakened in a little while by a lot of mules which were driven in on him.

"Scared? Well, I think I was," he says in telling the story. "But I wanted to come, and I thought I could pacify the mules so they would let me alone. I soon found that wouldn't work. They eyed me suspiciously, then bit at me and kicked me until I began to realize that there must be some change or my last days had come. I made up my mind to ride one of the mules. I tried one and was promptly landed against the top of the car. Then another, and another, with the same result. The fourth one was docile, and on that mule's back I rode for a day and a night. It was the most horrible ride anybody had ever experienced, and you need not wonder at my hair turning gray."

North Germany's Old Men.

The German papers have recently spoken of the veteran Johann Dose, aged 106, living near Lubeck, as the oldest man in North Germany, but this is an error. At Bielfeld, in Westphalia, there is a private gentleman named Markus Jordan, who completed his 110th year in a comparatively robust state of health, on the 6th of October. A gold medal bearing a portrait of the late Emperor William, who was an infant when Herr Jerdan was already a youth of eighteen, was presented to him in the name of the present Emperor on the last anniversary of his birth.

Wonderful Cave in California.

Some miners at Homer, Cal., broke into a cave the other day while at work drilling and came upon a chamber about forty feet square and quite as high, the sides and roof of which were chalcedony bulged out in all sorts of grotesque and fantastic shapes. The interior of the cave flashed with the iridescence of a million colored gems. It seemed, says one of the miners, as if all the glittering stars in the firmament had come down to hold high carnival and flash themselves through lenses of variegated hues. Exploring farther they found still more cause for wonder. Petrifactions of animals, birds, and reptiles abounded. There were great owls and monstrous bats, and several snakes as hideous as if endowed with life. Some of these petrifactions, says the Homer Index, have been removed in perfect condition.

A Big Crocodile.

A monster crocodile, measuring 17 feet and 8 inches, was killed in the Houghly river at Utterpara, India, in front of Baboo Joykissen Mookerjee's library. The superintendent of the Dakinshaw powder magazine had tried eight shots unsuccessfully, when Baboo Sivrarayan Mookerjee arrived and lodged three Snider rifle bullets in its head and thus mortally wounded it. The animal, exasperated and nearly done to death, made for the bank and on reaching it was again assailed by Baboo with a fourth bullet, which put an end to its life. The carcass made its appearance on the surface of the river and was dragged ashore by some boatmen, who exhibited it afterward to the inhabitants.

ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS.

Common Sense and Their Own Stomachs Are to Be Strictly Obeyed.

All dyspeptics should avoid anything which they (not others) cannot digest, says the New York Ledger. There are so many causes for and forms of dyspepsia that it is impossible to prescribe one and the same diet for all. Nothing is more disagreeable or useless than to be cautioned against eating this or that, because your neighbor "So and So" cannot eat such things. If we would all study the nature and digestion of food, and remember that air and exercise are as essention as food in promoting good health, we could easily decide upon the diet best suited to our individual needs. The diabetic should abstain from sugar and anything that is converted into sugar in digestion, such as starchy foods, sweet omelets, custards, jellies, sweet sauces, starcy nuts, wines and liquors.

The corpulent should abstain from fat as well as sugar and starch. A diet of whole wheat, milk, vegetables, fruits and lean meat will produce only a normal amount of fatness, while an excess of acids, sweets, spices and shortening keeps the system in an unhealthful condition. Those who can digest fine flour, pastry, sugar and fats become loaded with fat, but are neither strong nor vigorous.

Thin people with weak digestion should also avoid such foods; for thin people are often kept thin by the same food which makes others fat. If they cannot digest the starch, butter and fine flour the system is kept in a feverish, dyspeptic state; they become nervous or go into consumption for no other reason than that the life is burned out by a diet which only feeds the fire and does not renew the tissues.

AFRICAN DWARFS.

A Diminutive People in the Interior of the Dark Continent.

The fact now seems clearly demonstrated that at various spots across the great African continent, within a few degrees north and south of the equator, extending from the Atlantic coast to near the shores of the Albert Nyanza, and perhaps even farther to the east, are scattered communities of these small negroes, all much resembling each other in size, appearance and habits, and dwelling mostly apart from their larger neighbors, by whom they are everywhere surrounded. Our information about them is still scanty, and to obtain more, the London Times thinks, would be a worthy object of ambition for the scientific traveler. In many parts, especially at the West, they are obviously holding their own with difficulty, if not actually disappearing, and there is much about their condition of civilization and the situations in which they are found to induce us to look upon them, like the bushmen of South Africa and the equally diminutive negritos of the Indo-Malayan regions, as the remains of a population which occupied the land before the incoming of the present dominant races. If the account of thr Nasamonians be accepted as historical the river they came to flowing from west to east must have been the Niger and the northward range of the dwarfish people far more extensive twenty-three centuries ago than it is at the present time.

LONG-LIVED FRIENDS.

How Intermarriage Affect the Life and Success of Quakers.

It is quite true that many "Friends" live long, says the London Hospital. It is equally true that certain circumstances in their history militate against long life. Among these latter, intermarriage is perhaps the most important of all. The followers of George Fox have never been very numerous, but until late years they have been extremely exclusive. The inevitable result of that has been extensive intermarriage throughout the whole community. The consequences of the frequency of intermarriage have been, and are still, very evident. Quakers, as a class, are not muscularly robust; many of them are decidedly anæmic, and not a few are mentally feeble.

Yet, in spite of these practices and serious drawbacks, the Friends, as a class, do more than their proportion of the world's serious business, and they manage to attain a high average of longevity. Now, this is exactly the kind of fact that true medical science likes to get hold of and interrogate and learn from. What is the reason, asks the sensible man, why the Quakers, with so many undoubted disadvantages, attain such a high average of success in all that constitutes worthy life, and also succeed in enjoying their success to an exceptionally old age? The reason, we are convinced, is to be found in their quiet habits and disciplined life. An ordinary doctor, or even layman, would probably have felt much more interest in the subject at that point if we would have been able to affirm that the Quakers owed their success and long life to certain drugs, as, for example, to arsenic, phosphorus, strychnia, and the like, or to certain methods of feeding, as vegetarianism, or meat-eating, or fruit-eating, or wine-drinking, or teetotalism, or smoking, and so on. But we submit that that shows a want of real mental capacity. For what, after all, is the true importance of the subject? Does it not consist in the undoubted character of the results? The results are really the things to be considered.

As a matter of fact the Quakers are successful in life. As a matter of fact they do live long. Then, surely, true science will not curl the lip of scorn because these results are obtained by what may be called "natural and simple" processes instead of by elaborate preparations or out-of-the-way methods.

SHAKING HANDS.

The Latest English Style as Adopted by New York Anglomaniacs.

The new fashion of shaking hands is absurd, says the Brooklyn Eagle, but it has been adopted, and it will be some years before society is emancipated from its grotesque influence. The old fashion of shaking hands was good enough and simple enough, but the universal desire for a change has abolished it. Formerly when two people met their arms swung forward naturally, their hands met, and the arms dropped back in place. The mere act of shaking hands was as natural as that of taking a seat or lifting a book. It is far different now. The whole ceremony is instinct with deep thought and careful elaboration. A man and a woman meet and both burst into a smile of welcome. Then the woman swings her right arm, which is perfectly rigid, straight out from the shoulder and directly in front of her. When the hand has reached the height of her chin she holds it there, with the thumb toward the face and the palm turned slightly outward. The man who has been approaching her gently takes hold of the hand a good deal as one might grasp the rung of a ladder. He bows slightly, as though intending to press his lips to the lady's hand, and then lets go abruptly and drops his hand to his side. Then the woman drops her stiffened arm and the ceremony is over. This is English. It first appeared in Punch about six years ago and it has since then been extensively copied in British society. Its full adoption in New York occurred at the McAllister ball, where the society ladies received the 1,400 guests in precisely this fashion during the evening.

Paris Horse Abattoirs.

A visit to one of the horse abattoirs in Paris is not calculated to make one a confirmed hippophagist. A journalist visited one of the largest of these slaughter houses early one morning and saw the sort of animals that are thought fit for human food in Paris. This abattoir is in the south of Paris, in the Boulevard de l'Hopital, not many yards from the famous manufacture des Gobelins. There were forty horses waiting to be slaughtered. They were decrepit old invalids, lame, spavined, diseased, and fleshless old hacks, suffering all the infirmities which afflict the equine race. When a horse becomes useless for everything else he is taken to these abattoirs and killed, unless he dies on the way. Some of those in the stables were so rickety that they could not stand up.

The Length of the Day.

At London, England, and Bremen, Prussia, the longest day has sixteen and a half hours. At Stockholm, Sweden, it is eighteen and a half hours in length. At Hamburg, in Germany, and Dantzic, in Prussia, the longest day has seventeen hours. At St. Petersburg, Russia, and Tobolsk, Siberia, the longest is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours. At Tornea, Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours in length. At Wardburry, Norway, the longest day lasts from May 21 to July 22, without interruption, that is to say the sun is never set in that time, and in Spitsbergen the longest day is three and a half months.

At Philadelphia the longest day is somewhat less than fifteen hours, and in Montreal, Canada, it is sixteen.

Roscoe Whitcomb of Waldo, Mo., has a shepherd dog which he prizes highly. One day last week a colt that was fastened by a halter got his feet through the stall and fell in such a manner that he was choking to death. The dog was in the barn, saw the trouble, and, running to the house, caught Mrs. Whitcomb by the dress and attempted to pull her out of doors. The dog would run toward the barn and then catch Mrs. Whitcomb by her clothes. She finally went to the barn, arriving just in time to save the colt.

A Thief Detected.

"I'll tell you how I ran down a thief recently," said a man in the Lewiston, Maine, police-station. "I lost $80 in money. I did not say a word. I did not even tell my wife. I hardly told myself. The other day, two years after the occurrence, a woman in my neighborhood said: 'By the way, did you ever find out who stole your $80?' I looked her in the face and said: 'I never did until just this minute.' She turned as pale as a ghost, and the result was that she paid me $80 and interest on the same for two years."

The ladies of the W. C. T. U., will give a tea at the residence of Mrs. F. L. Matteson, North Ninth street, on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 25th.—Literary exercises at 3:45 and tea at 5 P. M. All are invited.

The county superintendent has this week issued second grade certificates to Miss Blanche Scougale, Miss Belle Graham and Miss Rosemond Neidhart. Third grade certificates were issued to Mrs. Della M. Curtis and Miss Jessie P. Gibb.

Prof. Gould is on the sick list this week, and Supt. Wilson has charge of the high school department. Miss Bessie Mulrine, also a teacher in the city schools, is confined to the house on account of illness caused from falling down stairs, and her department is in charge of Miss Nettie McCulloch.

As train No. 5 was pulling out of Crow Wing Tuesday noon, an axle under the second class coach broke and the wheels ran for some considerable distance on the ties. The peculiarity of the accident was that the axle should give out just as the train was starting up instead of when the train was under full motion, but probably loss of life was averted by it. The passengers were brought to Brainerd in the baggage car.

On Sunday morning last as the church bells were pealing out their morning chimes fire was discovered in the attic of Mrs. Fanny Mulrine's residence on Eighth street north. The fire department responded as quickly as possible, and the flames were subdued, but not until the roof and upper portion of the building was gutted. The household goods were nearly all removed, but, of course, in a somewhat damaged condition. This is the second fire Mrs. Mulrine has had inside of four months in the same building.

The sixth annual ball of Pine City Lodge, No. 81, B. of L. F., will be given on the evening of Easter Thursday, April 10th, and already the members of that organization are making arrangements for a grand good time on that occasion. The committee of arrangements contains the following names: J. F. McGinnis, chairman, Geo. Watts, E. Simmons, Geo. Hass and E. Efner.—The reputation which this organization has established for first-class parties in all particulars by their previous efforts will insure them a large attendance.

The State Fireman's Association which meets in Brainerd in June will bring many people to our city from all over the State, and it is desirable to make the meeting one of the most successful in its history. The department of this city will have matters in charge and have already set the ball rolling. The council will be called upon to make a contribution towards expenses, and there should be no hesitancy in their so doing when the time comes. Brainerd has one of the best volunter departments in the State and they deserve to be encouraged in this undertaking. It goes without saying that the coming meeting of the State Firemen in Brainerd will be one of the most enjoyable in the history of the organization.

Joy Turned to Sorrow.

A peculiarly sad incident occurred in this city on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. A Dean, on 9th street north. On that evening Miss Lillie Dean and James J. Bulmer were united in marriage, at the residence of the bride's mother, in the presence of invited guests. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock which joined the young people for life, and how little they thought that that life meant but three hours of wedded happiness. The guests departed at a little before 11 o'clock. The bride and groom sought their room and retired for the night and but ten or fifteen minutes had elapsed when the bride was alarmed by the peculiar breathing of her husband, and what seemed to her a gasping for breath. She spoke to him but no answer came and she arose hurriedly and turned up the light and returned to his side to find him dead. The alarm was given and assistance called but of no avail. The cause of death was heart disease and the sudden termination of his life was due to the excitement incident to the wedding. The case is certainly a sad one. Mr. Bulmer was a highly respected young man, 28 years of age, and had been in the employ of the Northern Pacific company here for two years. His parents, who reside in Canada, were notified by wire of the death of their son. The remains were taken to Marshal, Mich., on the noon train today, accompanied by the sorrowing wife, Mrs. Dean, and Mr. and Mrs. Brown, where they will be laid to rest.

A Republican City Ticket.

The matter of placing a republican city ticket in the field at the coming municipal election is receiving considerably attention these days, and while no move has as yet been made in that direction it is quite likely there will be if the sentiment continues to be expressed as favorably as has been done during the past week. If such a step is taken, and it is high time for it, it will be by concerted action of the republicans of Brainerd and by no clique, clan or ring, as will be seen later on. In a movement of this kind to insure success harmony must prevail and the selection of candidates must be practically unanimous. The DISPATCH will favor no movement in which the majority of the republican voters of this city do not have a voice, and if it is considered advisable to nominate a ticket a mass meeting will be called at some public place and due notice will be given so that every republican voter may have a chance to express himself. We desire that the republicans throughout the city canvass the subject, get at the real sentiment and act accordingly. In our next issue we will have more to say in regard to the matter.

Do not be Deceived.

Brother Stivers in his yesterday's paper says a "secret meeting" was held a few nights ago by a few republicans. As usual he is mistaken, for the meeting which he refers to was no more secret than any little gathering would be where several gentlemen are discussing matters of interest. Bro. Stivers would have been as welcome there as any man present. The fact that politics was discussed, however, was enough for him—inasmuch as it was republican politics. Do not be deceived, Bro. Stivers, nor try to deceived others into believing that there will be any "star-chamber" business, for if the republicans desire to put up a party ticket it will be done openly and by a majority of the voters. Candidates or possible candidates have not been suggested, mentioned, or thought of as yet.

A Very Successful Ball.

The occasion of the masquerade ball given by the members of the Chenquatana Club, of this city, on Monday evening was one of the most delightful events of the season. The Armory was artistically decorated and long before the time for the opening, the seats in the gallery and those reserved below for the spectators were taken and standing room was at a premium. At 9:15 the grand march took place, and it was indeed a gorgeous affair in which probably one hundred couple participated.—There were rich and expensive costumes, and they ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous. "McGinty's" band was also a feature, and a decided hit. The attendance was so large and many of the costumes so elaborate that it would be an impossibility for us to undertake to describe them. The members of the club can congratulate themselves on the successful termination of the event and the success of future entertainments of this class by the club is assured.

As Was Expected.

Dr. J H. Howes and J. H. Koop returned on Tuesday from the Mille Lacs Indian reservation where they went at the request of Agent Shuler to investigate the reports of death and destitution and report little or no foundation for the alarming reports. But few deaths have occurred from the grippe and sickness among them is no more than usual. Dr. Howes says the Indians were found to be pursuing their usual mode of life, and were actually shipping considerable quantities of fish from the winter catching through the ice. Undoubtedly less exertion than usual has been made towards supporting themselves owing to their high anticipations, but there is nothing existing, in fact, to justify the loud wails they made for help. As a matter of fact, most of the Mille Lackers have decided to take their lands in severality on the reservation where they now are, instead of removing to the White Earth reservation, so that they had no reason to expect immediate benefits.

As to Delinquent Taxes.

In this issue the list of delinquent taxes on real estate in the counties of Crow Wing and Cass for the year 1888 appears. Every real estate owner in these two counties should look it over carefully as it is often the case that some piece of property that he has intended to pay the taxes on has been forgotten or overlooked and if so such descriptions will be found advertised for sale. Errors in names will creep in although the description is always correct, because many times land is sold and the name on the assessment rolls is not changed. Errors also occur at times by the piece not being checked off. The extra cost for paying taxes before the sale is thirty cents more than the total amount shown in the list to cover cost of publishing and docketing. Additional costs will be added in May on account of sale, etc. Extra copies of the DISPATCH containing the list can be obtained at this office.

K. P. Anniversary.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the order of Knights of Pythias was celebrated by White Cross Lodge at their Castle Hall in this city, on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst., and it was pronounced by all present as a most enjoyable occasion. About 250 persons, including knights and invited guests were in attendance, the Grand Chancellor of the state, Hon. B. F. Stahl, of St. Paul, honoring the occasion by his presence. The entertainment was was of a literary and musical character of superior merit, and was enjoyed by all present. Grand Chancellor Stahl delivered the principal address of the evening, in which he reviewed the causes which led to the establishment of the order, the benefits to be derived by membership, and the remarkable growth and progress made during the 26 years of its existence. Hon. W. A. Fleming delivered a short address of welcome to the invited guests on behalf of the lodge. At the conclusion of the literary exercises refreshments were served in a manner which reflected great credit on those having this part of the entertainment in charge. After some time spent in pleasant social intercourse the company dispersed, all declaring themselves as more than satisfied with the evenings entertainment.

In this connection it would not be amiss to add a few words concerning the remarkable growth of the order. Twenty-six years ago, on the 19th of Feb, Justus H. Rathbone and four others established the first lodge of Knights of Pythias, and to-day, only a quarter of a century later, the order has grown to be one of the most powerful of secret societies in existence, almost every town and hamlet in the United States having a lodge, the order being especially strong on the Pacific slope. White Cross Lodge of this city was established six years ago last October, and to-day has nearly 125 members in good standing, among whom are the best, most prominent and most influential men in Brainerd. It is an organization of which its members should be proud, and we wish it and the order continued success and prosperity.

Doings of the Council.

The regular session of the city council on Monday evening was attended by all the members except Ald. Howe, Koop and Pres. Wheatley, and the meeting opened with Ald. Gardner in the chair. Bills were allowed as follows:

J. W. Jones, hauling hose cart	$2 00
J. S. Gardner	6 10
D. D. Clark & Co., supplies	17 28
Brainerd Tribune, printing	7 05
Dr. L. M. Roberts, health officer	25 00
Ed. Breheney, flushing hydrants	6 00

The street committee and the electric light committee were each granted further time to report on matters referred to them. A motion to keep all children under fifteen year of age off the streets after nine o'clock P. M. unless accompanied by parents or guardians, was made and carried.—Ordinance No. 87, prohibiting the throwing of missiles and the using offensive language in streets and alleys, was adopted. Policeman Johnson's bill for three days pay while ill in December was referred to a committee. A communication from Leon E. Lum, was read as follows, and the council adjourned:

BRAINERD, Minn., Feb. 12, 1890.
To the City Council of the City of Brainerd.

Gentlemen: You will please take notice that I am the owner of and entitled to the rents due to the Brainerd Water company, having purchased the rights, title, property and franchise of said company at sheriff's sale on the 16th day of Jan. 1890. You will therefore pay all rents due said company from said city to me.

Respectfully,
LEON E. LUM.

Club Life in the Metropolis.

"An Ocular Delusion" is the title of a bright social study in serial shape, which will begin in the New York Ledger of March 1st. The story holds the mirror up to club life in the metropolis, and touches lightly but with the masterly and suggestive stroke of the etching hand, some of the more distinctive sides of New York society life. Several of the characters are so startlingly typical that they may be taken for any one of scores of the members of the "Four Hundred." The hero is a fine combination of manliness, ready ingenuity and audacity, a youth with a rare amount of phosphorus in his cerebral gray matter and an equally generous amount of red corpuscles in his viens—a character which the author has elaborated with sympathetic interest, and which, according to the impression given by the advance sheets, represents an oarsman of a recent crew of a leading American college. The author, by the way, is that brilliant young newspaper worker, Frank Howard Howe, son of the late postmaster-general, Timothy, F. Howe, of Wisconsin.

Gull River News.

"Occasional" was too busy last week, stirring bear's oil with a whale bone, to appear in public.

Mrs. Crocker is lying dangerously sick, with neuralgia of the heart.

Miss Mary Thompson has been spending a few days in the Lhafer lumber camp visiting her sister.

Messrs. Yates, Bull, Hallet, Burgoyne and others came down from the camps to spend Sunday with their families.

A subscription is being taken to print the names of all the people in town, which list is to be presented to "Regular" with the hope that his spelling will improve.

"Toot" Mooers is having a busy winter keeping their lumber camp supplied with the necessaries of life. Mrs. Campbell, of Brainerd, and Mrs. Mooers made the trip with him last week.

Our school will have a "Washington Day" and unfurl the stars and stripes above the school building on Friday. That is right. If Boston, Chicago and St. Paul consider that the proper thing to do, we certainly do not wish to be left behind. Our teachers merit our thanks, and have them, too, for thus keeping the Gull River school up to the mark.

A "dark horse" is sometimes heard of about the time of political conventions but they seem out of season now. However, one got up here from Brainerd Monday, and though it came at a furious pace, was stopped and securely tied before reaching the school house. It was a great Risk, but no one was hurt. The driver was obliged to get help to get the animal home.

The sudden change to cooler weather is going to be rather hard on the mustaches of some of our young gentlemen. Some that were supposed to be sprouting, but which had not appeared, have, during the past week, suddenly sprung up and are now visible to the naked eye. We do not know what to advise, boys, unless you put a layer of jewelers' cotton over them until the weather moderates again. OCCASIONAL.

The Georgia Minstrels.

The Georgia Minstrels drew a crowded house last night, and the unanimous verdict of all those present was that it is the best minstrel show that has visited Ohio in a number of years. Billy Kersands and Billy Farrel, the two best colored comedians in the business kept the audience in an uproar whenever they appeared. They are a whole entertainment in themselves. The singing of the Crescent City Quartette was one of the finest features of the programme. The "Drum Major's Dream" was excellent, and the "Majors" performed their parts like clock-work. W. G. Huff's exhibition on the harmonica was the best we have ever listened to. The company is one of the best on the road, and should the Georgia's ever ever come to Chio again they will be greeted with another packed house.—Chico Enterprise.

THE green postage stamps after tomorrow will cease to be and all future requisitions for 2-cent stamps will be filled by the government with the new stamps which are of a carmine color.

THE Motley Register appears this week under the proprietorship of John T. Drawz. The Register is above the average country paper and would be a credit to a town many times the size of Motley.

THERE is talk in the Third district of running Joel Heatwole for Congress. The people in that district could go a long ways and not find a man as well able to represent them as the editor of the Northfield News.

THE people at Fergus Falls are endeavoring to secure the reopening of the land office at that place, and with good prospects. What's the matter of agitating again the removal of the St. Cloud land office to Brainerd where it rightfully belongs?

THE people of Cass county are clamoring for the publication of a financial statement so they may know just what has been done with the funds and how things stand at present. The commissioners have it in their power to publish a statement and as the law requires it, it is their duty to do so.

Explanatory.

On account of the crowded condition of our columns with official advertising, we are obliged to print a half sheet supplement which contains the local and other news. The tax list requires one more publication and then we will have ample room to give our many readers the usual amount of reading matter. The list is published entirely in the paper for the reason that it will in that way become a permanent record for all time, and will not be lost as easily as a supplement.

Want the Finances Shown Up.

A correspondent of the Motley Register from Cass county who is evidently after the commissioners publishes the following under the head of "Enquirer" in the last issue of that paper:

I have a few questions to ask in regard to matters over here in Cass county. Of course we will admit (for argument's sake, at least) that our present members of the county board are for retrenchment and reform, at least so I am told on good authority, and hence ? ? ?.

In the year 1888 the full tax levied in Cass county was about $10,000: in the year 1889 it is about $12,000, and the county is much smaller now.—Where does that extra $2,000 go to? I fail to find that the state and school tax is any greater than in the former year. No extra levy is necessary for the new schools, for there are $3,300 belonging to this fund in the Crow Wing county treasury. Rumor says there are several thousand dollars of school money lying around Gull River, and if so, why don't the county fathers get it out and show it up?—In other counties of the state a financial statement is published annually, showing the county's standing and the business transacted during the year. Why is this not done in this county? And lastly. How can a resident of Crow Wing county legally serve on the Cass county board?

Minnneapolis is Frightened.

The Minneapolis Lumberman is very much disturbed over the recent developments in the Weyerhauser syndicate deal by which they are to locate a mammoth plant in this city. The fact that when the arrangements are completed and opperations are commenced at this point it will forever place Minneapolis in the shade as a lumbering center is enough to put the people of that city on their mettle. This extract, from the columns of that paper, shows how badly they dislike to admit the facts:

There has for a long time been a current rumor that is conceded to have been an element of probability about it to the effect that the Weyerhauser syndicate would erect a big mill at Brainerd and acquire large tracts of pine land in that vicinity.—The Brainerd people have all the time referred to these posibilities as a fact settled beyond all dispute instead of as a rumor.

Following this is another article intended to show why it would be the heighth of folly for any one to build mills at Brainerd, but a careful perusal of the article dispells the terrible hallucination. The article is as follows:

The Gull River Lumber company, at Gull River and Curtis & Lawrence, whose mill is at Motley, Minn., are not to operate their mills during the coming season. This conclusion has been reached in view of the fact that the lumber trade in North Dakota, upon which these manufacturers must be necessarily dependent, is pretty sure to be limited during the coming season. The owners of these mills are probably wise in their conclusions.—The circumstance only demonstrates, however, that manufacturers who are dependent upon a single market are at a disadvantage by the side of the lumbermen located at other points, where if one market fails another becomes available. The day will undoubtedly come when there will be business enough for the mill men now located on the Northern Pacific, but until it comes it will be folly for Mr. Weyerhauser or anybody else to build mills at Brainerd or any other point where the product must be distrbuted over the line of a single road.

Half Hour Reduction in Time.

The reduction of one-half an hour in time, giving earlier hour of arrival in Chicago, over the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway, insures connections with all fast line trains leaving Chicago in the morning for Pittsburgh, New York, Washington, Cincinnati, Louisville, and the East and South.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Crow Wing. } ss

On this 20th day of January A. D. 1890, personally came before me Louis Tache, Auditor of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, who being first duly sworn deposes and says: That the foregoing is a true and correct list of delinquent taxes upon real estate within the county of Cass and State of Minnesota for the year 1888, which became delinquent on the 1st day of June A. D. 1889, and remaining delinquent on the 20th day of January A. D. 1890.

LOUIS TACHE, Auditor Crow Wing County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me me this 20th day of January, 1890.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies, but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

In its Worst Form.

BENTON, LAF. CO., WIS., Dec., '88.

Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 1½ years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenigs Nerve Tonic cured him. 67

St. Francis Wis. Oct 24, 1888

A member of my congregation used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with good results. The patient was so nervous that he could not find sleep for weeks. He suffered from the most intense anxiety which bordered on insanity. I gave the person some of Koenig's Nerve Tonic and he continued to use it. The appetite returned gradually, the anxiety disappeared the headache left, and to day the sufferer, who had almost despaired, is enjoying excellent health.

Bern. Elskamp, Pastor.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Harry P. Cragg and Kate Cragg, his wife, mortgagors, to The National Building Loan and Protective Union, mortgagee, dated the first day of October, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of October, A. D. 1888, at 9:10 o'clock a. m., in book I of Mortgages, on page 10 on which there is claimed to be past due, at the date of this notice, the amount of thirty dollars ($30), being the interest and premium for nine months and the mortgagee elects to consider the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable and therefore there is due thereon the sum of four hundred and thirty dollars, ($430.00), and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Notice is hereby given, That by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House in the City of Brainerd, in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, and costs and expenses of sale, including twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, for foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at a point sixty-two and one-half (62½) feet east of the northwest corner of Block number seventy-seven (77), in the First Addition to the City of Brainerd, properly the First Addition to the Town of Brainerd, according to the plat of said Addition of record in the Registry of Deeds of said County, thence running south one hundred fifty (150) feet, thence east thirty-seven and one-half (37½) feet, thence north one hundred fifty (150) feet, thence west thirty-seven and one half (37½) feet, to the place of beginning. Being a part of Lots thirteen (13) to eighteen (18) in said Block.

GEORGE N. DAY,

The green postage stamps after tomorrow will cease to be and all future requisitions for 2-cent stamps will be filled by the government with the new stamps which are of a carmine color.

The Motley Register appears this week under the proprietorship of John T. Drawz. The Register is above the average country paper and would be a credit to a town many times the size of Motley.

There is talk in the Third district of running Joel Heatwole for Congress. The people in that district could go a long ways and not find a man as well able to represent them as the editor of the Northfield News.

The people at Fergus Falls are endeavoring to secure the reopening of the land office at that place, and with good prospects. What's the matter of agitating again the removal of the St. Cloud land office to Brainerd where it rightfully belongs?

The people of Cass county are clamoring for the publication of a financial statement so they may know just what has been done with the funds and how things stand at present. The commissioners have it in their power to publish a statement and as the law requires it, it is their duty to do so.

Explanatory.

On account of the crowded condition of our columns with official advertising, we are obliged to print a half sheet supplement which contains the local and other news. The tax list requires one more publication and then we will have ample room to give our many readers the usual amount of reading matter. The list is published entirely in the paper for the reason that it will in that way become a permanent record for all time, and will not be lost as easily as a supplement.

Want the Finances Shown Up.

A correspondent of the Motley Register from Cass county who is evidently after the commissioners publishes the following under the head of "Enquirer" in the last issue of that paper:

I have a few questions to ask in regard to matters over here in Cass county. Of course we will admit (for argument's sake, at least) that our present members of the county board are for retrenchment and reform, at least so I am told on good authority, and hence ? ? ?.

In the year 1888 the full tax levied in Cass county was about $10,000: in the year 1889 it is about $12,000, and the county is much smaller now.—Where does that extra $2.000 go to ? I fail to find that the state and school tax is any greater than in the former year. No extra levy is necessary for the new schools, for there are $3,300 belonging to this fund in the Crow Wing county treasury. Rumor says there are several thousand dollars of school money lying around Gull River, and if so, why don't the county fathers get it out and show it up ?—In other counties of the state a financial statement is published annually, showing the county's standing and the business transacted during the year. Why is this not done in this county ? And lastly. How can a resident of Crow Wing county legally serve on the Cass county board ?

Minnneapolis is Frightened.

The Minneapolis Lumberman is very much disturbed over the recent developments in the Weyerhauser syndicate deal by which they are to locate a mammoth plant in this city. The fact that when the arrangements are completed and opperations are commenced at this point it will forever place Minneapolis in the shade as a lumbering center is enough to put the people of that city on their mettle. This extract, from the columns of that paper, shows how badly they dislike to admit the facts:

There has for a long time been a current rumor that is conceded to have been an element of probability about it to the effect that the Weyerhauser syndicate would erect a big mill at Brainerd and acqure large tracts of pine land in that vicinity.—The Brainerd people have all the time referred to these posibilities as a fact settled beyond all dispute instead of as a rumor.

Following this is another article intended to show why it would be the heighth of folly for any one to build mills at Brainerd, but a careful perusal of the article dispells the terrible hallucination. The article is as follows:

The Gull River Lumber company, at Gull River and Curtis & Lawrence, whose mill is at Motley, Minn., are not to operate their mills during the coming season. This conclusion has been reached in view of the fact that the lumber trade in North Dakota, upon which these manufacturers must be necessarily dependent, is pretty sure to be limited during the coming season. The owners of these mills are probably wise in their conclusions.—The circumstance only demonstrates, however, that manufacturers who are dependent upon a single market are at a disadvantage by the side of the lumbermen located at other points, where if one market fails another becomes available. The day will undoubtedly come when there will be business enough for the mill men now located on the Northern Pacific, but until it comes it will be folly for Mr. Weyerhauser or anybody else to build mills at Brainerd or any other point where the product must be distrbuted over the line of a single road.

Half Hour Reduction in Time.

The reduction of one-half an hour in time, giving earlier hour of arrival in Chicago, over the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway, insures connections with all fast line trains leaving Chicago in the morning for Pittsburgh, New York, Washington, Cincinnati, Louisville, and the East and South.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss
County of Crow Wing. }

On this 20th day of January A. D. 1890, personally came before me Louis Tache, Auditor of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, who being first duly sworn deposes and says: That the foregoing is a true and correct list of delinquent taxes upon real estate within the county of Cass and State of Minnesota for the year 1888, which became delinquent on the 1st day of June A. D. 1889, and remaining delinquent on the 20th day of January A. D. 1890.

LOUIS TACHE,
Auditor Crow Wing County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me me this 20th day of January, 1890.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies, but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

PASTOR KOENIG'S TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC

In Its Worst Form.

BENTON, LAF. CO., WIS., Dec., '88.

Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 1½ years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenigs Nerve Tonic cured him. 67

St. Francis Wis. Oct 24, 1888

A member of my congregation used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with good results. The patient was so nervous that he could not find sleep for weeks. He suffered from the most intense anxiety which bordered on insanity. I gave the person some of Koenig's Nerve Tonic and he continued to use it. The appetite returned gradually, the anxiety disappeared the headache left, and to day the sufferer, who had almost despaired, is enjoying excellent health.

Bern. Elskamp, Pastor.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Harry P. Cragg and Kate Cragg, his wife, mortgagors, to The National Building Loan and Protective Union, mortgagee, dated the first day of October, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of October, A. D. 1888, at 9:10 o'clock a. m., in book I of Mortgages, on page 10 on which there is claimed to be past due, at the date of this notice, the amount of thirty dollars ($30), being the interest and premium for nine months and the mortgagee elects to consider the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable and therefore there is due thereon the sum of four hundred and thirty dollars, ($430.00), and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Notice is hereby given, That by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House in the City of Brainerd, in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, and costs and expenses of sale, including twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, for foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at a point sixty-two and one-half (62½) feet east of the northwest corner of Block number seventy-seven (77), in the First Addition to the City of Brainerd, (properly the First Addition to the Town of Brainerd), according to the plat of said Addition of record in the Registry of Deeds of said County, thence running south one hundred fifty (150) feet, thence east thirty-seven and one-half (37½) feet, thence north one hundred fifty (150) feet, thence west thirty-seven and one half (37½) feet, to the place of beginning. Being a part of Lots thirteen (13) to eighteen (18) in said Block.

THERE is a mild panic in the money market of the Argentine Republic, but as there is a disturbance there of some kind with every full moon, no unusual surprise is manifested.

MARRIAGE ought to be a success among the Chinese peasants. They need about $1 a month for food, and an economical man or woman can get along a whole year with $5 worth of clothes.

AN English scientist propounds the theory that the grippe epidemic arose from the contamination of the air by the decaying bodies of the million Chinese drowned in the great floods of 1888.

LYMAN Trumbull, ex-governor, ex-secretary of state, ex-supreme judge, ex-member of congress, and ex-United States senator, is still practicing law in Chicago at the age of 77. He is in good health and his legal ability is as good as ever.

THE Austrien Count Aloys Karolyi, who recently died, left a fortuue of $2,500,000 which produced an income of nearly $200,000 a year. He owned an immense estate over which he reigned as a regular old-fashioned tyrant.

THE refusal of a Detroit street car company to receive coppers from passengers brought out the fact not generally known that one, two, three and five cent pieces are legal tenders up to twenty-five cents, while ten, twenty, twenty-five and fifty cent pieces are legal tenders up to ten dollars.

THE cable dispatch announcing that Mrs. Langtry's present illness is due to the impression that she has lost her beauty is not based on a thorough knowledge of woman's nature and modern progress. There is no reason why any handsome woman should show signs of age before she is 50, provided she understands something about art.

THE power of gold is phenomenal. The discovery of gold in California gave population and a new life to the Pacific coast. Such a discovery in Australia populated a continent, and in South Africa is making the Transvaal predominantly English. And now advices from Demarara represent that it was only the discovery of gold which prevented an insurrection.

IT IS a law of good society in China that young widows never marry again. Widowhood is therefore held in the highest esteem, and the older the widow grows the more agreeable does her position become with the people. Should she reach fifty years, she may, by applying to the emperor, get a sum of money with which to buy a tablet on which is engraved the sum of her virtues. The tablet is placed over the door at the principal entrance to her house.

MARIAN HARLAND, the friend and helper of women everywhere, has taken up the work of restoring the ruined monument marking the burial place of Mary, the mother of George Washington. One hundred years ago this venerable woman was interred in private grounds near Fredericksburg, Va. In 1833 the corner stone of an imposing memorial was laid by President Andrew Jackson. A patriotic citizen of New York assumed the pious task, single handed, but meeting with financial disaster was compelled to abandon it.

What is said to be the most powerful electric light in existence has recently been put into operation in a lighthouse at Householm, on the dangerous coast of Jutland. It is of 2,000,000 candle power, and mounted on a tower about 200 feet high, and can be seen at a distance of thirty-five miles even in rainy weather. Besides the lights there are two great sirens, one about 650 yards and the other about three miles from the tower, which are sounded in foggy weather by electrical connection with the same currents that supply the light.

PROF BUXLEY asserts that the proper weight of man is 154 pounds, made up as follows; muscles and their appurtenances, 68 pounds; skeleton, 24 pounds; skin, 10½ pounds; fat, 28 pounds; brain, 3 pounds; abdominal viscera, 11 pounds; blood which would drain from the body, 7 pounds. The heart of a man should beat 75 times in a minute and he should breathe 15 times a minute. In twenty-four hours he should vitiate 1,750 cubic feet of pure air to the extent of 1 per cent.—a man, therefore, of the weight mentioned should have 800 cubic feet of well-ventilated space.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

The coroner's jury in the Tracy fire at Washington has rendered a verdict that the cause of the fire is unknown, and that the loss of life was largely due to its exceptionally rapid spread.

RECORD OF CASUALTIES.

At Staunton, Va., a locomotive ran into a hand car in the suburbs, killing two men and seriously injuring six others.

It is estimated that the loss by the university fire at Toronto will be $1,000,000. This includes the library, valued at $100,000, and all equipment, which was generally of the most modern style.

George Ellison, Charles Reynolds, brakemen, and Bruce Raversox, a boy, were killed in a collission between freight trains at Bairdstown, Ohio. Considerable stock was killed and the loss will be heavy.

Caspar Sprangler, on old-time resident of Helena, Mont., died at Placer from injuries inflicted by a premature blast of powder. He was a miner, and was working in one of his own mines at the time of the accident.

5 The large brick and stone building at the corner of Adams and Market streets Chicago owned by J. V. Farwell & Co., caught fire and before the flames could be subdued, the southern half of it was gutted. This portion of the building was occupied by Taylor Bros., dealers in hats and caps, and Work Bros., dealers in clothing and uniforms. Loss, about $450,000.

A fire broke out in the dry goods establishment of D. Davidson & Co., at Sioux City, Io., the fire department was out promptly in response to the alarm, but the flames were under such headway that one-half of the establishment was burned out and the other half gutted. The water and smoke drenched the large stock completely, and the loss is variously estimated from $25,000 to $30,000.

J. W. Kerr, a farming living 20 miles southeast of Wichita, Ka., was awakened and found his house on fire. He was in the second story, and on the lower floor were his three children. In the dense smoke he carried his wife to a window and dropped her to the ground. Kerr followed her and found that the children had perished. Everything was burned. He put his wife in a carriage and took her two miles to a neighbor's, They had only night clothes on, and the exposure, it is feared, will prove fatal to Mrs. Kerr.

SINFUL SIFTINGS.

It is rumored that the agent of a well known Liverpool lumber firm at Quebec is short in his accounts between $100,000 and $200,000. He has disappeared.

Suits have been entered in Chicago by the county of Cook against all the "boodlers" returned, escaped or compromised, for $200,000, in trespass.

Harry Lebos, a dissolute character of Reading, Pa., shot and fatally wounded his wife. Daniel Fisher, Mrs. Lebos' father, died of heart disease immediately after the shooting. Lebos escaped.

A. Barenther, a member of the firm of Hume & Barenther, attorneys at law of Oshkosh, Wis., has absconded with some $3,000 or $4,000 belonging to the clients of the firm. His family received word from Toronto, Ont., stating Barenther had arrived safely in the queen's dominion.

During a recess in the trial of William Mayne, on the trial of assault to murder Bertha Johnson, at San Diego, Cal., the prosecuting witness, shot Mayne three times, taking effect in the head, neck and shoulder, inflicting probably fatal wounds. Mayne was sitting in a chair in the court room when the woman passed back of him, turned quickly, drew a revolver from under her handkerchief and fired. She was arrested.

Dr. Marvin Fosdick was sitting by a table at his home in Pawpaw, when some unknown person fired both barrels of a double-barreled shot-gun through the window, the charge entering Fosdick's head, neck and shoulders. He still lives and may recover. The affair is surrounded in mysteries and no clue has yet been discovered to the perpetrator of the outrage.

Philip Brammer, a weak-minded and inoffensive farmer, at Bloomigton, Ind., was seized, while on his way home, by masked men. They took him to an orchard, tied him to a tree and whipped him almost to insensibility. Brammer was left, covered with blood, lying on the ground and was nearly frozen before he recovered sufficiently to go home, where he arrived about daylight.

At New York some unknown person threw a bomb into an alley-way on Elizabeth street. The missle exploded blowing down a brick wall, and part of a wooden fence, and shattering a window in the rear house. No person was found in the place and nobody was injured. The police are investigating the matter.

Thomas Kane was hanged in the jail-yard at Toronto, Can., for the murder of his wife in November last. He met his fate resolutely. The murder for which Kane suffered the death penalty was of the most atrocious character. He and his wife had been drinking and quarreled. He attacked her, and, after pummeling her body in a shocking manner, knocked her brains out with a flat iron. The murderer was a plasterer.

The Cincinnati Cremation society has discharged its superintendent, Valentine Heiman, and he has been put under bond by a magistrate to answer to the charge of grand larceny. The articles stolen were coffins. At the crematory the bodies are removed from the casket, and it has been the understanding that the caskets were broken up and burned. Recently it has been discovered that, instead of burning them the thrifty superintendent has sold them, sometimes as low as $1 each, to thrifty village undertakers.

Bert Stoner, the settling clerk of Chicago, said to have cheated his employer, supposed to be the board of trade operators, B. P. Hutchinson, out of some thousands of dollars, was back to work in Mr. Hutchinson's office. The report was that some weeks ago after bilking "Old Hutch" by a ridiculously simple expedient, young Stoner suddenly took a journey to Canada. Upon what basis the clerk and the operator now resume their old relations could not be readily ascertained. Both of them flatly declined to talk.

1 Miss Mary Dietzen was shot at Hastings, Minn., by Louis Sommers, Both parties are respectable young people and aged eighteen and twenty-one years respectively. The cause assigned is jealousy, the young lady refusing to marry Sommers. Miss Dietzen was walking up the street with a young lady named Miss Emma Link, when they met Sommers, who, without saying a word, shot at her three times with effect, the bullets passing through her back and in the region of the heart. She expired almost instantly, after exclaiming "Oh, Lou." At last accounts the officers were in hunt of Sommers.

The body of Hiram Sawtelle was found in the woods near Lebanon, Maine. It had been decapitated and the head has not yet been discovered. When found the body was projecting from a poorly made grave and had a bullet in the heart. It was not three yards from where Officer Shields found the paper that was wrapped around the axe. The body was entirely naked with the exception of the feet which had on a pair of socks. Besides it was a lot of clotted blood, where the arms and head had been cut off. The brother of the deceased, Isaac Sawtelle, is charged with the murder, and is in jail he was visited by Wm. B. Gale, the well-known criminal lawyer of Boston, who will defend him. By his instruction the prisoner has thus far absolutely refused to say anything regarding the crime. Regarding his confederates there has been nothing ascertained. At least nothing has been made public. There is great excitement over the finding of the body, and search for the missing portions will be vigorously prosecuted.

FOREIGN CULLINGS.

At Pontivy, France, the vehicle conveying a bride and bridegroom and a number of their friends was upset, and the whole party was precipitated into the river. The bride and bridegroom and ten others were drowned.

The Hekla Fire Insurance stockholders, at Madison, Wis., ratified the sale of that company's stock to the German Insurance Company, of St. Paul. The total amount of stock is $300,000, for which the purchaser pays $318,000. All Hekla risks will at once be reinsured in the St. Paul organization.

1 The New York Sun prints a five-column article on Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, entitled, "Is Talmage a humbug?" It dwells upon the preacher's advertising methods and describes his peculiar efforts to secure publicity for all his movements and sayings. It says he has acquired a large fortune by pursuing methods not hitherto considered proper in a clergyman, and accuses him of profaning sacred places for the selfish purposes.

A number of old soldiers are to leave Eldora, Iowa, in a few days for the Sioux reservation to take up some new land. They are all hired by a Mitchell (S. D.) capitalist, who will pay them a certain salary per month, and at the end of a year, or the time they have stayed on the land, will take the claim off their hands and allow them $500 for it. It is a very good chance for a number of these men, who are able to do much manual labor.

The boat St. Ignace, which runs between Mackinaw and St. Ignace point, carrying the train of the Michigan Central and Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic roads, is ice bound about three miles from Mackinaw City. There are sixty passengers aboard the train she carries. The passengers left the imprisoned train and accomplished a perilous journey of eight miles on the floating ice in order to reach the shore. They arrived in safety and reported the captain of the St. Ingace had given up all hope of moving his boat until the wind changes and breaks the ice. A party of five who started soon after those who reached Shore, have not yet been heard from.

1 James McKeen Arnold was released from the insane asylum, in California having developed no signs of insanity. Arnold is a young man who created a scene on the Union Pacific train near Pendleton, Ore., Dec. 3, and was arrested by the sheriff there on a telegraphic request of the railway conductor. When arrested he had a revolver and a knife in his hands, but did not use them. Arnold is a member of a well known Philadelphia family, and contends that he has been persecuted by Eastern relatives, who had tried to incarcerate him in an insane asylum. He claims that the influence of his relatives caused him to be taken out of Oregon without a trial to San Francisco where he was examined before a commissioner of insanity and incarcerated without any evidence in open court, and that until within the past week he has not been permitted to notify his friends of his whereabouts.

The story of a plucky 4-year-old baby comes from Oskaloosa, Iowa. It is the child of Mrs. Wilson, and while playing about a deep well covered by loose boards, fell in. The well is 30 feet deep, and contained 10 feet of water. The mother saw the child fall, and frantically grabbing a clothes line, lowered it into the well. The child grasped the line, but of course, could not hold on tight enough to be drawn out, so the mother tied her end above. "Will Pet hold on tight till mamma runs for papa?" tremblingly cried the mother to her little one. "Ess" came a brave little sob from below. The mother hurried away and soon returned with the father and several other men, who, after much difficulty, rescued the child from its chilly bath. The child was almost unconscious from cold when taken out, but had bravely clung to the clothes line, all the time holding its head above water

Col. Taylor Called at Last.

New York Sun.

When the first weekly in Washington Territory was established the editor, who was an Ohio printer, made a break in the first issue to establish his reputation as a dangerous man to fool with. He was surrounded by a rough crowd and he realized that the proper thing to do was to put himself in shape to be sized up according to Hoyle. To effect this he led off with an article abusive of Col. Taylor. The colonel was an imaginary individual, and it was therefore safe to call him a liar and a coward, and to declare that if he ever appeared in town he would be horsewhipped up and down the street. Every issue for two months contained a hit at Col. Taylor, and he was scored so vigoronsly, and the editor seemed so anxious for some sort of shooting match with him, that "the boys" treated him with that deference always accorded to a fearless man.

When anybody inquired who the colonel was he was informed that he was a desperado of the worst type, and that he had solemnly sworn to have the editor's life. He was never exactly located or identified, but was always dared to come in like a man and have it out.

One day, just after an issue in which Col. Taylor was stigmatized as a white-livered coyote and defied to a duel with bowie knives in a dark room a stranger came slouching into the office, looked about him for a while with curiosity, and then said to the editor:

"Well, I'm here."

"Yes, I see, but what for?"

"I'm Col. Taylor!"

"No!"

"Him and nobody else, You've been lighting into me like wildcats for a long time past, and I haven't been saying a word. I've got tired of it, however, and now it's got to stop!"

"My dear sir, the Col. Taylor mentioned in—"

"Pull yer gun!" interrupted the colonel, as he pulled his.

"But, sir, I beg to assure you that"—

"Git down on yer knees!"

"Now eat that!"

The colonel took from his pocket a lump of the clay and tossed it on the floor, and he stood there with leveled pistol until the last crumb of it was devoured. Then he put up his weapon and turned to go, saying:

"Next time you open on me I'll come in with a whole bag full of it, and I may conclude to drive the last of it in with a bullet! Go fur the rest of 'em all you want to, but when you strike the name Col. Taylor, handle it with care!"

And inside of a week the affair leaked out, and so many men came up to lick the editor, and so many did lick him, that he jumped the plant one night and was never heard of again.

Too Smart.

In the "dry goods emporium." Mr. Figg—Well, have you selected that 5 cents' worth of ribbon yet? Mrs. Figg—No, not yet. Did you get tired of waiting outside? Mr. Figg—Oh, no. I have been around to the office and cleared $700 in a real estate deal since you came in here. Mrs. Figg (calmly)—Indeed! Then we will just buy that new silk dress I have been wanting so long. And Mr. Figg stood on one foot and reflected all to himself that there were times when a man got really and entirely too smart for his own good.—Terre Haute Express.

MINNESOTA EDITORS

They Meet in St. Paul in State Convention and Transact Business.

An Interesting Gathering and Much Done that was Valuable and Pleasant.

The twenty-third annual convention of the Minnesota Editors and Publishers' association assembled at the chamber of commerce in St. Paul for business, Joel P. Heatwole, of the Northfield News, the president, occupying the chair. There were present about one hundred and fifty members, representing the principal papers in the state. Immediately upon calling the meeting to order Mr. Heatwole began the reading of the president's annual address, of which the following is an abstract:

"I regard the local newspaper as one of the strongest moral agencies of modern times. The great weakness of the country newspaper of to-day is, that there is no fixed or recognized standard for admission to the profession, and, therefor, it often becomes the common plunder-ground of the members of all the other professions. If a doctor, clergyman or lawyer fails to secure adequate support from the public, he at once gets types and press and blossoms into a full-fledged country journalist.

"It seems to me there is too little recognition among the local newspaper fraternity of the fact that they are the monitors and teachers of the communities which give them support. I would remark that no calling among men needs a more painstaking apprenticeship than that of weekly journalism. In no business is the technical field wider, or the details to be mastered more complicated. The country journalist must be printer and pressman; have a fair knowledge of the stationer's business; be thoroughly posted in politics; know individually all or nearly all of the people of his town; understand human nature in all its phases, and finally will fail unless he knows the science of finance in all its minute details better than the banker. He ought to be a fairly good writer, have the instinct and the cheek of the reporter, that perfect independence which is only born of clear conscience and perfect rectitude of motives which under no possible combination of circumstances would place his opinions in the public market for sale to the highest bidder. The local newspaper should be clean, printed clearly with good type, and pure morally, so that its influence will always be good in the community. Indulgence in coarse wit and slanderous allusions bespeak of low moral tone in a community that supports no less than in the man who publishes the local newspaper. Next to cleanliness and courtesy should be reckoned the virtue of reliability and truthfulness. Of course, those of us who conduct partisan newspapers will readily understand that the demands of party frequently interfere seriously with our highest individual conception of entire rectitude. Who of you has not been compelled to support, in obedience to the command of the convention or caucus, some man whom you believed to be unfitted for the position? It makes no difference; there is only one way over the difficulty. Take your medicine. And, after all, this may be the best thing to do, for perhaps the voice of the majority is more wise and judicious than any one individual's sense of right or wrong. The editor should be cautious that he does not mistake spleen for virtue, and the virulent assaults of a disordered liver for the whispering of the deity within his bosom. The manager of a newspaper should mercilessly exclude purely personal matters, and not base his excuse for acting in opposition to his friends and party associates upon the purely arbitrary and altogether selfish axiom, 'I own this paper.' There is too little profit to-day in the newspaper field, and the poverty of our profession is clearly traceable to bad men who fasten themselves upon our honorable guild."

W. J. C. Kenyon, general passenger agent of the Burlington road, the accredited editor and publisher of the Burlington Hustler, read a paper upon the "Relation of the General Passenger Agent to the Public." He asserted that the country was overrun with editorial mileage, and hinted that the editors who sold this mileage were known and recorded in the confidential memoranda of the railroads. At the same time, he frankly stated that many editors gave very much more advertising than they got mileage in return for.

A general discussion of this mileage question followed, in which nearly every one agreed that when an editor put his name to the agreement upon the mileage book that he would not transfer any of the mileage he was bound to keep that agreement. One leading member of the association said that he knew two or three prominent editors in the state who sold their mileage and boldly said they owned it and had a right to sell it. He had accidentally seen the confidential memoranda of one of the railroads, and the names of two of these editors were recorded thereon.

George N. Lamphere read a paper upon the "Business Management." It was full of practical suggestions. It mattered not how ably a newspaper was edited with poor business management a paper could not succeed.

H. E. Hoard's address was upon partisan journalism. The gentleman contended that no man owns his newspaper. "He may be in possession and control, own the office, types, presses, material and stock. He may control its issue, dictate its course, sell its advertising space, and sell or transfer this interest, possession and control; but he is not the sole owner of the paper. The public is a part owner, and its interest is no less certain and positive because no papers are drawn or recorded that establish the fact of co-partnership." A newspaper should treat subjects on all sides rather than in a partisan way.

A heated discussion followed, which was taken part in by nearly every one. Several contended that a man owned his own newspaper and was at liberty to run it to suit himself, so long as he kept within the bounds of decency.

Mr. J. A. Johnson was called upon for a paper upon the "Law of Libel," in the absence of D. Sinclair, to whom the subject was originally assigned. Mr. Johnson had nothing prepared in writing, and made only a brief humorous talk upon the subject.

President Heatwole appointed the following committees: Committee on resolutions, L. P. Hunt, G. N. Lamphere, Ed C. Grotty; delegates, Irving Todd, W. B. Mitchell, A. B. Allen, H. E. Hoard and W. G. Day.

Mr. Kenyon informed the association that if they would secure for St. Paul the National Editorial association for 1891 the Burlington road would carry all editors and publishers coming via Chicago to St. Paul and return free of charge.

BANQUET AT THE WINDSOR.

In the evening a banquet was given to the editors and publishers at the Windsor hotel by the Northwestern Newspaper Union, A. N. Kellogg Newspaper Co., Minnesota Type foundry, Marder, Luse & Co., American Press association and Wright, Barrett & Stillwell. Many of the wives and daughters of the editors and publishers were present, and it was pronounced the largest and most brilliant social event in the history of the association. H. P. Hall was toastmaster. Hon. Ignatius Donnelly responded to "What I Know About Journalism," and made one of his characteristic side-splitting speeches. He began with a tribute to the ladies, and said that the Lord, before making Eve, must have been making angels, and left some of the clay sticking to the board, too much for one angel and not enough for two, and in experimenting with it Eve was evolved as a natural consequence.

"Independence, Now and Forever," was assigned to Mr. John A. Johnson, of the St. Peter Herald, as Mr. Hall said, because he lived in the city where there was an insane asylum, and yet had the independence to criticise it. Mr. Johnson was equal to the occasion and made a very humorous effort. Maj. T. M. Newson, he of ready tongue, followed upon "The Power of the Press." "What I Know About County Printing" brought W. B. Mitchell, of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, to his feet. "Looking Backward" afforded Mr. H. A. Castle an opportunity to be very amusing, also instructive, to the company. Rev. Dr. S. G. Smith, and others, contributed to the fun and edification of the occasion.

ORGANIZING AS A CORPORATION.

Editor Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News, strongly advocated the formation of a stock company. One of the chief benefits of such an organization would be to secure advertising at good rates. The convention was not unanimous in favor of the plan, but its friends were strong enough to have a committee appointed to report a plan at the next meeting. The committee consists of Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News; W. B. Mitchell, of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, and H. G. Day, of the Albert Lea Standard.

A paper on "The Mechanical Department of a Newspaper" was read by David Ramaley. H. P. Hall read a paper on "The Political Emoluments of Newspapers."

The committee on resolutions offered its report, the first resolution creating quite a commotion. In substance it denounced the practice on the part of newspaper men of selling their railway mileage. Many of those present opposed the resolution on the ground that it reflected upon the editors. It was claimed by some of the opponents that most of the advertising tickets on the market were given out directly by the roads themselves. The resolution was finally laid on the table.

Joel P. Heatwole, H. P. Hall and W. J. C. Kenyon were appointed a committee to examine into the feasibility of taking an excursion through the South in connection with the meeting next winter. Resolutions were adopted declaring the rates charged by express companies to be unreasonably high and calling upon the legislature to remedy the matter by law; expressing appreciation of the National Education association and declaring the government to be guilty of unjust discrimination in printing return cards on envelopes. The Minnesota delegation in congress were asked to work for the discontinuance of the latter custom. A resolution endorsing Maj. T. M. Newson for a consular position was adopted. The resolution of E. V. Smalley providing for the establishment of a bureau of immigration was indefinitely postponed.

The committee on delegates to the National Editorial convention, to be held in Boston in June, reported the following delegates, who were elected:

Irving Todd, Hastings Gazette; W. B. Mitchell, St. Cloud Journal-Press; G. S. Pease, Anoka Union; H. E. Hoard, Montevideo Leader; E. H. Dearth, Le Sueur News; William Hinds, Shakopee Argus; W. C. Brown; Wells Advocate; A. C. Bellyea, Elbow Lake Herald; A. F. Ingalls, Pine Island Journal. Alternates, H. A. Castle, F. S. Verbeck, J. S. Pinney, H. P. Hall of St. Paul, and Fred N. Van Duzee, of the Luverne News.

Mrs. Lila M. Chapman, of the St. James Journal; Miss Anna E. Rathburn, Pelican Rapids Pioneer; and Miss O'Brien, Atwater Press, were elected active members of the association without fees.

President, L. P. Hunt, of the Mankato Free Press; first vice president, George N. Lanphere, Moorhead News; second vice president, Ed A. Paradis, Midway News; third vice president, Gen. S. P. Jennison, Red Wing Republican; recording secretary, E. H. Dearth, Le Sueur News; corresponding secretary, T. M. Newson, St. Paul; treasurer, David Ramaley, St. Paul. Executive Committee—S. F. Verbeck, St. Paul, chairman; F. C. Gottrey, Pine City Pioneer; and H. E. Hoard, Montevideo Leader.

The convention voted thanks to the officers for their work, H. P. Hall for work on the executive committee, to the chamber of commerce for the use of the room for the convention and to the St. Paul publishers for the banquet at the Windsor. It was resolved to meet in 1891 in St. Paul or Minneapolis.

After adjournment the editors paid a visit to the historical society rooms. Afterward the Pioneer Press building was inspected by a majority of the visitors, all of them expressing delight and surprise at the magnitude and convenience of the edifice.

HALF-BREEDS HAD A GRUDGE.

A Hardware Man Unmercifully Beaten in Fort Pierre.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram.—Boomers continued to cross the river all night last night, and the scene at Fort Pierre has been very exciting. Building was done by the light of the lantern, and a large number of fights took place. About midnight a fight took place between a number of half-breed bullies and a fellow called Jesse James, who took over a load of hardware and started a store in a tent. The half-breeds have a grudge against him, and assaulted him. He was unmercifully beaten about the head and face with the butt end of a six-shooter. His nose was smashed and he was dangerously wounded in the head. He was carried over to Pierre this morning in an unconscious condition. Revolvers were flourished and firing continued all night, but no one was shot. About twenty-five houses were up by this morning. The citizens have formed a vigilance committee, and claim-jumpers will be seriously dealt with.

FURTHER COMPLICATIONS.

A man named Wolgemath is also badly hurt, and a number of others were sandbagged and hurt in the general melee. A A public meeting was held at Fort Pierre, and committees were appointed to organize the county and city, and for various other purposes, including one to confer with Northwestern railway regarding the conflicting claims of the road and settlers who now occupy every foot of the mile square. A vigilance committee went to a widow named Evans, who had moved a house on to a lot which, she claimed, had been jumped by a man named McKee, and ordered her to move the building at once or they would do it for her. She defied them, and to-day a mob bodily lifted the house off and set it in the street. A car containing prominent Northwestern officials came in to-night, and they will at once take means to enforce their claims as owners of the mile square. This will still farther complicate matters, and will surely lead to trouble. Men who were at the opening of Oklahoma say the disorder on that occasion was small compared with what can now be seen here.

WANT A VOICE.

Strike of Miners Over the Appointment of a Mine Physician.

HURLEY, Wis., Special Telegram.—The entire force of miners at the Aurora mine, 400 in number, struck to-day, the trouble being over the appointment of the mine physician. It is customary in the iron country for each mine to appoint a physician, who receives $1 a month from each employe. Doctors Thomas and McCabe held this position at the Aurora for a number of years until a couple of weeks ago, when General Manager Dickerman discharged them, substituting Dr. McLeod. This appointment was anything but satisfactory to the miners, who claim that as they pay the physicians, they were entitled to some voice in the matter. A number of meetings were held, and a committee of miners was appointed to wait on the management and request that Doctors Thomas and McCabe be reinstated. The management, however, refused to make any concessions, and the trouble culminated in a strike to-day. The miners held a secret session this afternoon, the result of which could not be learned. Work at the Aurora is entirely suspended, only enough men being at work to keep it clear of water. Threats of violence have been made against any one who attempts to work. If the matter is not settled to-morrow the trouble is likely to be very serious, as it may result in a general strike on the Gogebic against the present system of employing mine physicians.

MONTANA'S MINES.

EXtract From the Annual Report of the Mining Inspector.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram.—State Mining Inspector Swallow will say, among other things, in his first report on the mines of Montana:

More than 12,000 mining claims have been located in Montana under the mining laws of the United States. Probably one-quarter of that number have been so developed as to show the kind and size and general character of the veins, and thus enable one to form some safe opinion of the quantity and richness of the ore and what machinery is best adapted to work it; and enough work has been done on these to show they are bright prospects, and to give them a market value. There are fully 2,000 mines so well opened, and show ore enough to place them on a paying basis by erecting mills or furnaces for reducing the ores, or by shipping them to works already erected. But comparatively few of this great number have really been put on such paying basis. And yet these few are wonderfully productive. In fact we have, with very few exceptions, merely scratched the surfaces of our thousand mines, and yet they have for several years yielded so much gold, silver, copper and lead as to place Montana at the head of the mining states.

Firemen Injured.

CHICAGO, Special.—The large brick and stone building at the corner of Adams and Market streets, owned by the great dry goods house of J. V. Farwell & Co., caught fire early this morning, and before the flames could be subdued the southern half of it was gutted. This portion of the building was occupied by Taylor Brothers, dealers in hats and caps, and Work Brothers, dealers in clothing and uniforms. A heavy fire wall, which runs runs through the middle of the structure, prevented the spread of the flames to the northern half of the building, which is filled with the heavy wholesale stock of dry goods of the Messrs. Farwell. Loss, $475,000; fully covered by insurance. William Salander fell from a ladder striking on his head on the stone pavement. He was terribly cut, his skull fractured, and he will probably die. John Meyers fell with the crashing in of the third floor, and was dragged out unconscious. It is thought he will recover. Three other firemen were badly cut about the face and hands by flying glass, but not dangerously hurt.

May Give a Bonus.

ROCHESTER, Special, Telegram. There was a joint railroad meeting of the townships of Pleasant Grove, Marion and High Forest to discuss the matter of giving the Winona & Southwestern a bonus. Messrs. Simpson & Lamberton, of the Winona & Southwestern, were present besides several from Rochester. Almost all of High Forest expressed themselves as in favor of granting them a bonus of probably $10,000, and they will undoubtedly ask Marion and Pleasant Grove for about $3,000 to $5,000 apiece. This move is now being opposed by many Rochester men, as it will cut off some of the best tributary country of this city. No definite proposition was submitted, but probably there will be in a short time.

Rumored Stickney-Hill Combine.

MASON CITY, Iowa, Special Telegram.—It is rumored here that the Stickney and Hill railroad interests in this territory are to combine. The Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City line is to push through from Manly over ten miles leased from the Central and connect here with the Mason City & Fort Dodge, giving it an excellent south and southwest opening. What effect this deal would have on the Winona & Southwestern, an extension of the Lackawanna system, is not known, but it is thought they also will push through to this city.

WILL MAKE A TEST.

Arrests Likely to be Made for the Violation of the Montana Lottery Law.

The Louisiana Concern Will Try to Purchase the Montana Lottery Company.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram.—It is possible that in short time some arrests will be made for the violation of the lottery law, and a test case made either in the Silver Bow or Lewis and Clarke courts. It is a well known fact that lotteries are openly conducted in Montana, and the business of selling lottery tickets is extensively carried on, though both appear to be prohibited by law. Section 2, article 19 of the Montana constitution reads:

The legislative assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets in this state.

This would in itself seem to prohibit the conducting of lotteries or sale of tickets, as it is generally conceded that the constitution repeals all territorial laws in conflict with its provisions. At the last session of the territorial legislature a law was passed prohibiting lotteries in Montana. This law contains one section providing that lotteries existing prior to the passage of the act, and having advertised drawings to take place after May 1, 1889, the date at which the law took effect, should on that date place their affairs in the hands of a receiver appointed by the court, who would finish up the business. Last May the Montana lottery placed their business in the hands of a receiver and have been continuing it in that way ever since, claiming, it is said, that the law permits this. The intent of the law was evidently to prohibit all lotteries and not to allow but one drawing after the first of last May. If the lottery company are right they will be allowed to operate until further legislation on the subject. What lends interest to this question at present is that it is reported that the Louisiana lottery schemers, who were knocked out in North Dakota, are negotiating to buy out the Montana Lottery company so as to gain a foothold in this state. This is but a rumor and lacks confirmation, yet many believe it in view of the boast of the lottery schemers that if they were defeated in North Dakota they would try to work Montana. Further developments are expected in a few days.

MAY REQUEST SENATOR CASEY'S PRESENCE.

BISMARCK, N. D., Special Telegram.—Chairman Robinson, of the senate investigating committee, has not yet returned, but is expected back in time for a meeting of the committee to-morrow. One of the members said to-day that the committee was considering the question of requesting the presence of United States Senator Casey as a witness.

ITS NEXT MOVE.

NEW ORLEANS, Special—The Louisiana Lottery company is making a desperate effort to retain its corporate life. It has failed to obtain a charter from North Dakota, and its next move, it is said, will be an enormous bribe to the Louisiana legislature for a renewal of its present charter, which will expire in two years hence. Its proposition will be to pay the entire state debt, amounting to from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. The lottery is earning $250,000 a month, or $3,000,000 per year net. Many prominent Louisianians fear that the bribe may be accepted.

CAUSED EXCITEMENT.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., Special Telegram.—Considerable excitement was caused to-day by a report that the Indians occupying the land at Lower Brule, sought by the town siters, had concluded to abandon the land as a result of a proposition made them by the town siters. If the report is true as it undoubtedly is, coming from a source considered absolutely reliable, it will simplify matters somewhat and probably result in a continuance of work on the part of the town siters. There is considerable apprehension, however, as to the position the interior department will take in cases where certificates have been issued the Indians for lands now occupied by them under the severalty act, as to whether the certificates could now be canceled or not. Many buildings belonging to the town siters are still upon the ground, and the troops stationed on the ground have not as yet resorted to the extreme of removing or destroying them. If the proposition of the Indians is accepted it will still leave the matter in a decidedly complicated condition, as there are many conflicting interests between the boomers occupying the ground, and a great deal of confidence would have to be reposed in the Indians, as by the Sioux bill and demand the land any time before the expiration of a year. The Milwaukee Railroad company has taken action in regard to preventing settlement on the lands granted it by the Sioux bill which had previously been treated for by the company with the Indians, which will have the effect of removing again those settlers at Lower Brule, who on Saturday moved their buildings on the company's ground in order to avoid the troops. It does not affect the settlers at Lower Brule, however, so deeply as it does those persons on the tract on the east side of the river immediately adjoining Chamberlain on the north. Here a large number of people settled in 1885, when thrown open to settlement by President Arthur, and they have since remained there and in many instances established and built up large and comfortable homes, expecting to take advantage of the town site act, which allows each settler a two-acre tract. They were unable, however, to secure a filing, as the land was immediately withdrawn from the market by President Cleveland. The settlers claim to have a strong case, and many state to your correspondent that they will at least remain upon the land until reimbursed for their trouble and outlay, which was guaranteed them by the Sioux bill, but regarding which no action has as yet been taken by the department. Settlement on the lands west of the river goes steadily on, there being no diminution in the number to-day over previous days. The crossing has again become perfectly secure, the past few days being rather cold the ice bridge in the Missouri has frozen firm.

INDIANS CANNOT SELL.

MITCHELL, S. D., Special Telegram—Col. John H. King and F. M. Goodykoontz are in the city, en route to Chamberlain from Washington, where they have been for several weeks working for the opening of the reservation. Goodykoontz said there could be no doubt that the settlers, townsiters and all others on the river front either above or below Chamberlain would have to vacate. That land belonged to Indians, and the government would protect them in their right. Col. King and himself had been given positively to understand that before leaving Washington by the department of the interior. The talk about Indians selling their rights in the land was nonsense. They could not do that for the next twenty-five years, even if they should want to. Goodykoontz and King are accompanied by Capt. Henry Wahly, of the interior department, who is sent out by Commissioner Graff to open up the new land office at Chamberlain.

NOT OF ONE MIND.

Difference of Opinion as to a Reduction in the Revenues.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—The committee on ways and means are finding it very difficult to agree on any other reduction of the revenues than that to be accomplished by the repeal of the tobacco tax. The majority of the committee are in favor of free sugar, but they meet with opposition in their party in the house, which threatens the defeat of their bill if it includes this item. They are having a deal of trouble over this question, but one of the most perplexing features of the situation is that there is considerable doubt about the fiscal affairs of the government admitting of any reduction of revenue at this time. The regular appropriations and the differences for the ensuing year will amount to about $430,000,000, and the estimated revenues for that year are but $450,000,000. The passage of the Blair bill, or any of the proposed general pension bills, would wipe out this difference of $20,000,000 and leave a shortage. If any of these bills become law, all idea of reducing the revenue must be abandoned, and the only reductions of duties practicable would be such as would operate to increase revenue by encouraging importations. The friends of sugar in the house opposing the repeal of the duty propose to accept a reduction of between 20 and 30 per cent as a compromise, urging that the government cannot spare the revenue which would be wiped out by putting it on the free list, and it is possible that there may be a compromise on this basis. It is also claimed that the repeal of the tobacco tax is probable unless it is found that the revenue cannot be spared. This is based on the fact that certain Southern Republicans have said that they would not support any tariff bill if the tax on tobacco was not removed. To this proposition the Northwestern members strongly dissent. They will not, if they can help it, vote for any bill that repeals the tobacco tax. A great many Western men are of the opinion that the revenue derived from the tobacco tax may be profitably expended in improving rivers and harbors and erecting necessary public buildings. The necessary reductions of the surplus, many claim, should be made upon the necessaries rather than the luxuries, even if it would allow more importations. The majority of the committee will find it a serious task to frame a satisfactory tariff bill.

BESTED KILRAIN.

NEW ORLEANS, Special.—J. J. Corbett, teacher of the Olympian club at San Francisco, bested Jake Kilrain in a six-round contest for a purse of $3,500, at the Southern Athletic club rooms to-night. Kilrain had agreed to knock Corbett out in six rounds but was outfought at every point. Corbett is a giant youngster, well educated, ambitious, and is regarded in the West as the coming world's champion. He has never been defeated. Kilrain was in fine trim up to Thursday night, but the death of James at Dallas, Tex., unmanned him somewhat, according to Prof. Muldoon. Benziah, who was implicated in the James affair, defeated Johnson in four rounds. Mike Cleary whipped Mike Smith, the Cincinnati heavy weight, in two rounds. The club rooms were especially fitted up for the matches, and a large number of spectators were present. Kilrain stated his weight varied between 201 and 205 pounds. Corbett tipped the scales at 183 pounds. Although Corbett is six feet one and one-half inches tall, he looked a mere boy compared with his adversary. Muldoon and Cleary seconded Kilrain and Tony Danforth and Mike Smito were behind Corbett. George Scott was bottleholder and E. B. Violett referee. Both men sparred for an opening, watching each other's style. Corbett carried his left loosely, while his right held guard. Kilrain tried his rushing tactics, but Corbett was tao lively for him. The referee decided at the end of the sixth round that Corbett had outfought Kilrain throughout. Kilrain says his defeat by Corbett is due to the fact that all in-fighting was barred. Corbett had the longer reach and could tip and get away. Kilrain would like to box him ten rounds with five-ounce gloves, but would prefer a finish fight with light gloves.

SMITH ALL RIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—The North Dakota delegation was surprised to-day by the withdrawal of the name of John A. Percival for receiver of the Devils Lake, N. D., land office. They knew nothing of the matter until the message came to the senate with the list of appointments. Percival was confirmed Friday last, but Secretary Noble went to the senate and asked that the confirmation be reconsidered, which was done. To-day followed the withdrawal. Receiver Smith, the present incumbent of the office, was among the number who were recently charged with being short in their accounts and Percival was appointed to succeed him. Since then the secretary has been informed that Smith was all right and by way of vindication wanted to prove his innocence and then resign. The secretary, in order to put Smith right, has held up Percival and continued Smith. Senator Pierce says:

Mr. Smith was removed by the secretary of the interior on a report of a clerk that he was short in his accounts, and Mr. Percival was appointed, the latter having been recommended for the place when a vacancy should occur. It now turns out that the clerk in charge of accounts was wrong, and that the removal of Mr. Smith under such charges was an injustice. I would not approve of such an act, and I am sure that Mr. Percival would not. The latter's nomination, therefore, has been withdrawn, so that whatever may be done in the future may be entirely independent of the charge preferred against Mr. Smith. The secretary telegraphed the facts to-day to Mr. Percival.

RECEIVED A REPLY.

Parnell Told That the Commission Will Be Thanked.

LONDON, Special.—In the house of commons to-day Mr. Parnell asked for information as to the government's intentions regarding the report of the special Parnell commission. Smith, the government leader, said that the government intended to ask the house to adopt the report and to thank the commission for its just and impartial conduct. Mr. Smith's answer was greeted with cheers, counter-cheers and laughter. T. W. Russell attacked the Parnellites, saying that they now bespattered praise on the Gladstonites whom before they had covered with the worst epithets. Thus, Earl Spencer was charged with murder and every effort made to blacken his character. Mr. O'Brien, interrupting Mr. Russell, said: "I certainly would not let any man say that outside of this house." Continuing, Mr. Russell said the charge he made against the Parnellites was certainly true. Now the Parnellites embraced Earl Spencer. The opposition asserted that Mr. Balfour had enforced the coercion law with needless severity. Probably the press clause in the Crimes act was unwise, but in other respects coercion had assisted to restore and maintain order in Ireland.

STOLE HIS WIFE.

Sad Experience of an Alabama Man Among Mormons.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Special.—George Preston of Clay county, Ala., has returned home from Utah, where he went ten months ago as a convert to Mormonism. He tells a thrilling story of the treatment of converts by the Mormons when they reach Utah. He says the women converts are married to elders, who in most cases have three or four wives already, and if they offer the slightest protest or resistance they are flogged or otherwise punished until they submit. The men who have been promised homes and farms are compelled to give up all the money they have to the church, and then they are turned adrift to live as best they can. Preston and his young wife were converted to Mormonism about a year ago by two elders who were proselyting in Clay county. They sold all they had and went to Utah. Preston says his wife was stolen from him and carried to Salt Lake City, he thinks, but he was never able to find any trace of her. He was then by threats compelled to give the church all the money he had, about $200, and then told he must look out for himself. He started home three months ago and worked his way back.

LAND DECISIONS.

A Number of Cases Disposed of in the Interior Department.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—Assistant Secretary Chandler, of the interior department, to-day reversed the general land office decision in the case of Berend Loers vs. James M. Way, the contest involving Way's timber culture entry for land in section 26, township 100, range 55, Yankton, S. D., district. The general land office had canceled Way's entry. The assistant secretary overrules this. The assistant secretary affirmed the order of the land office canceling E. W. Patton's entry of southeast quarter section 17, township 16, range 67, in the Mitchell, S. D., district. He also affirmed the general land office decision canceling the homestead entry of B. E. Crane for the northwest quarter of section 24, township 107, range 57 in the Mitchell, S. D., district. Secretary Noble modified the order of the land commissioner in the case of Frank L. Mease, allowing him to file supplementary proof for his pre-emption cash entry of the southwest quarter of section 20, township 105, range 161, Mitchell district. The secretary affirmed the decision of the land office denying the motion of Horatio Wales, Jr., assignee of C. G. Holbrook, for a review of a decision canceling the latter's entry in section 1, township 104, range 59 in the Mitchell district.

CAMPAIGN PLANS.

Rumor That Cleveland's Friends Will Buy the St. Paul Globe.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—An interesting bit of gossip is afloat here to-day. Daniel Lamont, the president's private secretary during the last administration, was here yesterday, and, in conversation with a friend, said that a proposition was made to some of the Democratic editors at the publishers' meeting in New York last week to purchase the St. Paul Globe. Mr. Lamont said that it was considered good property and would be a good chance for some one with an ambition to try journalism in that city. Mr. Lamont's statement, coupled with the fact that he is supposed to know as nearly as any one the campaign plans of Cleveland's friends, has started the gossip that Cleveland's supporters are already on the war path and that the purchase of certain newspaper plants to boom his candidacy early in the game is a part of the battle they have mapped out.

The First Death.

TOULON, Special.—The squadron, with the exception of the Yorktown, stood out of the harbor of Port Mahone and shaped a course for France. The Yorktown was left behind to bury its dead—the first death in the squadron—Sergeant Crane, who succumbed to a long and painful attack of pneumonia, superinduced by influenza. He commanded the Yorktown's marine guard, and was respected by all he came in contact with. He was a veteran of the civil war and was attached to the marine corps for over twenty years. Sergeant Crane was a native of Maine, a Free Mason and about forty-five years of age.

Agreeable People.

We all know people whom it is pleasant to meet; people from whom we are sure to receive a smile, a kind word, a cordial hand-shake, or some other token of good-will. When one is depressed in spirits, or, as the common saying is, "blue" the meeting with a genial, merry-hearted friend has a magical effect; indeed, I have known the encounter with such a person to turn the whole current of one's life.

Agreeability is dependent upon many conditions; it may be inherent, it may be the result of judicious early education, or of pleasant surroundings, or of a happy combination of circumstances, but all will agree that it is a desirable quality, and whether inherent or not, should be carefully cultivated. There are people whose mighty efforts to be agreeable are so distressing as to defeat their object. Such people should bear in mind that agreeability must proceed from the heart, and in a grown person is the result of continued practice. One feels so comfortable after having said or done something to brighten the pathway of another, that it pays one's self to be agreeable.

Some people allow all their little annoyances to affect their conduct toward others, whether their unfortunate friends are to blame or not. I was once visiting a charming family. All its members, with one exception, were interesting and agreeable. The only son of the house was in business in the town in which they lived. If his affairs had moved prosperously through the day he came home in a pleasant, entertaining mood, but if anything had annoyed him he was outrageously disagreeable and rude, no matter how many guests were present. The discomfiture of his mother and sisters may well be imagined; indeed, as the dinner hour approached they were in a state of nervousness which disappeared immediately if the "tyrant" came in with a bright face; otherwise it continued until he relieved us of his disagreeable presence. If the fact had not been so positively demonstrated to me, I would not have believed it possible that one disagreeable person could have counteracted the influence of four agreeable people. I believe that the young man's disposition was the result of continued indulgence by his mother and sisters. He had tyrannized over them for years, and had become a powerful despot in the household.

"Tired and cross" is a common expression, and most of us know what it means. A friend of mine, a most agreeable woman, says that when she finds herself getting "tired and cross," she takes a nap, a bath, a walk, or a drive, goes to see some one whose walk in life is less pleasant than her own—does anything different from the work that has tried and worried her. In this way she preserves health and temper, governs well her children, and keeps her entire household in a state of peace and happiness.

Many parents do not realize that in training their children a regard for others should be instilled into their minds. A spoiled, selfish child may be very dear to its parents, but after the parents have passed away the child has become a disagreeable man or woman, what disinterested parties will tolerate the selfish, tyrannical ways of such a person?—American Agriculturist for February.

Newspaper Women.

Brooklyn Times.

The number of newspaper women in New York increases steadily. A year ago or thereabouts a young woman anxious for journalistic laurels applied through the medium of a friend to Amos J. Cummings for a chance to shine a little for some small section of the world through the columns of the Evening Sun. Mr. Cummings swore a warm-hued and picturesque and withal good-natured though decisive oath that in his day there should be no woman bothering about the office of the Evening Sun. It is now the day of Mr. Brisbane, and under the new regime a more fortunate young woman—a very clever one, formerly of the staff of the Cleveland Leader—has found an opportunity. An appreciative part of my mail is made up of letters from girls who ask if there is any future for women in newspaperdom. There are many thing to be thought of by a woman who would apprentice herself to journalism; temperament, versatility and the power to live harmoniously in a newspaper office, which is a little world of its own. A girl may have every qualification, but she will not be successful if she makes herself felt as a restraint by trying to impose on busy men the formalities of parlor etiquette. She must have a good constitution to start with, a clear conscience and good nerves, so that she can be self-controlled. After a certain amount of literary talent she need sheer common sense more than anything.

The Miracle Gun.

The German press is discussing at length the merits of a new French repeating air rifle called the "miracle gun." The rifle was invented by M. Paul Giffard in Paris, the original projector of the Parisian pneumatic post. It is described thus: "The weapon is light, much lighter than any of the army rifles now in use. It resembles the magazine gun in that steel cartridge about a span and a half long and as thick as a man's thumb is attached to the one barrel by means of a screw. This cartridge contains 300 shots, which can be discharged as rapidly or slowly as a man desires. Since neither powder or any other explosive, but only compressed and liquified air, supplies the expelling force, no smoke and no flash accompany the discharge. Only a short, sharp, low report is heard as the ball leaves the cartridge. At the recent trial the ball traveled with wonderful accuracy and penetrated deep into the wall of the shooting room. As soon as one cartridge is emptied of its 300 shots, another cartridge can be screwd on the gun in the twinkling of an eye. M. Giffard says that the 300 shots in a cartridge can be produced at a cost of about 2½ cents. The gun itself can be manufactured for about $5."

Reading Faces.

It showed her appreciative temperament when a lady told with triumph the other day of such a pretty compliment paid her unconsciously. She said it happened three other persons with herself were approaching a crossing where a neat looking servant was standing, evidently sorely perplexed as to locality. With shrewd eyes the anxious domestic examined each lady's face in turn without a word. Then with perfect confidence turned to the narrator and very civilly inquired of a direction. Children and animals are said to be infallible judges of the integrity of those they come in contact with, and to this list may well be added the wayfaring person.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SCHOOL OVER A GROCERY.

I taught one of the first schools ever taught in the great mining camp of Leadville, Colo., and naturally enough I had many unusual and amusing experiences. The schoolroom was the second floor of a two story log building, the lower floor being used for a grocery store.

Every thing in the schoolroom was of the most primitive kind. The seats were long pine benches. There were no desks, no blackboards and not an inch of plastering in the whole building. There was nothing between the grocery store and the schoolroom but a loosely laid floor of unseasoned pine that became looser as it seasoned. It was, unfortunately, full of knot holes, and whenever a customer came into the store for a bar of soap or a pound of sugar, the school heard the entire transaction, and as the merchant was a very loquacious man we often heard some funny things.

The schoolroom water pail was kept on a pine box at one end of the room and accidentally overturned a good many times that winter, and, strangely enough, the boys sitting near it could never tell just how these accidents happened, but they always occurred when there were more than the usual number of customers in the store below, and they never failed to throw the school into paroxysms of joy. The effect was different on the groceryman.

"Here you, Mister Teacher!" he would roar up to me.

"Well, what is it?" I would ask in as calm and dignified a manner as I could assume when talking through knot holes at my feet.

"Them boys if pourin' water down here ag'in and wettin' my goods and my customers, and I ain't goin' to stand it?"

"Boys!" I would say sternly, "did any of you upset that pail?"

"And they did!" the groceryman would shriek out, "you just come down here and see! If you can't make 'em behave I kin now and I'll do it too!"

One day he carried his threat into execution. There were several customers in the store and I was busy with a class in geography when an ominous splash and the giggling of two boys told me that the newly filled water pail had gone over again. There were litte feminine shrieks below, and the next minute the grocer sugar scoop in hand, appeared in the school room.

Without deigning to notice me he ran back to where the overturned pail was and began laying about him with the sugar scoop, and before I could recover from any amazement nearly every pupil had gone shrieking and laughing down the stairs, with the irate grocer in mad pursuit, hammering away with the scoop on the heads and backs of the guilty and innocent alike.

A few minutes later he roared up through the knot holes:

"Now, if you can't make them youngsters behave themselves and have some manners, I kin!"

This singular lesson in courtesy had such a salutary effect upon the school that the pail was not overturned again for two whole days. The next week we moved into a new and better room on the ground floor, greatly to the delight of the grocer.—J. L. Harbour in Wide Awake.

Unrolling a Mummy.

An Egyptian mummy was recently unrolled in an English university. It had for 50 years occupied a place in the college museum, but it is not known how it came into the possession of the authorities. The mummy was swathed in scores of yards of thick, yellowish linen of fine texture. The bands of linen varied in width from four or five inches to about a foot. Some of them were laid lengthwise along the body; others were wrapped round and round it. At the beginning of the process of unrolling, there was a perceptible sickly smell of aromatics, which, as the work went on, gave place to a more pronounced and decidedly disagreeable odor. When a great part of the linen had been removed, black stains, caused by the bitumen, became apparent, and nearer to the body the wrappings had suffered considerably from contact with this substance. Two small pieces of linen with fringes were discovered in the course of the unrolling, and these bore inscriptions more or less impaired by the bitumen. When at last the coverings had been removed, the body was found to be of a very dark brown color—so dark, indeed, as to be almost black. The skin where it remained was hard and shiny, the arms and hands lay lengthwise upon the abdomen, while the heart and intestines were placed beneath the knees. The features when disclosed stood out very clearly, and were those of a rather handsome person, but the sex could not be determined. Glass eyes had been placed in the head, and there was a linen plug in the ear. The mummy seemed to belong to a period about 800 years before Christ. The mummy was about 5 feet 3 inches in height, and was that of an Egyptian, probably one of the class corresponding to the lower middle class of modern times.

Knew The Value of Advice.

When D. K. Tenney was admitted to the bar he was one of the "boys." He enjoyed a good time as well as any one and the following story is told of him: He went to a country dance near Madison, Wis., one night and became smitten with one of the country girls. He danced with her nearly all the evening, regardless of the fact that a certain six footer in the room kept watching him threateningly. Finally a friend approached. "Dan," he said, "do you see that big fellow on the other side of the room?" "Yes." "Well, he's going to lick the life out of you." "What for?" asked Tenny. "You've been dancing with his girl all the evening." "I didn't know it. What shall I do?" "Well, if I were you, I'd put on my coat and make a sneak for home. I'd get away from here just as quick as I could." The embryo lawyer said never a word, but reached down in his pocket and pulled out a two dollar bill. "What are you doing?" asked the friend. "Take it." "I don't want any money." "Take it," repeated Tenny. "I've taken five dollars for a blamed sight worse advice than that."—Chicago Tribune.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

The coroner's jury in the Tracy fire at Washington has rendered a verdict that the cause of the fire is unknown, and that the loss of life was largely due to its exceptionally rapid spread.

RECORD OF CASUALTIES.

At Staunton, Va., a locomotive ran into a hand car in the suburbs, killing two men and seriously injuring six others.

It is estimated that the loss by the university fire at Toronto will be $1,000,000. This includes the library, valued at $100,000, and all equipment, which was generally of the most modern style.

George Ellison, Charles Reynolds, brakemen, and Bruce Raversox, a boy, were killed in a collission between freight trains at Bairdstown, Ohio. Considerable stock was killed and the loss will be heavy.

Caspar Sprangler, on old-time resident of Helena, Mont., died at Placer from injuries inflicted by a premature blast of powder. He was a miner, and was working in one of his own mines at the time of the accident.

The large brick and stone building at the corner of Adams and Market streets Chicago owned by J. V. Farwell & Co., caught fire and before the flames could be subdued, the southern half of it was gutted. This portion of the building was occupied by Taylor Bros., dealers in hats and caps, and Work Bros., dealers in clothing and uniforms. Loss, about $450,000.

A fire broke out in the dry goods establishment of D. Davidson & Co., at Sioux City, Io., the fire department was out promptly in response to the alarm, but the flames were under such headway that one-half of the establishment was burned out and the other half gutted. The water and smoke drenched the large stock completely, and the loss is variously estimated from $25,000 to $30,000.

J. W. Kerr, a farming living 20 miles southeast of Wichita, Ka., was awakened and found his house on fire. He was in the second story, and on the lower floor were his three children. In the dense smoke he carried his wife to a window and dropped her to the ground. Kerr followed her and found that the children had perished. Everything was burned. He put his wife in a carriage and took her two miles to a neighbor's. They had only night clothes on, and the exposure, it is feared, will prove fatal to Mrs. Kerr.

SINFUL SIFTINGS.

It is rumored that the agent of a well known Liverpool lumber firm at Quebec is short in his accounts between $100,000 and $200,000. He has disappeared.

Suits have been entered in Chicago by the county of Cook against all the "boodlers" returned, escaped or compromised, for $200,000, in trespass.

Harry Lebos, a dissolute character of Reading, Pa., shot and fatally wounded his wife. Daniel Fisher, Mrs. Lebos' father, died of heart disease immediately after the shooting. Lebos escaped.

A. Barenther, a member of the firm of Hume & Barenther, attorneys at law of Oshkosh, Wis., has absconded with some $3,000 or $4,000 belonging to the clients of the firm. His family received word from Toronto, Ont., stating Barenther had arrived safely in the queen's dominion.

During a recess in the trial of William Mayne, on the trial of assault to murder Bertha Johnson, at San Diego, Cal., the prosecuting witness, shot Mayne three times, taking effect in the head, neck and shoulder, inflicting probably fatal wounds. Mayne was sitting in a chair in the court room when the woman passed back of him, turned quickly, drew a revolver from under her handkerchief and fired. She was arrested.

Dr. Marvin Fosdick was sitting by a table at his home in Pawpaw, when some unknown person fired both barrels of a double-barreled shot-gun through the window, the charge entering Fosdick's head, neck and shoulders. He still lives and may recover. The affair is surrounded in mysteries and no clue has yet been discovered to the perpetrator of the outrage.

Philip Brammer, a weak-minded and inoffensive farmer, at Bloomington, Ind., was seized, while on his way home, by masked men. They took him to an orchard, tied him to a tree and whipped him almost to insensibility. Brammer was left, covered with blood, lying on the ground and was nearly frozen before he recovered sufficiently to go home, where he arrived about daylight.

At New York some unknown person threw a bomb into an alley-way on Elizabeth street. The missle exploded blowing down a brick wall, and part of a wooden fence, and shattering a window in the rear house. No person was found in the place and nobody was injured. The police are investigating the matter.

Thomas Kane was hanged in the jail-yard at Toronto, Can., for the murder of his wife in November last. He met his fate resolutely. The murder for which Kane suffered the death penalty was one of the most atrocious character. He and his wife had been drinking and quarreled. He attacked her, and, after pummeling her body in a shocking manner, knocked her brains out with a flat iron. The murderer was a plasterer.

The Cincinnati Cremation society has discharged its superintendent, Valentine Heiman, and he has been put under bond by a magistrate to answer to the charge of grand larceny. The articles stolen were coffins. At the crematory the bodies are removed from the casket, and it has been the understanding that the caskets were broken up and burned. Recently it has been discovered that, instead of burning them the thrifty superintendent has sold them, sometimes as low as $1 each, to thrifty village undertakers.

Bert Stoner, the settling clerk of Chicago, said to have cheated his employer, supposed to be the board of trade operators, B. P. Hutchinson, out of some thousands of dollars, was back to work in Mr. Hutchinson's office. The report was that some weeks ago after bilking "Old Hutch" by a ridiculously simple expedient, young Stoner suddenly took a journey to Canada. Upon what basis the clerk and the operator now resume their old relations could not be readily ascertained. Both of them flatly declined to talk.

Miss Mary Dietzen was shot at Hastings, Minn., by Louis Sommers. Both parties are respectable young people and aged eighteen and twenty-one years respectively. The cause assigned is jealousy, the young lady refusing to marry Sommers. Miss Dietzen was walking up the street with a young lady named Miss Emma Link, when they met Sommers, who, without saying a word, shot at her three times with effect, the bullets passing through her back and in the region of the heart. She expired almost instantly, after exclaiming "Oh, Lou." At last accounts the officers were in hunt of Sommers.

The body of Hiram Sawtelle was found in the woods near Lebanon, Maine. It had been decapitated and the head has not yet been discovered. When found the body was projecting from a poorly made grave and had a bullet in the heart. It was not three yards from where Officer Shields found the paper that was wrapped around the axe. The body was entirely naked with the exception of the feet which had on a pair of socks. Besides it was a lot of clotted blood, where the arms and head had been cut off. The brother of the deceased, Isaac Sawtelle, is charged with the murder, and is in jail he was visited by Wm. B. Gale, the well-known criminal lawyer of Boston, who will defend him. By his instruction the prisoner has thus far absolutely refused to say anything regarding the crime. Regarding his confederates there has been nothing ascertained. At least nothing has been made public. There is great excitement over the finding of the body, and search for the missing portions will be vigorously prosecuted.

FOREIGN CULLINGS.

At Pontivy, France, the vehicle conveying a bride and bridegroom and a number of their friends was upset, and the whole party was precipitated into the river. The bride and bridegroom and ten others were drowned.

One hundred citizens of Point township, near Chillicothe, Ohio, tired of an epidemic of crime, organized into a jailing club and in one night made thirty-six arrests.

The contract for three and one-half miles of elevated railway in Chicago was let to Carnegie, Phipps & Co. of Pittsburg. The price will be between $800,000 and $1,000,000.

L. Edwin Dudley, secretary of the Citizens' Law and Order League of the United States, announces that the eighth annual meeting of the league will be held in Toronto, Can., on the 22d, 23d and 24th instant.

The Hekla Fire Insurance stockholders, at Madison, Wis., ratified the sale of that company's stock to the German Insurance Company, of St. Paul. The total amount of stock is $300,000, for which the purchaser pays $318,000. All Hekla risks will at once be reinsured in the St. Paul organization.

The New York Sun prints a five-column article on Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, entitled, "Is Talmage a humbug?" It dwells upon the preacher's advertising methods and describes his peculiar efforts to secure publicity for all his movements and sayings. It says he has acquired a large fortune by pursuing methods not hitherto considered proper in a clergyman, and accuses him of profaning sacred places for the selfish purposes.

A number of old soldiers are to leave Eldora, Iowa, in a few days for the Sioux reservation to take up some new land. They are all hired by a Mitchell (S. D.) capitalist, who will pay them a certain salary per month, and at the end of a year, or the time they have stayed on the land, will take the claim off their hands and allow them $500 for it. It is a very good chance for a number of these men, who are able to do much manual labor.

The boat St. Ignace, which runs between Mackinaw and St. Ignace point, carrying the train of the Michigan Central and Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic roads, is ice bound about three miles from Mackinaw City. There are sixty passengers aboard the train she carries. The passengers left the imprisoned train and accomplished a perilous journey of eight miles on the floating ice in order to reach the shore. They arrived in safety and reported the captain of the St. Ingace had given up all hope of moving his boat until the wind changes and breaks the ice. A party of five who started soon after those who reached Shore, have not yet been heard from.

James McKeen Arnold was released from the insane asylum, in California having developed no signs of insanity. Arnold is a young man who created a scene on the Union Pacific train near Pendleton, Ore., Dec. 3, and was arrested by the sheriff there on a telegraphic request of the railway conductor. When arrested he had a revolver and a knife in his hands, but did not use them. Arnold is a member of a well known Philadelphia family, and contends that he has been persecuted by Eastern relatives, who had tried to incarcerate him in an insane asylum. He claims that the influence of his relatives caused him to be taken out of Oregon without a trial to San Frantisco where he was examined before a commissioner of insanity and incarcerated without any evidence in open court, and that until within the past week he has not been permitted to notify his friends of his whereabouts.

The story of a plucky 4-year-old baby comes from Oskaloosa, Iowa. It is the child of Mrs. Wilson, and while playing about a deep well covered by loose boards, fell in. The well is 30 feet deep, and contained 10 feet of water. The mother saw the child fall, and frantically grabbing a clothes line, lowered it into the well. The child grasped the line, but of course, could not hold on tight enough to be drawn out, so the mother tied her end above. "Will Pet hold on tight till mamma runs for papa?" tremblingly cried the mother to her little one. "Ess" came a brave little sob from below. The mother hurried away and soon returned with the father and several other men, who, after much difficulty, rescued the the child from its chilly bath. The child was almost unconscious from cold when taken out, but had bravely clung to the clothes line, all the time holding its head above water

Col. Taylor Called at Last.

New York Sun.

When the first weekly in Washington Territory was established the editor, who was an Ohio printer, made a break in the first issue to establish his reputation as a dangerous man to fool with. He was surrounded by a rough crowd and he realized that the proper thing to do was to put himself in shape to be sized up according to Hoyle. To effect this he led off with an article abusive of Col. Taylor. The colonel was an imaginary individual, and it was therefore safe to call him a liar and a coward, and to declare that if he ever appeared in town he would be horsewhipped up and down the street. Every issue for two months contained a hit at Col. Taylor, and he was scored so vigorously, and the editor seemed so anxious for some sort of shooting match with him, that "the boys" treated him with that deference always accorded to a fearless man.

When anybody inquired who the colonel was he was informed that he was a desperado of the worst type, and that he had solemnly sworn to have the editor's life. He was never exactly located or identified, but was always dared to come in like a man and have it out.

One day, just after an issue in which Col. Taylor was stigmatized as a white-livered coyote and defied to a duel with bowie knives in a dark room a stranger came slouching into the office, looked about him for a while with curiosity, and then said to the editor:

"Well, I'm here."

"Yes, I see, but what for?"

"I'm Col. Taylor!"

"No!"

"Him and nobody else, You've been lighting into me like wildcats for a long time past, and I haven't been saying a word. I've got tired of it, however, and now it's got to stop!"

"My dear sir, the Col. Taylor mentioned in—"

"Pull yer gun!" interrupted the colonel, as he pulled his.

"But, sir, I beg to assure you that"—

"Git down on yer knees!"

"Now eat that!"

The colonel took from his pocket a lump of the clay and tossed it on the floor, and he stood there with leveled pistol until the last crumb of it was devoured. Then he put up his weapon and turned to go, saying:

"Next time you open on me I'll come in with a whole bag full of it, and I may conclude to drive the last of it in with a bullet! Go fur the rest of 'em all you want to, but when you strike the name Col. Taylor, handle it with care!"

And inside of a week the affair leaked out, and so many men came up to lick the editor, and so many did lick him, that he jumped the plant one night and was never heard of again.

Too Smart.

In the "dry goods emporium." Mr. Figg—Well, have you selected that 5 cents' worth of ribbon yet? Mrs. Figg—No, not yet. Did you get tired of waiting outside? Mr. Figg—Oh, no. I have been around to the office and cleared $700 in a real estate deal since you came in here. Mrs. Figg (calmly)—Indeed! Then we will just buy that new silk dress I have been wanting so long. And Mr. Figg stood on one foot and reflected all to himself that there were times when a man got really and entirely too smart for his own good.—Terre Haute Express.

MINNESOTA EDITORS

They Meet in St. Paul in State Convention and Transact Business.

An Interesting Gathering and Much Done that was Valuable and Pleasant.

The twenty-third annual convention of the Minnesota Editors and Publishers' association assembled at the chamber of commerce in St. Paul for business, Joel P. Heatwole, of the Northfield News, the president, occupying the chair. There were present about one hundred and fifty members, representing the principal papers in the state. Immediately upon calling the meeting to order Mr. Heatwole began the reading of the president's annual address, of which the following is an abstract:

"I regard the local newspaper as one of the strongest moral agencies of modern times. The great weakness of the country newspaper of to-day is, that there is no fixed or recognized standard for admission to the profession, and, therefor, it often becomes the common plunder-ground of the members of all the other professions. If a doctor, clergyman or lawyer fails to secure adequate support from the public, he at once gets types and press and blossoms into a full-fledged country journalist.

"It seems to me there is too little recognition among the local newspaper fraternity of the fact that they are the monitors and teachers of the communities which give them support. I would remark that no calling among men needs a more painstaking apprenticeship than that of weekly journalism. In no business is the technical field wider, or the details to be mastered more complicated. The country journalist must be printer and pressman; have a fair knowledge of the stationer's business; be thoroughly posted in politics; know individually all or nearly all of the people of his town; understand human nature in all its phases, and finally will fail unless he knows the science of finance in all its minute details better than the banker. He ought to be a fairly good writer, have the instinct and the cheek of the reporter, that perfect independence which is only born of clear conscience and perfect rectitude of motives which under no possible combination of circumstances would place his opinions in the public market for sale to the highest bidder. The local newspaper should be clean, printed clearly with good type, and pure morally, so that its influence will always be good in the community. Indulgence in coarse wit and slanderous allusions bespeak of low moral tone in a community that supports no less than in the man who publishes the local newspaper. Next to cleanliness and courtesy should be reckoned the virtue of reliability and truthfulness. Of course, those of us who conduct partisan newspapers will readily understand that the demands of party frequently interfere seriously with our highest individual conception of entire rectitude. Who of you has not been compelled to support, in obedience to the command of the convention or caucus, some man whom you believed to be unfitted for the position? It makes no difference; there is only one way over the difficulty. Take your medicine. And, after all, this may be the best thing to do, for perhaps the voice of the majority is more wise and judicious than any one individual's sense of right or wrong. The editor should be cautious that he does not mistake spleen for virtue, and the virulent assaults of a disordered liver for the whispering of the deity within his bosom. The manager of a newspaper should mercilessly exclude purely personal matters, and not base his excuse for acting in opposition to his friends and party associates upon the purely arbitrary and altogether selfish axiom, 'I own this paper.' There is too little profit to-day in the newspaper field, and the poverty of our profession is clearly traceable to bad men who fasten themselves upon our honorable guild."

W. J. C. Kenyon, general passenger agent of the Burlington road, the accredited editor and publisher of the Burlington Hustler, read a paper upon the "Relation of the General Passenger Agent to the Public." He asserted that the country was overrun with editorial mileage, and hinted that the editors who sold this mileage were known and recorded in the confidential memoranda of the railroads. At the same time, he frankly stated that many editors gave very much more advertising than they got mileage in return for.

A general discussion of this mileage question followed, in which nearly every one agreed that when an editor put his name to the agreement upon the mileage book that he would not transfer any of the mileage he was bound to keep that agreement. One leading member of the association said that he knew two or three prominent editors in the state who sold their mileage and boldly said they owned it and had a right to sell it. He had accidentally seen the confidential memoranda of one of the railroads, and the names of two of these editors were recorded thereon.

George N. Lamphere read a paper upon the "Business Management." It was full of practical suggestions. It mattered not how ably a newspaper was edited with poor business management a paper could not succeed.

H. E. Hoard's address was upon partisan journalism. The gentleman contended that no man owns his newspaper. "He may be in possession and control, own the office, types, presses, material and stock. He may control its issue, dictate its course, sell its advertising space, and sell or transfer this interest, possession and control; but he is not the sole owner of the paper. The public is a part owner, and its interest is no less certain and positive because no papers are drawn or recorded that establish the fact of co-partnership." A newspaper should treat subjects on all sides rather than in a partisan way.

A heated discussion followed, which was taken part in by nearly every one. Several contended that a man owned his own newspaper and was at liberty to run it to suit himself, so long as he kept within the bounds of decency.

Mr. J. A. Johnson was called upon for a paper upon the "Law of Libel," in the absence of D. Sinclair, to whom the subject was originally assigned. Mr. Johnson had nothing prepared in writing, and made only a brief humorous talk upon the subject.

President Heatwole appointed the following committees: Committee on resolutions, L. P. Hunt, G. N. Lamphere, Ed C. Grotty; delegates, Irving Todd, W. B. Mitchell, A. B. Allen, H. E. Hoard and W. G. Day.

Mr. Kenyon informed the association that if they would secure for St. Paul the National Editorial association for 1891 the Burlington road would carry all editors and publishers coming via Chicago to St. Paul and return free of charge.

BANQUET AT THE WINDSOR.

In the evening a banquet was given to the editors and publishers at the Windsor hotel by the Northwestern Newspaper Union, A. N. Kellogg Newspaper Co., Minnesota Type foundry, Marder, Luse & Co., American Press association and Wright, Barrett & Stillwell. Many of the wives and daughters of the editors and publishers were present, and it was pronounced the largest and most brilliant social event in the history of the association. H. P. Hall was toastmaster. Hon. Ignatius Donnelly responded to "What I Know About Journalism," and made one of his characteristic side-splitting speeches. He began with a tribute to the ladies, and said that the Lord, before making Eve, must have been making angels, and left some of the clay sticking to the board, too much for one angel and not enough for two, and in experimenting with it Eve was evolved as a natural consequence.

"Independence, Now and Forever," was assigned to Mr. John A. Johnson, of the St. Peter Herald, as Mr. Hall said, because he lived in the city where there was an insane asylum, and yet had the independence to criticise it. Mr. Johnson was equal to the occasion and made a very humorous effort. Maj. T. M. Newson, he of ready tongue, followed upon "The Power of the Press." "What I Know About County Printing" brought W. B. Mitchell, of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, to his feet. "Looking Backward" afforded Mr. H. A. Castle an opportunity to be very amusing, also instructive, to the company. Rev. Dr. S. G. Smith, and others, contributed to the fun and edification of the occasion.

ORGANIZING AS A CORPORATION.

Editor Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News, strongly advocated the formation of a stock company. One of the chief benefits of such an organization would be to secure advertising at good rates. The convention was not unanimous in favor of the plan, but its friends were strong enough to have a committee appointed to report a plan at the next meeting. The committee consists of Ed A. Paradis, of the Midway News; W. B. Mitchell, of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, and H. G. Day, of the Albert Lea Standard.

A paper on "The Mechanical Department of a Newspaper" was read by David Ramaley. H. P. Hall read a paper on "The Political Emoluments of Newspapers."

The committee on resolutions offered its report, the first resolution creating quite a commotion. In substance it denounced the practice on the part of newspaper men of selling their railway mileage. Many of those present opposed the resolution on the ground that it reflected upon the editors. It was claimed by some of the opponents that most of the advertising tickets on the market were given out directly by the roads themselves. The resolution was finally laid on the table.

Joel P. Heatwole, H. P. Hall and W. J. C. Kenyon were appointed a committee to examine into the feasibility of taking an excursion through the South in connection with the meeting next winter. Resolutions were adopted declaring the rates charged by express companies to be unreasonably high and calling upon the legislature to remedy the matter by law; expressing appreciation of the National Education association and declaring the government to be guilty of unjust discrimination in printing return cards on envelopes. The Minnesota delegation in congress were asked to work for the discontinuance of the latter custom. A resolution endorsing Maj. T. M. Newson for a consular position was adopted. The resolution of E. V. Smalley providing for the establishment of a bureau of immigration was indefinitely postponed.

The committee on delegates to the National Editorial convention, to be held in Boston in June, reported the following delegates, who were elected:

Irving Todd, Hastings Gazette; W. B. Mitchell, St. Cloud Journal-Press; G. S. Pease, Anoka Union; H. E. Hoard, Montevideo Leader; E. H. Dearth, Le Sueur News; William Hinds, Shakopee Argus; W. C. Brown; Wells Advocate; A. C. Bellyea, Elbow Lake Herald; A. F. Ingalls, Pine Island Journal. Alternates, H. A. Castle, F. S. Verbeck, J. S. Pinney, H. P. Hall of St. Paul, and Fred N. Van Duzee, of the Luverne News.

Mrs. Lila M. Chapman, of the St. James Journal; Miss Anna E. Rathburn, Pelican Rapids Pioneer; and Miss O'Brien, Atwater Press, were elected active members of the association without fees.

President, L. P. Hunt, of the Mankato Free Press; first vice president, George N. Lanphere, Moorhead News; second vice president, Ed A. Paradis, Midway News; third vice president, Gen. S. P. Jennison, Red Wing Republican; recording secretary, E. H. Dearth, Le Sueur News; corresponding secretary, T. M. Newson, St. Paul; treasurer, David Ramaley, St. Paul. Executive Committee—S. F. Verbeck, St. Paul, chairman; F. C. Gottrey, Pine City Pioneer; and H. E. Hoard, Montevideo Leader.

The convention voted thanks to the officers for their work, H. P. Hall for work on the executive committee, to the chamber of commerce for the use of the room for the convention and to the St. Paul publishers for the banquet at the Windsor. It was resolved to meet in 1891 in St. Paul or Minneapolis.

After adjournment the editors paid a visit to the historical society rooms. Afterward the Pioneer Press building was inspected by a majority of the visitors, all of them expressing delight and surprise at the magnitude and convenience of the edifice.

HALF-BREEDS HAD A GRUDGE.

A Hardware Man Unmercifully Beaten in Fort Pierre.

PIERRE, S. D., Special Telegram, —Boomers continued to cross the river all night last night, and the scene at Fort Pierre has been very exciting. Building was done by the light of the lantern, and a large number of fights took place. About midnight a fight took place between a number of half-breed bullies and a fellow called Jesse James, who took over a load of hardware and started a store in a tent. The half-breeds have a grudge against him, and assaulted him. He was unmercifully beaten about the head and face with the butt end of a six-shooter. His nose was smashed and he was dangerously wounded in the head. He was carried over to Pierre this morning in an unconscious condition. Revolvers were flourished and firing continued all night, but no one was shot. About twenty-five houses were up by this morning. The citizens have formed a vigilance committee, and claim-jumpers will be seriously dealt with.

FURTHER COMPLICATIONS.

A man named Wolgemath is also badly hurt, and a number of others were sandbagged and hurt in the general melee. A public meeting was held at Fort Pierre, and committees were appointed to organize the county and city, and for various other purposes, including one to confer with Northwestern railway regarding the conflicting claims of the road and settlers who now occupy every foot of the mile square. A vigilance committee went to a widow named Evans, who had moved a house on to a lot which, she claimed, had been jumped by a man named McKee, and ordered her to move the building at once or they would do it for her. She defied them, and to-day a mob bodily lifted the house off and set it in the street. A car containing prominent Northwestern officials came in to-night, and they will at once take means to enforce their claims as owners of the mile square. This will still farther complicate matters, and will surely lead to trouble. Men who were at the opening of Oklahoma say the disorder on that occasion was small compared with what can now be seen here.

WANT A VOICE.

Strike of Miners Over the Appointment of a Mine Physician.

HURLEY, Wis., Special Telegram, —The entire force of miners at the Aurora mine, 400 in number, struck to-day, the trouble being over the appointment of a mine physician. It is customary in the iron country for each mine to appoint a physician, who receives $1 a month from each employe. Doctors Thomas and McCabe held this position at the Aurora for a number of years until a couple of weeks ago, when General Manager Dickerman discharged them, substituting Dr. McLeod. This appointment was anything but satisfactory to the miners, who claim that as they pay the physicians, they are entitled to some voice in the matter. A number of meetings were held, and a committee of miners was appointed to wait on the management and request that Doctors Thomas and McCabe be reinstated. The management, however, refused to make any concessions, and the trouble culminated in a strike to-day. The miners held a secret session this afternoon, the result of which could not be learned. Work at the Aurora is entirely suspended, only enough men being at work to keep it clear of water. Threats of violence have been made against any one who attempts to work. If the matter is not settled to-morrow the trouble is likely to be very serious, as it may result in a general strike on the Gogebic against the present system of employing mine physicians.

MONTANA'S MINES.

Extract From the Annual Report of the Mining Inspector.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram, —State Mining Inspector Swallow will say, among other things, in his first report on the mines of Montana:

More than 12,000 mining claims have been located in Montana under the mining laws of the United States. Probably one-quarter of that number have been so developed as to show the kind and size and general character of the veins, and thus enable one to form some safe opinion of the quantity and richness of the ore and what machinery is best adapted to work it; and enough work has been done on these to show they are bright prospects, and to give them a market value. There are fully 2,000 mines so well opened, and show ore enough to place them on a paying basis by erecting mills or furnaces for reducing the ores, or by shipping them to works already erected. But comparatively few of this great number have really been put on such paying basis. And yet these few are wonderfully productive. In fact we have, with very few exceptions, merely scratched the surfaces of our thousand mines, and yet they have for several years yielded so much gold, silver, copper and lead as to place Montana at the head of the mining states.

Firemen Injured.

CHICAGO, Special.—The large brick and stone building at the corner of Adams and Market streets, owned by the great dry goods house of J. V. Farwell & Co., caught fire early this morning, and before the flames could be subdued the northern half of it was gutted. This portion of the building was occupied by Taylor Brothers, dealers in hats and caps, and Work Brothers, dealers in clothing and uniforms. A heavy fire wall, which runs through the middle of the structure, prevented the spread of the flames to the northern half of the building, which is filled with the heavy wholesale stock of dry goods of the Messrs. Farwell. Loss, $475,000; fully covered by insurance. William Salander fell from a ladder striking on his head on the stone pavement. He was terribly cut, his skull fractured, and he will probably die. John Meyers fell with the crashing in of the third floor, and was dragged out unconscious. It is thought he will recover. Three other firemen were badly cut about the face and hands by flying glass, but not dangerously hurt.

May Give a Bonus.

ROCHESTER, Special, Telegram. There wa a joint railroad meeting of the townships of Pleasant Grove, Marion and High Forest to discuss the matter of giving the Winona & Southwestern a bonus. Messrs. Simpson & Lamberton, of the Winona & Southwestern, were present besides several from Rochester. Almost all of High Forest expressed themselves as in favor of granting them a bonus of probably $10,000, and they will undoubtedly ask Marion and Pleasant Grove for about $3,000 to $5,000 apiece. This move is now being opposed by many Rochester men, as it will cut off some of the best tributary country of this city. No definite proposition was submitted, but probably there will be in a short time.

Rumored Stickney-Hill Combine.

MASON CITY, Iowa, Special Telegram, —It is rumored here that the Stickney and Hill railroad interests in this territory are to combine. The Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City line is to push through from Manly over ten miles leased from the Central and connect here with the Mason City & Fort Dodge, giving it an excellent south and southwest opening. What effect this deal would have on the Winona & Southwestern, an extension of the Lackawanna system, is not known, but it is thought they also will push through to this city.

WILL MAKE A TEST.

Arrests Likely to be Made for the Violation of the Montana Lottery Law.

The Louisiana Concern Will Try to Purchase the Montana Lottery Company.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram, —It is possible that in short time some arrests will be made for the violation of the lottery law, and a test case made either in the Silver Bow or Lewis and Clarke courts. It is a well known fact that lotteries are openly conducted in Montana, and the business of selling lottery tickets is extensively carried on, though both appear to be prohibited by law. Section 2, article 19 of the Montana constitution reads:

> The legislative assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets in this state.

This would in itself seem to prohibit the conducting of lotteries or sale of tickets, as it is generally conceded that the constitution repeals all territorial laws in conflict with its provisions. At the last session of the territorial legislature a law was passed prohibiting lotteries in Montana. This law contains one section providing that lotteries existing prior to the passage of the act, and having advertised drawings to take place after May 1, 1889, the date at which the law took effect, should on that date place their affairs in the hands of a receiver appointed by the court, who would finish up the business. Last May the Montana lottery placed their business in the hands of a receiver and have been continuing it in that way ever since, claiming, it is said, that the law permits this. The intent of the law was evidently to prohibit all lotteries and not to allow but one drawing after the first of last May. If the lottery company are right they will be allowed to operate until further legislation on the subject. What lends interest to this question at present is that it is reported that the Louisiana lottery schemers, who were knocked out in North Dakota, are negotiating to buy out the Montana Lottery company so as to gain a foothold in this state. This is but a rumor and lacks confirmation, yet many believe it in view of the boast of the lottery schemers that if they were defeated in North Dakota they would try to work Montana. Further developments are expected in a few days.

MAY REQUEST SENATOR CASEY'S PRESENCE.

BISMARCK, N. D., Special Telegram, —Chairman Robinson, of the senate investigating committee, has not yet returned, but is expected back in time for a meeting of the committee to-morrow. One of the members said to-day that the committee was considering the question of requesting the presence of United States Senator Casey as a witness.

ITS NEXT MOVE.

NEW ORLEANS, Special—The Louisiana Lottery company is making a desperate effort to retain its corporate life. It has failed to obtain a charter from North Dakota, and its next move, it is said, will be an enormous bribe to the Louisiana legislature for a renewal of its present charter, which will expire in two years hence. Its proposition will be to pay the entire state debt, amounting to from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. The lottery is earning $250,000 a month, or $3,000,000 per year net. Many prominent Louisianians fear that the bribe may be accepted.

CAUSED EXCITEMENT.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., Special Telegram. —Considerable excitement was caused to-day by a report that the Indians occupying the land at Lower Brule, sought by the town siters, had concluded to abandon the land as a result of a proposition made them by the town siters. If the report is true as it undoubtedly is, coming from a source considered absolutely reliable, it will simplify matters somewhat and probably result in a continuance of work on the part of the town siters. There is considerable apprehension, however, as to the position the interior department will take in cases where certificates have been issued the Indians for lands now occupied by them under the severalty act, as to whether the certificates could now be canceled or not. Many buildings belonging to the town siters are still upon the ground, and the troops stationed on the ground have not as yet resorted to the extreme of removing or destroying them. If the proposition of the Indians is accepted it will still leave the matter in a decidedly complicated condition, as there are many conflicting interests between the boomers occupying the ground, and a great deal of confidence would have to be reposed in the Indians, as by the Sioux bill and demand the land any time before the expiration of a year. The Milwaukee Railroad company has taken action in regard to preventing settlement on the lands granted it by the Sioux bill which had previously been treated for by the company with the Indians, which will have the effect of removing again those settlers at Lower Brule, who on Saturday moved their buildings on the company's ground in order to avoid the troops. It does not affect the settlers at Lower Brule, however, so deeply as it does those persons on the tract on the east side of the river immediately adjoining Chamberlain on the north. Here a large number of people settled in 1885, when thrown open to settlement by President Arthur, and they have since remained there and in many instances established and built up large and comfortable homes, expecting to take advantage of the town site act, which allows each settler a two-acre tract. They were unable, however, to secure a filing, as the land was immediately withdrawn from the market by President Cleveland. The settlers claim to have a strong case, and many state to your correspondent that they will at least remain upon the land until reimbursed for their trouble and outlay, which was guaranteed them by the Sioux bill, but regarding which no action has as yet been taken by the department. Settlement on the lands west of the river goes steadily on, there being no diminution in the number to-day over previous days. The crossing has again become perfectly secure, the past few days being rather cold the ice bridge in the Missouri has frozen firm.

INDIANS CANNOT SELL.

MITCHELL, S. D., Special Telegram —Col. John H. King and F. M. Goodykoontz are in the city, en route to Chamberlain from Washington, where they have been for several weeks working for the opening of the reservation. Goodykoontz said there could be no doubt that the settlers, townsiters and all others on the river front either above or below Chamberlain would have to vacate. That land belonged to Indians, and the government would protect them in their right. Col. King and himself had been given positively to understand that before leaving Washington by the department of the interior. The talk about Indians selling their rights in the land was nonsense. They could not do that for the next twenty-five years, even if they should want to. Goodykoontz and King are accompanied by Capt. Henry Wahly, of the interior department, who is sent out by Commissioner Graff to open up the new land office at Chamberlain.

NOT OF ONE MIND.

Difference of Opinion as to a Reduction in the Revenues.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, —The committee on ways and means are finding it very difficult to agree on any other reduction of the revenues than that to be accomplished by the repeal of the tobacco tax. The majority of the committee are in favor of free sugar, but they meet with opposition in their party in the house, which threatens the defeat of their bill if it includes this item. They are having a deal of trouble over this question, but one of the most perplexing features of the situation is that there is considerable doubt about the fiscal affairs of the government admitting of any reduction of revenue at this time. The regular appropriations and the differences for the ensuing year will amount to about $430,000,000, and the estimated revenues for that year are but $450,000,000. The passage of the Blair bill, or any of the proposed general pension bills, would wipe out this difference of $20,000,000 and leave a shortage. If any of these bills become law, all idea of reducing the revenue must be abandoned, and the only reductions of duties practicable would be such as would operate to increase revenue by encouraging importations. The friends of sugar in the house opposing the repeal of the duty propose to accept a reduction of between 20 and 30 per cent as a compromise, urging that the government cannot spare the revenue which would be wiped out by putting it on the free list, and it is possible that there may be a compromise on this basis. It is also claimed that the repeal of the tobacco tax is probable unless it is found that the revenue cannot be spared. This is based on the fact that certain Southern Republicans have said that they would not support any tariff bill if the tax on tobacco was not removed. To this proposition the Northwestern members strongly dissent. They will not, if they can help it, vote for any bill that repeals the tobacco tax. A great many Western men are of the opinion that the revenue derived from the tobacco tax may be profitably expended in improving rivers and harbors and erecting necessary public buildings. The necessary reductions of the surplus, many claim, should be made upon the necessaries rather than the luxuries, even if it would allow more importations. The majority of the committee will find it a serious task to frame a satisfactory tariff bill.

BESTED KILRAIN.

NEW ORLEANS, Special.—J. J. Corbett, teacher of the Olympian club at San Francisco, bested Jake Kilrain in a six-round contest for a purse of $3,500, at the Southern Athletic club rooms to-night. Kilrain had agreed to knock Corbett out in six rounds but was outfought at every point. Corbett is a giant youngster, well educated, ambitious, and is regarded in the West as the coming world's champion. He has never been defeated. Kilrain was in fine trim up to Thursday night, but the death of James at Dallas, Tex., unmanned him somewhat, according to Prof. Muldoon. Benziah, who was implicated in the James affair, defeated Johnson in four rounds. Mike Cleary whipped Mike Smith, the Cincinnati heavy weight, in two rounds. The club rooms were especially fitted up for the matches, and a large number of spectators were present. Kilrain stated his weight varied between 201 and 205 pounds. Corbett tipped the scales at 183 pounds. Although Corbett is six feet one and one-half inches tall, he looked a mere boy compared with his adversary. Muldoon and Cleary seconded Kilrain and Tony Danforth and Mike Smito were behind Corbett. George Scott was bottleholder and E. B. Violett referee. Both men sparred for an opening, watching each other's style. Corbett carried his left loosely, while his right held guard. Kilrain tried his rushing tactics, but Corbett was tao lively for him. The referee decided at the end of the sixth roun that Corbett had outfought Kilrain throughout. Kilrain says his defeat by Corbett is due to the fact that all in-fighting was barred. Corbett had the longer reach and could tip and get away. Kilrain would like to box him ten rounds with five-ounce gloves, but would prefer a finish fight with light gloves.

SMITH ALL RIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, —The North Dakota delegation was surprised to-day by the withdrawal of the name of John A. Percival for receiver of the Devils Lake, N. D., land office. They knew nothing of the matter until the message came to the senate with the list of appointments. Percival was confirmed Friday last, but Secretary Noble went to the senate and asked that the confirmation be reconsidered, which was done. To-day followed the withdrawal. Receiver Smith, the present incumbent of the office, was among the number who were recently charged with being short in their accounts and Percival was appointed to succeed him. Since then the secretary has been informed that Smith was all right and by way of vindication wanted to prove his innocence and then resign. The secretary, in order to put Smith right, has held up Percival and continued Smith. Senator Pierce says:

> Mr. Smith was removed by the secretary of the interior on a report of a clerk that he was short in his accounts, and Mr. Percival was appointed, the latter having been recommended for the place when a vacancy should occur. It now turns out that the clerk in charge of accounts was wrong, and that the removal of Mr. Smith under such charges was an injustice. I would not approve of such an act, and I am sure that Mr. Percival would not. The latter's nomination, therefore, has been withdrawn, so that whatever may be done in the future may be entirely independent of the charge preferred against Mr. Smith. The secretary telegraphed the facts to-day to Mr. Percival.

RECEIVED A REPLY.

Parnell Told That the Commission Will Be Thanked.

LONDON, Special.—In the house of commons to-day Mr. Parnell asked for information as to the government's intentions regarding the report of the special Parnell commission. Smith, the government leader, said that the government intended to ask the house to adopt the report and to thank the commission for its just and impartial conduct. Mr. Smith's answer was greeted with cheers, counter-cheers and laughter. T. W. Russell attacked the Parnellites, saying that they now bespattered praise on the Gladstonites whom before they had covered with the worst epithets. Thus, Earl Spencer was charged with murder and every effort made to blacken his character. Mr. O'Brien, interrupting Mr. Russell, said: "I certainly would not let any man say that outside of this house." Continuing, Mr. Russell said the charge he made against the Parnellites was certainly true. Now the Parnellites embraced Earl Spencer. The opposition asserted that Mr. Balfour had enforced the coercion law with needless severity. Probably the press clause in the Crimes act was unwise, but in other respects coercion had assisted to restore and maintain order in Ireland.

STOLE HIS WIFE.

Sad Experience of an Alabama Man Among Mormons.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Special.—George Preston of Clay county, Ala., has returned home from Utah, where he went ten months ago as a convert to Mormonism. He tells a thrilling story of the treatment of converts by the Mormons when they reach Utah. He says the women converts are married to elders, who in most cases have three or four wives already, and if they offer the slightest protest or resistance they are flogged or otherwise punished until they submit. The men who have been promised homes and farms are compelled to give up all the money they have to the church, and then they are turned adrift to live as best they can. Preston and his young wife were converted to Mormonism about a year ago by two elders who were proselyting in Clay county. They sold all they had and went to Utah. Preston says his wife was stolen from him and carried to Salt Lake City, he thinks, but he was never able to find any trace of her. He was then by threats compelled to give the church all the money he had, about $200, and then told he must look out for himself. He started home three months ago and worked his way back.

LAND DECISIONS.

A Number of Cases Disposed of in the Interior Department.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram.—Assistant Secretary Chandler, of the interior department, to-day reversed the general land office decision in the case of Berend Loers vs. James M. Way, the contest involving Way's timber culture entry for land in section 26, township 100, range 55, Yankton, S. D., district. The general land office had canceled Way's entry. The assistant secretary overrules this. The assistant secretary affirmed the order of the land office canceling E. W. Patton's entry of southeast quarter section 17, township 16, range 67, in the Mitchell, S. D., district. He also affirmed the general land office decision canceling the homestead entry of B. E. Crane for the northwest quarter of section 24, township 107, range 57 in the Mitchell, S. D., district. Secretary Noble modified the order of the land commissioner in the case of Frank E. Mease, allowing him to file supplementary proof for his pre-emption cash entry of the southwest quarter of section 20, township 105, range 161, Mitchell district. The secretary affirmed the decision of the land office denying the motion of Horatio Wales, Jr., assignee of C. G. Holbrook, for a review of a decision canceling the latter's entry in section 1, township 104, range 59 in the Mitchell district.

CAMPAIGN PLANS.

Rumor That Cleveland's Friends Will Buy the St. Paul Globe.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, —An interesting bit of gossip is afloat here to-day. Daniel Lamont, the president's private secretary during the last administration, was here yesterday, and, in conversation with a friend, said that a proposition was made to some of the Democratic editors at the publishers' meeting in New York last week to purchase the St. Paul Globe. Mr. Lamont said that it was considered good property and would be a good chance for some one with an ambition to try journalism in that city. Mr. Lamont's statement, coupled with the fact that he is supposed to know as nearly as any one the campaign plans of Cleveland's friends, has started the gossip that Cleveland's supporters are already on the war path and that the purchase of certain newspaper plants to boom his candidacy early in the game is a part of the battle they have mapped out.

The First Death.

TOULON, Special.—The squadron, with the exception of the Yorktown, stood out of the harbor of Port Mahone and shaped a course for France. The Yorktown was left behind to bury its dead—the first death in the squadron —Sergeant Crane, who succumbed to a long and painful attack of pneumonia, superinduced by influenza. He commanded the Yorktown's marine guard, and was respected by all he came in contact with. He was a veteran of the civil war and was attached to the marine corps for over twenty years. Sergeant Crane was a native of Maine, a Free Mason and about forty-five years of age.

Agreeable People.

We all know people whom it is pleasant to meet; people from whom we are sure to receive a smile, a kind word, a cordial hand-shake, or some other token of good-will. When one is depressed in spirits, or, as the common saying is, "blue" the meeting with a genial, merry-hearted friend has a magical effect; indeed, I have known the encounter with such a person to turn the whole current of one's life.

Agreeability is dependent upon many conditions; it may be inherent, it may be the result of judicious early education, or of pleasant surroundings, or of a happy combination of circumstances, but all will agree that it is a desirable quality, and whether inherent or not, should be carefully cultivated. There are people whose mighty efforts to be agreeable are so distressing as to defeat their object. Such people should bear in mind that agreeability must proceed from the heart, and in a grown person is the result of continued practice. One feels so comfortable after having said or done something to brighten the pathway of another, that it pays one's self to be agreeable.

Some people allow all their little annoyances to affect their conduct toward others, whether their unfortunate friends are to blame or not. I was once visiting a charming family. All its members, with one exception, were interesting and agreeable. The only son of the house was in business in the town in which they lived. If his affairs had moved prosperously through the day he came home in a pleasant, entertaining mood, but if anything had annoyed him he was outrageously disagreeable and rude, no matter how many guests were present. The discomfiture of his mother and sisters may well be imagined; indeed, as the dinner hour approached they were in a state of nervousness which disappeared immediately if the "tyrant" came in with a bright face; otherwise it continued until he relieved us of his disagreeable presence. If the fact had not been so positively demonstrated to me, I would not have believed it possible that one disagreeable person could have counteracted the influence of four agreeable people. I believe that the young man's disposition was the result of continued indulgence by his mother and sisters. He had tyrannized over them for years, and had become a powerful despot in the household.

"Tired and cross" is a common expression, and most of us know what it means. A friend of mine, a most agreeable woman, says that when she finds herself getting "tired and cross," she takes a nap, a bath, a walk, or a drive, goes to see some one whose walk in life is less pleasant than her own—does anything different from the work that has tried and worried her. In this way she preserves health and temper, governs well her children, and keeps her entire household in a state of peace and happiness.

Many parents do not realize that in training their children a regard for others should be instilled into their minds. A spoiled, selfish child may be very dear to its parents, but after the parents have passed away the child has become a disagreeable man or woman, what disinterested parties will tolerate the selfish, tyrannical ways of such a person?—American Agriculturist for February.

Newspaper Women.

Brooklyn Times.

The number of newspaper women in New York increases steadily. A year ago or thereabouts a young woman anxious for journalistic laurels applied through the medium of a friend to Amos J. Cummings for a chance to shine a little for some small section of the world through the columns of the Evening Sun. Mr. Cummings swore a warm-hued and picturesque and withal good-natured though decisive oath that in his day there should be no woman bothering about the office of the Evening Sun. It is now the day of Mr. Brisbane, and under the new regime a more fortunate young woman—a very clever one, formerly of the staff of the Cleveland Leader—has found an opportunity. An appreciative part of my mail is made up of letters from girls who ask if there is any future for women in newspaperdom. There are many thing to be thought of by a woman who would apprentice herself to journalism; temperament, versatility and the power to live harmoniously in a newspaper office, which is a little world of its own. A girl may have every qualification, but she will not be successful if she makes herself felt as a restraint by trying to impose on busy men the formalities of parlor etiquette. She must have a good constitution to start with, a clear conscience and good nerves, so that she can be self-controlled. After a certain amount of literary talent she need sheer common sense more than anything.

The Miracle Gun.

The German press is discussing at length the merits of a new French repeating air rifle called the "miracle gun." The rifle was invented by M. Paul Giffard in Paris, the original projector of the Parisian pneumatic post. It is described thus: "The weapon is light, much lighter than any of the army rifles now in use. It resembles the magazine gun in that steel cartridge about a span and a half long and as thick as a man's thumb is attached to the one barrel by means of a screw. This cartridge contains 300 shots, which can be discharged as rapidly or slowly as a man desires. Since neither powder or any other explosive, but only compressed and liquified air, supplies the expelling force, no smoke and no flash accompany the discharge. Only a short, sharp, low report is heard as the ball leaves the cartridge. At the recent trial the ball traveled with wonderful accuracy and penetrated deep into the wall of the shooting room. As soon as one cartridge is emptied of its 300 shots, another cartridge can be screwed on the gun in the twinkling of an eye. M. Giffard says that the 300 shots in a cartridge can be produced at a cost of about 2½ cents. The gun itself can be manufactured for about $5."

Reading Faces.

It showed her appreciative temperament when a lady told with triumph the other day of such a pretty compliment paid her unconsciously. She said it happened three other persons with herself were approaching a crossing where a neat looking servant was standing, evidently sorely perplexed as to locality. With shrewd eyes the anxious domestic examined each lady's face in turn without a word. Then with perfect confidence turned to the narrator and very civilly inquired of a direction. Children and animals are said to be infallible judges of the integrity of those they come in contact with, and to this list may well be added the wayfaring person.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SCHOOL OVER A GROCERY.

I taught one of the first schools ever taught in the great mining camp of Leadville, Colo., and naturally enough I had many unusual and amusing experiences. The schoolroom was the second floor of a two story log building, the lower floor being used for a grocery store.

Every thing in the schoolroom was of the most primitive kind. The seats were long pine benches. There were no desks, no blackboards and not an inch of plastering in the whole building. There was nothing between the grocery store and the schoolroom but a loosely laid floor of unseasoned pine that became looser as it seasoned. It was, unfortunately, full of knot holes, and whenever a customer came into the store for a bar of soap or a pound of sugar, the school heard the entire transaction, and as the merchant was a very loquacious man we often heard some funny things.

The schoolroom water pail was kept on a pine box at one end of the room and accidentally overturned a good many times that winter, and, strangly enough, the boys sitting near it could never tell just how these accidents happened, but they always occurred when there were more than the usual number of customers in the store below, and they never failed to throw the school into paroxysms of joy. The effect was different on the groceryman.

"Here you, Mister Teacher!" he would roar up to me.

"Well, what is it?" I would ask in as calm and dignified a manner as I could assume when talking through knot holes at my feet.

"Them boys if pourin' water down here ag'in and wettin' my goods and my customers, and I ain't goin' to stand it?"

"Boys!" I would say sternly, "did any of you upset that pail?"

"And they did!" the groceryman would shriek out, "you just come down here and see! If you can't make 'em behave I kin now and I'll do it too!"

One day he carried his threat into execution. There were several customers in the store and I was busy with a class in geography when an ominous splash and the giggling of two boys told me that the newly filled water pail had gone over again. There were litte feminine shrieks below, and the next minute the grocer sugar scoop in hand, appeared in the school room.

Without deigning to notice me he ran back to where the overturned pail was and began laying about him with the sugar scoop, and before I could recover from any amazement nearly every pupil had gone shrieking and laughing down the stairs, with the irate grocer in mad pursuit, hammering away with the scoop on the heads and backs of the guilty and innocent alike.

A few minutes later he roared up through the knot holes:

"Now, if you can't make them youngsters behave themselves and have some manners, I kin!"

This singular lesson in courtesy had such a salutary effect upon the school that the pail was not overturned again for two whole days. The next week we moved into a new and better room on the ground floor, greatly to the delight of the grocer.—J. L. Harbour in Wide Awake.

Unrolling a Mummy.

An Egyptian mummy was recently unrolled in an English university. It had for 50 years occupied a place in the college museum, but it is not known how it came into the possession of the authorities. The mummy was swathed in scores of yards of thick, yellowish linen of fine texture. The bands of linen varied in width from four or five inches to about a foot. Some of them were laid lengthwise along the body; others were wrapped round and round it. At the beginning of the process of unrolling, there was a perceptible sickly smell of aromatics, which, as the work went on, gave place to a more pronounced and decidedly disagreeable odor. When a great part of the linen had been removed, black stains, caused by the bitumen, became apparent, and nearer to the body the wrappings had suffered considerably from contact with this substance. Two small pieces of linen with fringes were discovered in the course of the unrolling, and these bore inscriptions more or less impaired by the bitumen. When at last the coverings had been removed, the body was found to be of a very dark brown color—so dark, indeed, as to be almost black. The skin where it remained was hard and shiny, the arms and hands lay lengthwise upon the abdomen, while the heart and intestines were placed beneath the knees. The features when disclosed stood out very clearly, and were those of a rather handsome person, but the sex could not be determined. Glass eyes had been placed in the head, and there was a linen plug in the ear. The mummy seemed to belong to a period about 800 years before Christ. The mummy was about 5 feet 3 inches in height, and was that of an Egyptian, probably one of the class corresponding to the lower middle class of modern times.

Knew The Value of Advice.

When D. K. Tenney was admitted to the bar he was one of the "boys." He enjoyed a good time as well as any one and the following story is told of him: He went to a country dance near Madison, Wis., one night and became smitten with one of the country girls. He danced with her nearly all the evening, regardless of the fact that a certain six footer in the room kept watching him threateningly. Finally a friend approached. "Dan," he said, "do you see that big fellow on the other side of the room?" "Yes." "Well, he's going to lick the life out of you." "What for?" asked Tenny. "You've been dancing with his girl all the evening." "I didn't know it. What shall I do?" "Well, if I were you, I'd put on my coat and make a sneak for home. I'd get away from here just as quick as I could." The embryo lawyer said never a word, but reached down in his pocket and pulled out a two dollar bill. "What are you doing?" asked the friend. "Take it." "I don't want any money." "Take it," repeated Tenny. "I've taken five dollars for a blamed sight worse advice than that."—Chicago Tribune.

No Cause of Action.

A young man in New Jersey who sued his adopted mother for naming him Moses Exodus Matthew Luke Nnmbers Smith was beaten in the suit, but the court took occasion to tell the woman that lunatic asylums always quartered such as she in the left wing.

Fighting Parson.

During the Eighteenth century Presbyterian ministers settled among the people of northern Scotland needed to be men of great strength, piety and zeal. The Rev. Eneas Sage, whose story is told in "Parish Life in the North of Scotland," belonged to the order of muscular Christians, being more than six feet in height and stout in proportion.

A year or two after he had become minister of Lochearean, he announced one Sunday his intention of holding "a diet catechising" at the house of a dissolute man, a desperate character of great physical strength.

The minister's friends remonstrated with him, but he went to the man's house, and was ordered to go away.

"Easier said than done," answered the minister; "but you may turn me out if you can."

They were both powerful men, and neither of them hesitated to put upon the other his ponderous strength. After a short but fierce struggle, the minister became the victor, and the landlord, prostrated upon his own floor, was with a rope coiled round his arms and feet bound over to keep the peace.

The people of the district were then called in, and the minister proceeded seriously to discharge the duty of catechising them. When that was finished, he set himself to deal with the delinquent present. The man was solemnly rebuked, and the minister so moved his conscience that he afterwards became a decided Christian.—Youth's Companion.

A Steer in the House.

A drove of Texas cattle were being driven across the railroad tracks near the Martell house. One of the drove, a large steer, became separated from the others and ran down the tracks into the Vandalia yards. Being close pressed by William Little, the driver, the steer mounted the outside stairs of a two story tenement house situated close to the round house, and entered the kitchen and took possession. Mrs. A. O. Hennesy, with her baby in her arms, had just time to escape by a back stairway and save the life of herself and child. The infuriated steer upset the kitchen table, smashed the dishes, broke the chairs and other furniture, and overturned the stove. The driver mounted the stairs and, after some difficulty, managed to get a ring in the animal's nose, but it broke and was useless. The animal, after having completely wrecked the room, leisurely descended the stairs and was captured.

Disagreeable Agreement.

It is dangerous to make a confession unless one really means it, and we may add that it is sometimes dangerous to take a confession as honestly meant.

A husband and wife between whom a little unpleasant passage had occurred, had made the matter up, and the wife said, as if to clear her conscience:

"Oh, well, I suppose I have my faults."

"Yes, my dear," said the husband.

"What?"

"I simply said yes."

"That I have my faults!" exclaimed the wife, indignantly. "What are they, I should like to know?"

"Well, to begin with"——

"No. I don't want to hear."—Youth's Companion.

The age of kingly chivalry has not entirely passed away. The king of Greece, walking in the street a few days ago saw a man thrashing a little boy. Indignant at the outrage, his Majesty insisted that the man should release the lad. The man shook his fist at the unknown person and raised his stick to strike him. The King knocked him down on the spot, called the police, and revealing his identity, ordered the man to be taken to the police station, and there beaten with the same stick and released.

Arthur Pugsley jumped from a fast train at Corning and received injuries from which he can not recover. He lives at Carbon and was on his way home.

Prepare for Spring

Now is the time to attend to your personal condition in preparation for the change to spring season. If you have not "wintered well," if you are tired out from overwork, if your blood has become impure from close confinement in badly ventilated offices or shops, you should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It will purify and vitalize your blood, create a good appetite, and give your whole system tone and strength.

"For a first-class spring medicine my wife and I think very highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla. We both took it last spring. It did us a great deal of good and we felt better through the hot weather than ever before. It cured my wife of sick headache, from which she has suffered a great deal, and relieved me of a dizzy, tired feeling. I think every one ought to take something to purify the blood before the hot weather comes on, and we shall certainly take Hood's Sarsaparilla this spring." J. H. Pearce, Supt. Granite Railway Co., Concord, N. H.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

DON'T DO IT.

From the "Medical Review." "Upon the first symptoms of Liver Complaint the misguided sufferer applies blue pill, calomel and other mineral poisons, in the delusive hope of obtaining relief, whereas these powerful purgatives but aggravate the disease and debilitate the constitution. Dr. Tutt has had the courage to ignore this killing practice of the old school. His remedies, drawn from the vegetable kingdom, are almost miraculous in renovating the broken down body. The letters of cured patients in the Doctor's possession are a tribute of gratitude to his genius and skill which but few can exhibit. His Liver Pills are sent all over the world. They can be found in every town and hamlet in the United States."

THE NORTHWEST.

MINNESOTA.

During the year 1889 in the state there were 9,901 marriages and 492 divorces.

Arthur J. Carroll, postmaster at Plainview and a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, died of consumption.

Capitalists are making arrangements for the development of a valuable iron mine at Grand Rapids, Itasca county.

The Minnesota house at St. Charles was entered by burglars recently and a large amount of cigars and other articles taken.

A starch factory has been established at Lake City and the farmers in that vicinity are preparing to plant potatoes on an extensive scale the coming season.

While felling trees in the Mission Creek lumber camp Erick Nelson was hit by a limb, causing a fracture of the skull. His recovery is doubtful.

Three carloads of seed grain have been shipped from Kenyon this winter for the use of the needy in North Dakota who suffered the loss of their crop last year.

Martin Schmaudt and two workmen were terribly injured near Hutchinson by the bursting of the boiler of a threshing engine which they were using to run a saw mill. Schmaudt may die.

Miss Groh, of St. Paul, died the other day from blood poisoning, resulting from rubbing a pimple on her face with her gloved fingers. This poison is said to have been in the dye of the kid glove.

At Mankato William Lenz was convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of John Schwartz at Pleasant Mound last July. The verdict was a genuine surprise, as a verdict of acquittal was looked for.

John B. Gregoire of Mazeppa was riding on the spring seat of a lumber wagon and in turning a corner rapidly was thrown to the ground. His shoulder was broken and dislocated.

Three drunken Indians at Appleton engaged in a fight with knives and tomhawks and two of them were seriously injured, one perhaps fatally. The person who sold the whisky will receive the attention of the authorities.

James Lawther, of Red Wing, who is now absent in Europe, has brought suit against his brother Samuel for mismanagement of his property during his absence—the complaint referring specifically to certain leased real estate in Minneapolis involving some $6,000.

Mr. Hamingway, a patient in the hospital at Rochester from Dodge county, had his leg amputated above the knee. Three or four weeks ago he accidentally pricked his knee with the tine of a pitchfork, producing a slight wound. It became sore and finally blood poisoning set in, with the result as stated.

The little village of Maple Lake Minn., was nearly swept away by the fire fiend. The blaze originated in George Desmond's smoke house, and, owing to the high wind, spread very rapidly. The buildings burned are Rohrenbach's store, building and contents, Welton Bros.' dry goods store, Kohler & Taylor's drug store, George Desmond's butcher shop and the Mansor house.

Charles Larson, Ole Olson and Magness Falk, section men, were run over and killed by a Northern Pacific passenger train two miles from Clear Lake. The Manitoba and Northern Pacific tracks run side by side at the point where the accident occurred and the men stepped off the Manitoba track to let a freight go by just in time to be caught by the Northern Pacific train.

Letters from London state that Dr. C. N. Hewitt, secretary of the Minnesota board of health, who is at present in that country studying and inspecting sanitary methods there employed, is being recieved with the highest respect everywhere and accorded every aid in his work. The doctor will soon go to Paris to spend some time with Pasteur, and thence to Berlin to visit Dr. Koch.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The citizens of Bismarck and Mandan will tender Bishop Shanley a reception and banquet on his arrival in the former city.

Ex-King Milan would probably be willing to confess, for the edification of the North Dakota statesmen, that he considers gambling worse than drinking.

A car is being built by the Pullman company of Chicago, for Rt. Rev. Dr. Walker, bishop of North Dakota, to be used by the bishop in his official duties throughout his diocese.

Two burglars named Fell and Hilton are under arrest for breaking into Post Trader Cottle's store at Fort Meade and appropriating about $100 worth of goods. Most of the property was recovered.

A Bismarck liquor dealer has the following sign above his doorway: "By order of the prohibitionists I will sell my stocks of wines, liquors and cigars before July 1, 1890, at greatly reduced prices. This is no selling out fake. Wish it was."

It is said that for years North Dakota people have been singularly lucky in getting prizes in the Louisiana lottery. A good many persons there have captured big prizes. The indications are that the Louisania swindle has been carefully paving its way for the coup which it has just attempted to make.

The city of Fargo owes a $148.25 board bill and won't pay it. Two years ago the legislature was invited to visit the city by the city council, and while on the visit put up at a hostelry and got away with hash to the value of that amount. The council votes to pay the bill at every meeting and the mayor promptly bobs up with a veto.

The contracts have been let for the survey of thirty-four townships in North Dakota, and work will be commenced early in the spring. There are five townships in Ramsey county, ten or twelve in Cavalier, eight or ten in Benson, six in Towner and six in Rolette. Dakota has $15,000 in the surveying fund, and this was divided between the two sections.

Secretary Noble denied a motion for review of the case of P. McWeeney vs. Charles W. Greene, involving title to land in section 35, township 154, range 64, of the Devils Lake, N. D., district. This case was decided last summer, when a review was asked by Mary McWeeney, the wife of P. McWeeney. The land is almost in the city of Devils Lake. McWeeney held another tract when the Ward boys of Chicago were killed. He was one of the twelve who killed the Wards, and while his trial was pending was in jail at Devils Lake, Mary Mc Gillecudy became attached to him there and married him. When McWeeney was released they went to Devils Lake. He was appointed a special officer, and was killed by Billy Oswald. The latter was sentenced to twelve years, but was pardoned by Gov. Mellette a short time before he ceased to be governor of Dakota Territory. Greene, who was in this suit, was opposed to the Creel gang, and the land in question was claimed as part of the Creel heritage on Devils Lake. After McWeeney's death his widow carried on the suit, but the last hope of securing the property vanished with the decision announced.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

A single mine in the Black Hills has already paid nearly $5,000,000 in dividends.

At the meeting of the Farmers' alliance of the Black Hills district, held at Whitewood recently, a resolution was adopted protesting against the proposed reduction in the number of members in the general assembly. The opinion expressed was that where there is a large membership there is less danger of robbery.

At Waterbury the other day Squire Atkins had a miraculous escape from serious injury. He was being lowered into a well fifty feet deep by aid of a bucket and windlass. When about twenty feet down the crank slipped from the hand of the man above and Atkins tumbled clear to the bottom. When taken out he was found to have escaped with a few bruises.

The Oneida Watchman has received information that the Chicago and Northwestern company has concluded to continue its line from Gettysburg to Pierre, and that the line when constructed will cross the Okobojo near Clifton. It is thought the survey will be made and grading commenced early in the spring. The reason for building this short line is to connect the north country with the Black Hills extension at Pierre and to prevent the Manitoba from building its surveyed line from Aberdeen to Pierre.

While oiling the shaft of an ore crusher in the Old Abe mine at Lead City, the clothing of William Fullerton became entangled in the machinery, and he was whirled around the rapidly revolving shaft for some time before he was discovered and the belt thrown off. When taken out it was found that his lower limbs were terribly mangled, the flesh torn from one hand and one rib broken. He was removed to the Homestake hospital, were both both legs were amputated and his sufferings eased as much as possible, but there is small hopes of his recovery.

While nursing her sick mother at Spencer's Grove, Mrs. Sam Kelso, of Walker, suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, my heart!" and fell dead to the floor. The doctor attributed her death to apoplexy. Mrs. Kelso was one of the leading ladies in Walker

Dick Herndon, while watering his horses near a school house three miles south of Moulton, Iowa, was fatally shot in the back by an unknown party with a gun loaded with buckshot. Herndon is a brother to the Herndon who was stabbed at a dance in that vicinity some weeks ago.

Speaking of Iowa newspaper property, the Davenport Democrat says: "It is noted that for every newspaper man who is ready to sell or get out of the business there are two or more anxious to get into the profession. On the whole newspaper property in Iowa pays as well as it does in any other state in the union."

Mrs. LaFountain and John Beattie eloped from Kansas City the other day without the consent of the woman's husband. They were captured in Davenport and held to await the arrival of Mr. LaFountain. A few hours in jail had the effect of changing the woman's mind and after a dramatic meeting with her better half she decided to make back tracks for Kansas City, leaving Beattie to finish the elopement all by himself.

J. H. Wenger, of South English, Keokuk county, has a clock with a history. It was brought to this country by Mr. Wenger's great-grandfather, in 1729, and has been in the family many years in the old country and is supposed to have been made sometime between 1600 and 1700. The clock is made of brass and has a solid silver face. It is artistically constructed and must have cost several hundred dollars when new.

CONGRESSIONAL.

A Resume of the Proceedings of Congress During the Past Week.

SENATE.

The Senate committee on territories ordered a favorable report on the bill for admission of Idaho into the union. The bill is reported substantially as introduced. A favorable report was ordered also on the bill approving, with amendments, the funding act of Arizona.

Among the bills introduced were these. By Mr. Platt—To prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor in the District of Columbia. By Mr. Wilson, of Iowa—Providing that in cases before the court of claims, involving a sum less than $3,000, where the decision will affect a class of cases or serve as a precedent, an appeal may be allowed to the supreme court without regard to the amount involved: also a bill appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Muscatine, Iowa.

HOUSE.

The House committee on Indian affairs heard arguments on the Senate resolution providing for the removal of the Apache Indian prisoners of war from Mt. Vernon Barracks to Fort Sill reservation in the Indian territory.

SENATE.

Senator Allen reported favorably his bills for two additional land districts in Washington from the committee on public lands.

Senator Squire introduced a bill providing for a federal survey of the proposed Lake Washington and the Puget Sound ship canal.

HOUSE.

Mr. Wickham of Ohio introduced in the house for reference a bill providing that the representatives elected to the fifty-second congress shall be returned from the same districts as similar representatives elected to the fifty-first congress.

The senate committee on territories has directed Chairman Platt to favorably report the bill for the admission of Idaho as a state, and it will be reported to the senate on Wednesday.

SENATE.

When the senate committee went into executive session immediately after the routine business the nomination of Indian Commissioner Morgan was again taken up for consideration. Senator Spooner made a long and strong argument in favor of confirmation. He answered seriatim the charges reflecting upon Gen. Morgan's military record and respecting his discrimination against Catholics in the management of Indian schools and the letting of contracts. He refuted all these charges in detail, and extolled the public and private character of the nominee. Senator Spooner was followed by Mr. Dawes, chairman of the committee on Indian affairs. His argument was in much the same direction and was strong in favor of confirmation. Gen. Morgan's nomination was confirmed by a vote of 28 ayes to 16 noes.

HOUSE.

In the house the debate on the code of rules was continued. Messrs. Dockery of of Missouri, Morse of Massachusetts, Allen of Michigan, Chipman of Michigan and Henderson of Iowa defended the proposed rules, while Messrs. McCreary of Kentucky, Cummings of New York and Buckalew of Pennsylvania spoke against them. Referring to the election cases Mr. Henderson said that if there was a member on the floor entitled to his seat, the Republicans would stand up and defend his rights, but if there was on the floor one who held his seat by black-hearted fraud or red-handed murder, they would unseat him if they had the power.

SENATE.

In the Senate this morning a number of bills were reported from committees and placed on the calendar.

Among them one for the establishment and maintenance of Indian industrial schools in Michigan and South Dakota.

The bill appropriating $500,000 for a public building at Portland, Ore., was passed.

Consideration of the bill to provide a temporary government for Oklahoma was then resumed, the pending question being Mr. Plumb's amendment to include. "No Man's Land" within the territory. The bill was passed.

HOUSE.

The Senate joint resolution congratulating the people of the United States of Brazil on the adoption of a Republican form of government was passed unanimously.

Consideration of the code of rules was then proceeded with. An amendment was adopted requiring the titles of committee reports to be entered on the journal.

Mr. Crisp offered an amendmet providing that the speaker shall not in any case refuse to entertain an appeal from his decision, which, after some discussion, was lost—yeas 114, nays 140. Pending further action the House took a recess.

SENATE.

Senate bill appropriating $25,000 for the relief of Indians at Devils Lake agency was reported and passed.

The bill to increase the endowment of the the Louisiana State University and Agricultural college led to considerable debate, participated in by Senators Gibson, Ingalls, Morrill, Plumb and Hoar, the objection being on the ground that colored pupils were excluded from attendance. The bill went over.

Senate bills were then passed for the relief of soldiers and sailors who enlisted or served under assumed names while minors or otherwise in the army and navy during the war of the Rebellion.

HOUSE.

The new rules were then adopted by a strict vote of yeas 161, nays 145.

Mr. Chandler, of Massachusetts, from the world's fair committee, submitted a report, which was ordered printed and re-committed.

SENATE.

The senate committee on privileges and elections began the hearing of the contested election cases in Montana. Mr. Payne, counsel for Messrs. Sanders and Powers, opened the hearing with an argument claiming that the legislature in joint assembly voted for Sanders and Powers and claimed that they were duly elected and entitled to seats in the senate, unless that body could go behind the legislature and prove that they were unqualified for the position or had obtained their seats by bribery and fraud.

HOUSE.

Mr. Baker, from the committee on territories, reported to the House the Carey bill to provide for the admission of Wyoming as a state.

Mr. Anderson, of Kansas, introduced a bill appropriating $250,000 for the purchase of a residence in or near Washington for the President of the United States.

Mr. Allen, of Michigan, presented in the House a resolution instructing the secretary of war to cause an examination to be made of the necessity, practicability and expense of tunnelling the Detroit river at or near the city of Detroit, with a view to the use of the tunnel for the passage of railway trains from the United States to Canada.

Consulting the Stars.

It is strange that many persons yet confound astronomy with astrology, a result of the undue importance which personal and private interests have over scientific principals in the thoughts of many persons. Not many weeks ago we received a letter from a subscriber who wished to be informed where he could find a text book of astrology.

It is said that the astronomer royal, who has charge of Greenwich observatory, frequently receives letters asking what his terms are for drawing a horoscope! The writers of these letters often promise to make known, if necessary, the true day and hour of their birth. Such incidents to call to mind a story told of Herschel, the astronomer.

During a very rainy season a farmer in his neighborhood came to ask his opinion, or rather the opinion of the stars, as to the day that would best suit for making his hay without any fear of losing it by showers.

The great astronomer led the man to a window and pointed with his finger to a meadow where the grass had been mown and was rotting in the wet.

"You see that field," said he. "Well, it is mine. Isn't that enough to show you that as regarding rain and fine weather I am not a bit more of a conjurer than any of my neighbors?"—Youth's Companion."

Our City Governors.

What would John Ruskin have said if, wanting pictures, we should have induced an untaught negro to take a broad, flat brush and with his coarse dyes pass rapidly over a series of canvases? Could art ever come from such savage manipulations of pencil and color? Yet when we wish a city governed and made beautiful and great we often hand it over to men who are standing with their feet in the lower world of both ignorance and dishonor; we had many of our benevolent institutions, with their sad inmates—the sick, the insane, the blind—to the care of men who would be arrested by the humane society were they plying their business not in an asylum but in the stock-yards.—Prof. David Swing.

JIM.

BY LAURENS BAYARD FREEMAN.

So Jim is dead. I don't know why
It should be so, but do you know,
It seems a most unnatural thing
That Jim should die?

He seemed to sure to win; in all he tried
He came out best; he beat the rest,
As sportsmen say, "Hands down,"
And yet he died.

When we were chums—I don't suppose
There ever were a warmer pair—
We used to speculate on death,
And now he knows.

He used to say: "You never can
Convince my mind that we shall find
A better world beyond than this."
How now, old man?

It seems so weak of Jim. But stop.
I comprehend—my dear old friend,
In this, as oft before, you have
Come out on top.

HOW SHE HELPED HIM.

New York Observer.

"WELL, tell me, about Henry Woodford. How did that match turn out?"

"Bad enough, thus far. He is the same delightful, good-hearted fellow as of old; always ready to do a kind or courteous act, but this woman will be the ruin of him."

"How? What is the trouble?"

"The trouble is, she fancies herself an invalid, lies around, does nothing but read Charlotte Braeme and Bertha M. Clay—has every foolish whim gratified, and, in fact, I don't see how he stands it."

"Did she have any property?"

"Not a cent. It was an out-and-out love match, She has expensive tastes, is indolent and extravagant. Why, his carriage hire is a big item of itself. She couldn't possibly walk a block, you know."

"Perhaps she is really a sufferer."

"Nonsense; she had that fall, you remember, at the skating rink. At first her spine was thought to be seriously injured. Woodford paid several hundred dollars to have her cured, and the doctors discharged her well, they said. But it has pleased her to drag around a load on his hand ever since. It is thought that he is much crippled financially. I know positively that he has lately mortgaged his interest in the firm. If he can't manage to make or save $5,000 by the end of this year, it is all up with him; and he will never do it at his present rate of living."

"Why doesn't he tell her? Has she no sense or feeling at all?"

"None, except for herself; and he is so fond of her that he will indulge her to his very last cent."

"I thought he looked a little down as he passed us this morning."

"Yes, he is beginning to realize that he has gone too far, and, poor fellow, it is tugging at him hard."

Did she hear aright? Was it of her, Eleanor Woodford, they were talking? Swiftly she sped out of the dark, heavily curtained back parlor of the stylish boarding house and into her room, a gorgeous alcove apartment on the first floor. She could not mount the steps on account of a weak spine. Weak spine? She forgot all about it as she paced the floor, angry tears gushing from her large, brown eyes. It was shameful—it was wicked—to be so abused. She had never in her whole petted life been found fault with. As to money, what did she know about it? Her father, before his failure and death, had always gratified her. Her husband had never made any difference. These were friends of his. Her bitter sobs ceased, and her wounded vanity gradually lost itself in better thoughts. Did all the world think of her like the scathing criticisms of these chance callers, who thus killed the time of waiting for some one to come down to see them?

She began to feel glad that she had overheard it. The merest accident had sent her into the back parlor. Was it true? What could she do! Her dear, kind husband in trouble and she the cause. Oh, she must help him somehow. Long she sat buried in thought, and when the well known step sounded at the door her face was radiant with a new resolve.

He came to her large easy chair with a step somewhat weary, but his kiss was as usual. "All right, Nellie? Had a good day? Why you look—let me see—how do you look?" he said cheerily.

"I look as if I love my big boy very much, don't I?" she answered merrily.

His answer was another kiss, and as he turned toward his dressing closet her heart ached with unspoken tenderness. Her dinner was brought up. She was not considered strong enough to sit at the table. For this service an extra charge was made.

Later, when he opened the evening paper, she sat and watched him. Surely those little lines of care were new, now that he was not fondly smiling upon her. O, foolish, selfish wife! Rising gently, her long handsome tea gown trailing behind her, she stood behind him, one slender white hand upon his shoulder. Then playfully putting by the paper, she sat down upon his knee.

She pressed her lips in a slow reverential fashion upon the broad, white brow, another pang at her heart. Then she spoke:

"Not this time, Harry dear; let's go to Mrs. Wickham's to board."

"Mrs. Wickham's!" he echoed, "why, you wouldn't stay in her dull little place a week." But even as he spoke there flashed through his mind, in rapid calculation, "$20 a week there, $40 here; $80 a month saved; nearly $1,000 a year."

"Don't you like it here?" were his next words, as he glanced around the luxurious suite.

"Yes," she said, "except that there are too many people here. It is so noisy."

"Very well, then we will try it—anything to please my darling; and he wrapped his arms around her as he would lull a restless child.

The move was made, and Eleanor found that she was not so much fatigued as she had often felt after a day's lounging with a novel. Her husband thought it only a new whim, but as it was not an expensive one he could not complain. When he wanted to take her driving, she playfully told him she was learning to walk—horses were not safe.

The first step, she thought. Now for the next. It came to her almost by magic. In a little rear hall room sat Margaret Dewees, clicking away at her typewriter. A strong clear-headed girl, who had maintained her savings.

She was soon to be married to a stalwart young farmer, the lover of her youth. They had worked and waited. From the first she took an intrest in the young wife, and it was given to her energy and common sense to help a suffering sister. Together they plotted and planned. Eleanor's lassitude passed away under vigorous rubbings and brisk walks.

Margaret's trousseau was a thing to be considered. From Eleanor's surplus stock of stylish gowns and garments the country girl's outfit was deftly concocted. Eleanor could sew neatly and rapidly. When all was ready the snug sum of $200 lay in her writing-desk. Her grand piano, too large for the new quarters, was removed from the storage-room to the dealer's and was sold for $300 more. She wrote at once to an uncle in Kansas City, told him of her little efforts and asked what she should do with her mite. He was a estate man, and promptly invested it in a lot in the rising town of Duluth.

In exchange for her service as seamstress Margaret taught her the use of the typewriter. When she was married she left the instrument for the summer months, in Eleanor's care. A nominal rent was agreed upon, and this was easy to pay, as Margaret's engagements were transferred to the new operator, while she herself attended to her chickens and cows and her six feet of husband.

Eleanor's energy did not stop here, she obtained pupils on the type-writer at $5 each. She shipped a lot of old party dresses, crushed and out of style, to costumer's on——street, and saved the proceeds. Every time her husband handed over her allowance of pin money she put at least half of it in her "strong box."

It was hard to hide this activity and cheerfulness from him, but she did. With her woman's enjoyment of a little mystery, and her high resolve to show herself worthy of him, she kept in the old rut as nearly as possible when he was at home. He saw that she was stronger and it lightened his labors. "My little woman does not ride or read any more," he said one evening in the indulgent tone he used toward her.

"Why, yes, I do read. Don't you see my little library there?"

"Yes, but it seems to me that I miss something."

He missed the litter of trashy novels he had been wont to see.

"I told you I was learning to walk," she added with a smile. "I really do walk somewhere every day."

"That pleases me most of all," he said in his cheery way; "but what will Dr. Buell think?"

"I don't care a bit; I have long since cut his acquaintance."

The end of the year rolled around. Eleanor watched her husband's face with increasing anxiety. One evening he sat buried in thought, from which all her endeavors could not rouse him. He did not feel well he said. All night he tossed and muttered. Calculations and figures were uppermost.

He was up early and away. Eleanor hastened her preparations and carefully counted her little hoard, the earnings of months. Late in the afternoon she came home with the proceeds of her last batch of typewriting, glowing with exercise and the happiness of contibuting at least several hundred dollars to meet her husband's creditors. He was there, lying on the sofa pale and hopeless. Forgetting all else, she flung herself beside him with a sob.

"Oh, Harry, my dearest, what is it? Tell me what it is that is killing you? I have a right to know."

"It is ruin, Eleanor. I have brought you to poverty—you whom I would have die to make happy."

"You are talking in riddles, Harry," she exclaimed rallying from her alarm.

"Am I not the happiest woman in the world? And don't you see how well and strong I am?"

She coaxed the whole story from his lips. Then with affected lightness she said: "Is that all! Why you frightened me terribly; I thought you were ill—had caught some terrible disease or other. See here." As she spoke she ran to her desk, took out her treasure and poured it into his hands in her impulsive fashion.

"Eleanor! What is this?"

Then her story had to be told. Their combined efforts still fell short of the required sum, but she triumphantly produced the deed to the western land. For a season there were caresses and even tears of mutual love and thankfulness.

"My precious wife!" he fervently exclaimed, as she clasped her close.

"What a treasure in you, if all the money in the world should fail!"

"But your piano?" he said with regret, overreaching his appreciation of her sacrifice.

"Let it go," she said, merrily. "I could not play worth listening to—this you must acknowledge. It was just an expensive toy—that's all."

Next day the balance of the debt was borrowed upon the security of the Western deed, and Horace Woodford was a free man once more. When the $500 jumped to thousands in a sudden boom he bought a neat home. Margaret, the valued friend, supplied their table with products from the farm. Eleanor was never quite content till Harry had looked up her two maligners and brought them to the home where she presided, and which her painfully awakened energy had helped to buy. In time she told her secret, and thanked them for that ten minutes' gossip. In time, too, sons and daughters came and found a mother prepared by self denial for the exigencies of life.

The Star of Bethlehem.

Prof. Pickering, of Harvard university, discredits the report from Vienna that "The star of Bethlehem" is again to be visible this year, being its seventh appearance since the birth of Christ. He says: "The report is probably the unauthorized revival of an old rumor that this star, erroneously called the 'star of Bethlehem,' was to make its appearance, but as this statement has been several times since 1884, when the star was looked for by some astronomers, there is doubtless nothing in it. The star was the one discovered by Tycho Brahe in 1572, and was named for him. It appeared quite suddenly in the constellation of Casseopela, and had brilliancy greater than that of any of the planets, so much so that it was visible in the day time. It was believed by some that this star had appeared in the same position 312 years before, or in 1260, and, assuming this interval of appearance to be correct, it would have been visible about the time of the christian era, and it was thus termed the star of Bethlehem. If its return was after 312 years, the time of its reappearance would have been in 1884, but nothing has yet been seen of it. Such a phenomenon at the present day would have the highest value to astronomical science for by the use of modern instruments observations could be taken and information be gathered that would be of the greatest assistance in a series of experiments now in progress. There is, however, so much doubt in the matter that it is of little use to surmise as the star's reappearance."

A Valuable Bit of Land.

From the Washington Post.

While passing a farm in Virginia the figure of an elderly man, whose attire was noticeable for the utter absence of any decorative efforts was to be seen leaning against the fence.

"How are you getting along dowr here?"

"Jes gettin' 'long; no mo'h."

"Good farm?"

"Fa'h."

"Can you raise anything on it?"

Jake Kilrain and his sparring troup exhibited at the opera house at Dallas, Texas. It was announced to be only a sparring and wrestling match. After some uneventful sparring by others, Tom James of Dallas encountered Bezenah, the combination champion light-weight, for $25, conditioned that James should stay four rounds. Bezenah had it his way from the first. In the fourth round Bezenah struck James in the neck, knocking him limp on the stage. James was unable to rise. He was sponged and restoratives applied. The show continued, no one supposing that James was hurt seriously. When the entertainment had about concluded Muldoon announced that James was unconscious, and called for a physician. James died the same night.

"I have thee on the hip," cried rheumatism, seizing his victim and tossing him on a suffering bed. "Not so," he cried, "not so! Wait my ancient foe, just five minutes, until the boy brings a bottle of Salvation Oil, then we'll see who wins the day."

THE GERMAN AND HIS CLOCK.

The story is told of a German who took the hands of his clock to the maker to have them fixed, because they did not keep proper time. Of course, the clock maker demanded the works, as in them lay the trouble. Boils and blotches, pimples and other eruptions on the exterior tell of a disordered condition of the blood within. Be you man or woman, or aught else human, if you have these indications, be wise in time and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the liver and kidneys in good working order, purifies the blood, cleanses the system from all impurities from whatever cause arising, and tones up the functions generally.

"Golden Medical Discovery" checks the frightful inroads of Scrofula, and, if taken in time, arrests the march of Consumption of the Lungs, which is Lung-scrofula, purifies and enriches the blood, thereby curing all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ulcers, Sores, Swellings, and kindred ailments. It is powerfully tonic as well as alterative, or blood-cleansing, in its effects, hence it strengthens the system and restores vitality, thereby dispelling all those languid, "tired feelings" experienced by the debilitated. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and lung remedy, sold by druggists, and guaranteed by its manufacturers, to do all that it is claimed to accomplish, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

$500 OFFERED for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head by the proprietors of DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness, difficulty of clearing throat, expectoration of offensive matter; breath offensive; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once. Thousands of cases result in consumption, and end in the grave.

By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Remedy cures the worst cases. This infallible remedy does not, like the poisonous irritating snuffs, "creams" and strong caustic solutions with which the public have long been humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the lungs, as there is danger of doing in the use of such nostrums, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, loss or impairment of the sense of taste, smell or hearing, watering or weak eyes, and impaired memory, when caused by the violence of Catarrh, as they all frequently are. By druggists, 50 cents.

Not Wholly Ornamental.

Every seat in the North State Street car was taken, and four or five persons were standing. One of the latter was a young woman, who stood near the middle of the car. A tall young man, rather too slim for his height from an athletic point of view, rose from his seat near the rear door and stepped forward to inform the young woman, who was looking the other way, that there was a seat for her. As he did so a man dropped into it.

"I beg your pardon," said the young man. I didn't get up to give you a seat."

"But I got it," said the man.

"I entended it for the lady," said the young fellow.

"But I got it," retorted the other with a sneer.

He was the bigger man, but the young fellow's hand descended on his shoulders and he was on his feet and on the platform before he knew it.

"Conductor! conductor!" he cried, but the conductor had a far-away look in his eyes, and was interested in something going on down the street. The man was in the street before he had time to call out again.

The hero—for he was a hero in the eyes of all the passangers by this time—reentered the car, and, lifting his hat, politely said:

"Madame, there's a seat for you."

And the passengers were so tickled that they actully began to clap their hands. The young man simply smiled, and said:

"College athletics are of some value now and then."

Then he leaned up against the front door and became absorbed in a paper, while the young woman watched him admiringly.

The Lady and the Cigar.

The train from Paris to Versailles was to leave there in five minutes, says the Texas Siftings. An elegantly dressed gentleman enters a first-class carriage. He has a burning cigar in his mouth. He is about to take his seat when he perceives an elderly lady is in the carriage. Being a gentleman he raises the window and is about to throw out the cigar, when the old lady says:

"Don't you know that yon are forbidden to smoke in a first-class carriage when there are ladies in it?"

"My dear madame, you see I was just about to anticipate your wish by throwing away my cigar. However, I will not disturbe you further," and bowing very stiffly he left the car, and, purchasing a third-class ticket, he took his seat among some peasants where he could smoke undisturbed.

There was sitting near the gentleman a wretched-looking tramp, who smelt horribly of garlic and who was about as disagreeable a neighbor as can well be imagined.

"My good fellow," said the gentleman, "did you ever ride in a first-class carriage?"

"Never."

"Well, here's a ticket that I can't use. Just you go into that first-class carriage. There is a vacant seat next to an old lady; just take it."

The man, who was sadly in need of disinfectants, did as he was told. A few minutes after he entered the door of the first-class carriage was closed, and off went the train, which does not stop at any stations between Paris and Versailles. You can imagine whether or not the gentleman got even.

It Killed the Show.

From the New York Mail and Express.

Tom Jackson, the author of those funny stories of "Squatter Sovereignty" and the "Harlam Goat," was down in luck at one time and at a last resort took to the ministrel business. He and a brother of Judge Welde organized a company. The company turned out to be a funny one. Jackson and his partner, Welde, were the end men, and while showing at a little Maine town the former hit upon the idea of putting "poetry," as he called it, into the performance.

He circulated a number of blank cards, of the playing card style, among the audience, and requested the holders to write some subject on the pasteboard, and he proposed to compose a rhyme for any one of their selection. The business was old to the minstrel stage, but new to the audience, so all were a bit timid about sending up subjects. After a great deal of persuasion Jackson succeeded in convincing two of the auditors that they would not be fleeced alive if they followed his request, and these two returned their cards. On one was written the single word "Dog." The other bore this hint, "Pay for your washing."

Jackson glanced at the cards for a second and coming down to the footlights said:

Pay for your washing.
That's funny.
I didn't think I owed your mother money.

Then he came to the other card, and this is what he said:

Dog. That's hard.
I'm much obliged to the dog
For sending up his card.

Two-thirds of the audience insisted that Jackson had insulted them and they arose in a body and left the show. The news spread around that little Maine town, and the next night the minstrel show had empty benches to play to. That settled the card-rhyming business, and since that eventful night witty Tom Jackson has never aspired to the combined position of poet and end man.

The Sewing Machine Man's Say.

"Gentlemen," said the sewing machine man, "one spring father and I had a sugar camp down in the edge of the grove. About half a mile from us was a corn field owned by a widow, and this widow never picked her corn clean. On the other side was a man who owned a blind sow. She had one pig, and they used to go over into that corn field every day to eat the corn. Right in front of our camp was a creek. At one place about 40 rods from our camp there was a felled tree across the creek. This was the only place that the sow and pig could cross. Of course the sow could not see to cross on the log, so the way they used to do was for the old sow to take hold of the pig's tail, and the pig would lead her across. Well, one day we were sitting in front of our camp when the old sow and pig were crossing that log. I said to father, 'Hand me the rifle and see me cut that pig's tail off.' I took aim and fired, cutting the little pig's tail off smack smooth. The pig ran for the corn field, but the old sow didn't know which way to go. So father went over and took hold of the pig's tail and led the old sow clear into camp."—Lewiston Journal.

The Awful Alternative.

Little Marshall P. Wilder told a Washington Post reporter the following gem: Finucane called in on Mike Leary's oldest boy, Tim, one day and found that fine broth of a boy pale about the gills, losing flesh and the picture of dispair. "Howly Moses, Tim, it's murtherin' ill ye'er lukin! Fwat in the name av th' kraken's the mather?" "Finucane!" "Yis." "Ye know that blatherin' spalpeen av a Widdy Costigan's second husband's stepson, Jamie?" "That I do." "He bet me a dollar to a pint I couldn't schwally an igg widout br'akin' th' shell av it." "Naw!"!" "Yis." "Did ye do ut?" "I did." "Then fwhat's ailin' ye?" "Is's doon there. If I joomp about I'll br'ak it an' cut me stummic wid th' shell. If I kape quite the dom thing'll hatch oot an' I'll have a Shanghai roosther a-clawin' me insides."

Fighting Parson.

During the Eighteenth century Presbyterian ministers settled among the people of northern Scotland needed to be men of great strength, piety and zeal. The Rev. Eneas Sage, whose story is told in "Parish Life in the North of Scotland," belonged to the order of muscular Christians, being more than six feet in height and stout in proportion.

A year or two after he had become minister of Lochearean, he announced one Sunday his intention of holding "a diet catechising" at the house of a dissolute man, a desperate character of great physical strength.

The minister's friends remonstrated with him, but he went to the man's house, and was ordered to go away.

"Easier said than done," answered the minister; "but you may turn me out if you can."

They were both powerful men, and neither of them hesitated to put upon the other his ponderous strength. After a short but fierce struggle, the minister became the victor, and the landlord, prostrated upon his own floor, was with a rope coiled round his arms and feet bound over to keep the peace.

The people of the district were then called in, and the minister proceeded seriously to discharge the duty of catechising them. When that was finished, he set himself to deal with the delinquent present. The man was solemnly rebuked, and the minister so moved his conscience that he afterwards became a decided Christian.—Youth's Companion.

A Steer in the House.

A drove of Texas cattle were being driven across the railroad tracks near the Martell house. One of the drove, a large steer, became separated from the others and ran down the tracks into the Vandalia yards. Being close pressed by William Little, the driver, the steer mounted the outside stairs of a two story tenement house situated close to the round house, and entered the kitchen and took possession. Mrs. A. O. Hennesy, with her baby in her arms, had just time to escape by a back stairway and save the life of herself and child. The infuriated steer upset the kitchen table, smashed the dishes, broke the chairs and other furniture, and overturned the stove. The driver mounted the stairs and, after some difficulty, managed to get a ring in the animal's nose, but it broke and was useless. The animal, after having completely wrecked the room, leisurely descended the stairs and was captured.

Disagreeable Agreement.

It is dangerous to make a confession unless one really means it, and we may add that it is sometimes dangerous to take a confession as honestly meant.

A husband and wife between whom a little unpleasant passage had occurred, had made the matter up, and the wife said, as if to clear her conscience:

"Oh, well, I suppose I have my faults."

"Yes, my dear," said the husband.

"What?"

"I simply said yes."

"That I have my faults!" exclaimed the wife, indignantly. "What are they, I should like to know?"

"Well, to begin with"——

"No. I don't want to hear."—Youth's Companion.

THE age of kingly chivalry has not entirely passed away. The king of Greece, walking in the street a few days ago saw a man thrashing a little boy. Indignant at the outrage, his Majesty insisted that the man should release the lad. The man shook his fist at the unknown person and raised his stick to strike him. The King knocked him down on the spot, called the police, and revealing his identity, ordered the man to be taken to the police station, and there beaten with the same stick and released.

Prepare for Spring

Now is the time to attend to your personal condition in preparation for the change to spring season. If you have not "wintered well," if you are tired out from overwork, if your blood has become impure from close confinement in badly ventilated offices or shops, you should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It will purify and vitalize your blood, create a good appetite, and give your whole system tone and strength.

"For a first-class spring medicine my wife and I think very highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla. We both took it last spring. It did us a great deal of good and we felt better through the hot weather than ever before. It cured my wife of sick headache, from which she has suffered a great deal, and relieved me of a dizzy, tired feeling. I think every one ought to take something to purify the blood before the hot weather comes on, and we shall certainly take Hood's Sarsaparilla this spring." J. H. PEARCE, Supt. Mr. Hamingway, a patient in the hospital at Rochester from Dodge county, had his leg amputated above the knee. Three or four weeks ago he accidentally pricked his knee with the tine of a pitchfork, producing a slight wound. It became sore and finally blood poisoning set in, with the result as stated.

The little village of Maple Lake Minn., was nearly swept away by the fire fiend. The blaze originated in George Desmond's smoke house, and, owing to the high wind, spread very rapidly. The buildings burned are Rohrenbach's store, building and contents, Welton Bros.' dry goods store, Kohler & Taylor's drug store, George Desmond's butcher shop and the Mansor house.

Charles Larson, Ole Olson and Magness Falk, section men, were run over and killed by a Northern Pacific passenger train two miles from Clear Lake. The Manitoba and Northern Pacific tracks run side by side at the point where the accident occurred and the men stepped off the Manitoba track to let a freight go by just in time to be caught by the Northern Pacific train.

Letters from London state that Dr. C. N. Hewitt, secretary of the Minnesota board of health, who is at present in that country studying and inspecting sanitary methods there employed, is being recieved with the highest respect everywhere and accorded every aid in his work. The doctor will soon go to Paris to spend some time with Pasteur, and thence to Berlin to visit Dr. Koch.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The citizens of Bismarck and Mandan will tender Bishop Shanley a reception and banquet on his arrival in the former city.

Ex-King Milan would probably be willing to confess, for the edification of the North Dakota statesmen, that he considers gambling worse than drinking.

It is said that for years North Dakota people have been singularly lucky in getting prizes in the Louisiana lottery. A good many persons there have captured big prizes. The indications are that the Louisiana swindle has been carefully paving its way for the coup which it has just attempted to make.

The city of Fargo owes a $148.25 board bill and won't pay it. Two years ago the legislature was invited to visit the city by the city council, and while on the visit put up at a hostelry and got away with hash to the value of that amount. The council votes to pay the bill at every meeting and the mayor promptly bobs up with a veto.

The contracts have been let for the survey of thirty-four townships in North Dakota, and work will be commenced early in the spring. There are five townships in Ramsey county, ten or twelve in Cavalier, eight or ten in Benson, six in Towner and six in Rolette. Dakota has $15,000 in the surveying fund, and this was divided between the two sections.

Secretary Noble denied a motion for review of the case of P. McWeeney vs. Charles W. Greene, involving title to land in section 35, township 154, range 64, of the Devils Lake, N. D., district. This case was decided last summer, when a review was asked by Mary McWeeney, the wife of P. McWeeney. The land is almost in the city of Devils Lake. McWeeney held another tract when the Ward boys of Chicago were killed. He was one of the twelve who killed the Wards, and while his trial was pending was in jail at Devils Lake, Mary Mc Gillecudy became attached to him there and married him. When McWeeney was released they went to Devils Lake. He was appointed a special officer, and was killed by Billy Oswald. The latter was sentenced to twelve years, but was pardoned by Gov. Mellette a short time before he ceased to be governor of Dakota Territory. Greene, who was in this suit, was opposed to the Creel gang, and the land in question was claimed as part of the Creel heritage on Devils Lake. After McWeeney's death his widow carried on the suit, but the last hope of securing the property vanished with the decision announced.

At Waterbury the other day Squire Atkins had a miraculous escape from serious injury. He was being lowered into a well fifty feet deep by aid of a bucket and windlass. When about twenty feet down the crank slipped from the hand of the man above and Atkins tumbled clear to the bottom. When taken out he was found to have escaped with a few bruises.

The Oneida Watchman has received information that the Chicago and Northwestern company has concluded to continue its line from Gettysburg to Pierre, and that the line when constructed will cross the Okobojo near Clifton. It is thought the survey will be made and grading commenced early in the spring. The reason for building this short line is to connect the north country with the Black Hills extension at Pierre and to prevent the Manitoba from building its surveyed line from Aberdeen to Pierre.

While oiling the shaft of an ore crusher in the Old Abe mine at Lead City, the clothing of William Fullerton became entangled in the machinery, and he was whirled around the rapidly revolving shaft for some time before he was discovered and the belt thrown off. When taken out it was found that his lower limbs were terribly mangled, the flesh torn from one hand and one rib broken. He was removed to the Homestake hospital, were both both legs were amputated and his sufferings eased as much as possible, but there is small hopes of his recovery.

Mrs. LaFountain and John Beattie eloped from Kansas City the other day without the consent of the woman's husband. They were captured in Davenport and held to await the arrival of Mr. LaFountain. A few hours in jail had the effect of changing the woman's mind and after a dramatic meeting with her better half she decided to make back tracks for Kansas City, leaving Beattie to finish the elopement all by himself.

J. H. Wenger, of South Englieh, Keokuk county, has a clock with a history. It was brought to this country by Mr. Wenger's great-grandfather, in 1729, and has been in the family many years in the old country and is supposed to have been made sometime between 1690 and 1700. The clock is made of brass and has a solid silver face. It is artistically constructed and must have cost several hundred dollars when new.

CONGRESSIONAL.

A Resume of the Proceedings of Congress During the Past Week.

SENATE.

The Senate committee on territories ordered a favorable report on the bill for admission of Idaho into the union. The bill is reported substantially as introduced. A favorable report was ordered also on the bill approving, with amendments, the funding act of Arizona.

Among the bills introduced were these. By Mr. Platt—To prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor in the District of Columbia. By Mr. Wilson, of Iowa—Providing that in cases before the court of claims, involving a sum less than $3,000, where the decision will affect a class of cases or serve as a precedent, an appeal may be allowed to the supreme court without regard to the amount involved: also a bill appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Muscatine, Iowa.

HOUSE.

The House committee on Indian affairs heard arguments on the Senate resolution providing for the removal of the Apache Indian prisoners of war from Mt. Vernon Barracks to Fort Sill reservation in the Indian territory.

SENATE.

Senator Allen reported favorably his bills for two additional land districts in Washington from the committtee on public lands.

Senator Squire introduced a bill providing for a federal survey of the proposed Lake Washington and the Puget Sound ship canal.

HOUSE.

Mr. Wickham of Ohio introduced in the house for reference a bill providing that the representatives elected to the fifty-second congress shall be returned from the same districts as similar representatives elected to the fifty-first congress.

The senate committee on territories has directed Chairman Platt to favorably report the bill for the admission of Idaho as a state, and it will be reported to the senate on Wednesday.

SENATE.

When the senate committee went into executive session immediately after the routine business the nomination of Indian Commissioner Morgan was again taken up for consideration. Senator Spooner made a long and strong argument in favor of confirmation. He answered seriatim the charges reflecting upon Gen. Morgan's military record and respecting his discrimination against Catholics in the management of Indian schools and the letting of contracts. He refuted all these charges in detail, and extolled the public and private character of the nominee. Senator Spooner was followed by Mr. Dawes, chairman of the committee on Indian affairs. His argument was in much the same direction and was strong in favor of confirmation. Gen. Morgan's nomination was confirmed by a vote of 28 ayes to 16 noes.

HOUSE.

In the house the debate on the code of rules was continued. Messrs. Dockery of of Missouri, Morse of Massachusetts, Allen of Michigan, Chipman of Michigan and Henderson of Iowa defended the proposed rules, while Messrs. McCreary of Kentucky, Cummings of New York and Buckalew of Pennsylvania spoke against them. Referring to the election cases Mr. Henderson said that if there was a member on the floor entitled to his seat, the Republicans would stand up and defend his rights, but if there was on the floor one who held his seat by black-hearted fraud or red-handed murder, they would unseat him if they had the power.

SENATE.

In the Senate this morning a number of bills were reported from committees and placed on the calendar.

Among them one for the establishment and maintenance of Indian industrial schools in Michigan and South Dakota.

The bill appropriating $500,000 for a public building at Portland, Ore., was passed.

Consideration of the bill to provide a temporary government for Oklahoma was then resumed, the pending question being Mr. Plumb's amendment to include. "No Man's Land" within the territory. The bill was passed.

HOUSE.

The Senate joint resolution congratulating the people of the United States of Brazil on the adoption of a Republican form of government was passed unanimously.

Consideration of the code of rules was then proceeded with. An amendment was adopted requiring the titles of committee reports to be entered on the journal.

Mr. Crisp offered an amendmet providing that the speaker shall not in any case refuse to entertain an appeal from his decision, which, after some discussion, was lost—yeas 114, nays 140. Pending further action the House took a recess.

SENATE.

Senate bill appropriating $25,000 for the relief of Indians at Devils Lake agency was reported and passed.

The bill to increase the endowment of the the Louisiana State University and Agricultural college led to considerable debate, participated in by Senators Gibson, Ingalls, Morrill, Plumb and Hoar, the objection being on the ground that colored pupils were excluded from attendance. The bill went over.

Senate bills were then passed for the relief of soldiers and sailors who enlisted or served under assumed names while minors or otherwise in the army and navy during the war of the Rebellion.

HOUSE.

The new rules were then adopted by a strict vote of yeas 161, nays 145.

Mr. Chandler, of Massachusetts, from the world's fair committee, submitted a report, which was ordered printed and re-committed.

SENATE.

The senate committee on privileges and elections began the hearing of the contested election cases in Montana. Mr. Payne, counsel for Messrs. Sanders and Powers, opened the hearing with an argument claiming that the legislature in joint assembly voted for Sanders and Powers and claimed that they were duly elected and entitled to seats in the senate, unless that body could go behind the legislature and prove that they were unqualified for the position or had obtained their seats by bribery and fraud.

HOUSE.

Mr. Baker, from the committee on territories, reported to the House the Carey bill to provide for the admission of Wyoming as a state.

Mr. Anderson, of Kansas, introduced a bill appropriating $250,000 for the purchase of a residence in or near Washington for the President of the United States.

Mr. Allen, of Michigan, presented in the House a resolution instructing the secretary of war to cause an examination to be made of the necessity, practicability and expense of tunnelling the Detroit river at or near the city of Detroit, with a view to the use of the tunnel for the passage of railway trains from the United States to Canada.

Consulting the Stars.

It is strange that many persons yet confound astronomy with astrology, a result of the undue importance which personal and private interests have over scientific principals in the thoughts of many persons. Not many weeks ago we received a letter from a subscriber who wished to be informed where he could find a text book of astrology.

It is said that the astronomer royal, who has charge of Greenwich observatory, frequently receives letters asking what his terms are for drawing a horoscope! The writers of these letters often promise to make known, if necessary, the true day and hour of their birth. Such incidents to call to mind a story told of Herschel, the astronomer.

During a very rainy season a farmer in his neighborhood came to ask his opinion, or rather the opinion of the stars, as to the day that would best suit for making his hay without any fear of losing it by showers.

The great astronomer led the man to a window and pointed with his finger to a meadow where the grass had been mown and was rotting in the wet.

"You see that field," said he. "Well, it is mine. Isn't that enough to show you that as regarding rain and fine weather I am not a bit more of a conjurer than any of my neighbors?"—Youth's Companion."

Our City Governors.

What would John Ruskin have said if, wanting pictures, we should have induced an untaught negro to take a broad, flat brush and with his coarse dyes pass rapidly over a series of canvases? Could art ever come from such savage manipulations of pencil and color? Yet when we wish a city governed and made beautiful and great we often hand it over to men who are standing with their feet in the lower world of both ignorance and dishonor; we had many of our benevolent institutions, with their sad inmates—the sick, the insane, the blind—to the care of men who would be arrested by the humane society were they plying their business not in an asylum but in the stock-yards.—Prof. David Swing.

JIM.

BY LAURENS BAYARD FREEMAN.

So Jim is dead. I don't know why
It should be so, but do you know,
It seems a most unnatural thing
That Jim should die?

He seemed to sure to win; in all he tried
He came out best; he beat the rest,
As sportsmen say, "Hands down,"
And yet he died.

When we were chums—I don't suppose
There ever were a warmer pair—
We used to speculate on death,
And now he knows.

He used to say: "You never can
Convince my mind that we shall find
A better world beyond than this."
How now, old man?

It seems so weak of Jim. But stop.
I comprehend—my dear old friend,
In this, as o.t before, you have
Come out on top.

HOW SHE HELPED HIM.

New York Observer.

"WELL, tell me, about Henry Woodford. How did that match turn out?"

"Bad enough, thus far. He is the same delightful, good-hearted fellow as of old; always ready to do a kind or courteous act, but this woman will be the ruin of him."

"How? What is the trouble?"

"The trouble is, she fancies herself an invalid, lies around, does nothing but read Charlotte Braeme and Bertha M. Clay—has every foolish whim gratified, and, in fact, I don't see how he stands it."

"Did she have any property?"

"Not a cent. It was an out-and-out love match, She has expensive tastes, is indolent and extravagant. Why, his carriage hire is a big item of itself. She couldn't possibly walk a block, you know."

"Perhaps she is really a sufferer."

"Nonsense; she had that fall, you remember, at the skating rink. At first her spine was thought to be seriously injured. Woodford paid several hundred dollars to have her cured, and the doctors discharged her well, they said. But it has pleased her to drag around a load on his hand ever since. It is thought that he is much crippled financially. I know positively that he has lately mortgaged his interest in the firm. If he can't manage to make or save $5,000 by the end of this year, it is all up with him; and he will never do it at his present rate of living."

"Why doesn't he tell her? Has she no sense or feeling at all?"

"None, except for herself; and he is so fond of her that he will indulge her to his very last cent."

"I thought he looked a little down as he passed us this morning."

"Yes, he is beginning to realize that he has gone too far, and, poor fellow, it is tugging at him hard."

Did she hear aright? Was it of her, Eleanor Woodford, they were talking? Swiftly she sped out of the dark, heavily curtained back parlor of the stylish boarding house and into her room, a gorgeous alcove apartment on the first floor. She could not mount the steps on account of a weak spine. Weak spine? She forgot all about it as she paced the floor, angry tears gushing from her large, brown eyes. It was shameful—it was wicked—to be so abused. She had never in her whole petted life been found fault with. As to money, what did she know about it? Her father, before his failure and death, had always gratified her. Her husband had never made any difference. These were friends of his. Her bitter sobs ceased, and her wounded vanity gradually lost itself in better thoughts. Did all the world think of her like the scathing criticisms of these chance callers, who thus killed the time of waiting for some one to come down to see them?

She began to feel glad that she had overheard it. The merest accident had sent her into the back parlor. Was it true? What could she do! Her dear, kind husband in trouble and she the cause. Oh, she must help him somehow. Long she sat buried in thought, and when the well known step sounded at the door her face was radiant with a new resolve.

He came to her large easy chair with a step somewhat weary, but his kiss was as usual. "All right, Nellie? Had a good day? Why you look—let me see—how do you look?" he said cheerily.

"I look as if I love my big boy very much, don't I?" she answered merrily.

His answer was another kiss, and as he turned toward his dressing closet her heart ached with unspoken tenderness. Her dinner was brought up. She was not considered strong enough to sit at the table. For this service an extra charge was made.

Later, when he opened the evening paper, she sat and watched him. Surely those little lines of care were new, now that he was not fondly smiling upon her. O, foolish, selfish wife! Rising gently, her long handsome tea gown trailing behind her, she stood behind him, one slender white hand upon his shoulder. Then playfully putting by the paper, she sat down upon his knee.

She pressed her lips in a slow reverential fashion upon the broad, white brow, another pang at her heart. Then she spoke:

"Not this time, Harry dear; let's go to Mrs. Wickham's to board."

"Mrs. Wickham's!" he echoed, "why, you wouldn't stay in her dull little place a week." But even as he spoke there flashed through his mind, in rapid calculation, "$20 a week there, $40 here; $80 a month saved; nearly $1,000 a year."

"Don't you like it here?" were his next words, as he glanced around the luxurious suite.

"Yes," she said, "except that there are too many people here. It is so noisy."

"Very well, then we will try it—anything to please my darling; and he wrapped his arms around her as he would lull a restless child.

The move was made, and Eleanor found that she was not so much fatigued as she had often felt after a day's lounging with a novel. Her husband thought it only a new whim, but as it was not an expensive one he could not complain. When he wanted to take her driving, she playfully told him she was learning to walk—horses were not safe.

The first step, she thought. Now for the next. It came to her almost by magic. In a little rear hall room sat Margaret Dewees, clicking away at her typewriter. A strong clear-headed girl, who had maintained her savings.

She was soon to be married to a stalwart young farmer, the lover of her youth. They had worked and waited. From the first she took an intrest in the young wife, and it was given to her energy and common sense to help a suffering sister. Together they plotted and planned. Eleanor's lassitude passed away under vigorous rubbings and brisk walks.

Margaret's trousseau was a thing to be considered. From Eleanor's surplus stock of stylish gowns and garments the country girl's outfit was deftly concocted. Eleanor could sew neatly and rapidly. When all was ready the snug sum of $200 lay in her writing-desk. Her grand piano, too large for the new quarters, was removed from the storage-room to the dealer's and was sold for $300 more. She wrote at once to an uncle in Kansas City, told him of her little efforts and asked what she should do with her mite. He was a estate man, and promptly invested it in a lot in the rising town of Duluth.

In exchange for her service as seamstress Margaret taught her the use of the typewriter. When she was married she left the instrument for the summer months, in Eleanor's care. A nominal rent was agreed upon, and this was easy to pay, as Margaret's engagements were transferred to the new operator, while she herself attended to her chickens and cows and her six feet of husband.

Eleanor's energy did not stop here, she obtained pupils on the type-writer at $5 each. She shipped a lot of old party dresses, crushed and out of style, to costumer's on——street, and saved the proceeds. Every time her husband handed over her allowance of pin money she put at least half of it in her "strong box."

It was hard to hide this activity and cheerfulness from him, but she did. With her woman's enjoyment of a little mystery, and her high resolve to show herself worthy of him, she kept in the old rut as nearly as possible when he was at home. He saw that she was stronger and it lightened his labors. "My little woman does not ride or read any more," he said one evening in the indulgent tone he used toward her.

"Why, yes, I do read. Don't you see my little library there?"

"Yes, but it seems to me that I miss something."

He missed the litter of trashy novels he had been wont to see.

"I told you I was learning to walk," she added with a smile. "I really do walk somewhere every day."

"That pleases me most of all," he said in his cheery way; "but what will Dr. Buell think?"

"I don't care a bit; I have long since cut his acquaintance."

The end of the year rolled around. Eleanor watched her husband's face with increasing anxiety. One evening he sat buried in thought, from which all her endeavors could not rouse him. He did not feel well he said. All night he tossed and muttered. Calculations and figures were uppermost.

He was up early and away. Eleanor hastened her preparations and carefully counted her little hoard, the earnings of months. Late in the afternoon she came home with the proceeds of her last batch of typewriting, glowing with exercise and the happiness of contibuting at least several hundred dollars to meet her husband's creditors. He was there, lying on the sofa pale and hopeless. Forgetting all else, she flung herself beside him with a sob.

"Oh, Harry, my dearest, what is it? Tell me what it is that is killing you? I have a right to know."

"It is ruin, Eleanor. I have brought you to poverty—you whom I would have die to make happy."

"Am I not the happiest woman in the world? And don't you see how well and strong I am?"

She coaxed the whole story from his lips. Then with affected lightness she said: "Is that all! Why you frightened me terribly; I thought you were ill—had caught some terrible disease or other. See here." As she spoke she ran to her desk, took out her treasure and poured it into his hands in her impulsive fashion.

"Eleanor! What is this?"

Then her story had to be told. Their combined efforts still fell short of the required sum, but she triumphantly produced the deed to the western land. For a season there were caresses and even tears of mutual love and thankfulness.

"My precious wife!" he fervently exclaimed, as she clasped her close.

"What a treasure in you, if all the money in the world should fail!"

"But your piano?" he said with regret, overreaching his appreciation of her sacrifice.

"Let it go," she said, merrily. "I could not play worth listening to—this you must acknowledge. It was just an expensive toy—that's all."

Next day the balance of the debt was borrowed upon the security of the Western deed, and Horace Woodford was a free man once more. When the $500 jumped to thousands in a sudden boom he bought a neat home. Margaret, the valued friend, supplied their table with products from the farm. Eleanor was never quite content till Harry had looked up her two maligners and brought them to the home where she presided, and which her painfully awakened energy had helped to buy. In time she told her secret, and thanked them for that ten minutes' gossip. In time, too, sons and daughters came and found a mother prepared by self denial for the exigencies of life.

The Star of Bethlehem.

Prof. Pickering, of Harvard university, discredits the report from Vienna that "The star of Bethlehem" is again to be visible this year, being its seventh appearance since the birth of Christ. He says: "The report is probably the unauthorized revival of an old rumor that this star, erroneously called the 'star of Bethlehem,' was to make its appearance, but as this statement has been several times since 1884, when the star was looked for by some astronomers, there is doubtless nothing in it. The star was the one discovered by Tycho Brahe in 1572, and was named for him. It appeared quite suddenly in the constellation of Casseopela, and had brilliancy greater than that of any of the planets, so much so that it was visible in the day time. It was believed by some that this star had appeared in the same position 312 years before, or in 1260, and, assuming this interval of appearance to be correct, it would have been visible about the time of the christian era, and it was thus termed the star of Bethlehem. If its return was after 312 years, the time of its reappearance would have been in 1884, but nothing has yet been seen of it. Such a phenomenon at the present day would have the highest value to astronomical science for by the use of modern instruments observations could be taken and information be gathered that would be of the greatest assistance in a series of experiments now in progress. There is, however, so much doubt in the matter that it is of little use to surmise as the star's reappearance."

A Valuable Bit of Land.

From the Washington Post.

While passing a farm in Virginia the figure of an elderly man, whose attire was noticeable for the utter absence of any decorative efforts was to be seen leaning against the fence.

"How are you getting along dowr here?"

"Jes gettin' 'long; no mo'h."

"Good farm?"

"Fa'h."

"Can you raise anything on it?"

Jake Kilrain and his sparring troup exhibited at the opera house at Dallas, Texas. It was announced to be only a sparring and wrestling match. After some uneventful sparring by others, Tom James of Dallas encountered Bezenah, the combination champion light-weight, for $25, conditioned that James should stay four rounds. Bezenah had it his way from the first. In the fourth round Bezenah struck James in the neck, knocking him limp on the stage. James was unable to rise. He was sponged and restoratives applied. The show continued, no one supposing that James was hurt seriously. When the entertainment had about concluded Muldoon announced that James was unconscious, and called for a physician. James died the same night.

"I have thee on the hip," cried rheumatism, seizing his victim and tossing him on a suffering bed. "Not so," he cried, "not so! Wait my ancient foe, just five minutes, until the boy brings a bottle of Salvation Oil, then we'll see who wins the day."

THE GERMAN AND HIS CLOCK.

The story is told of a German who took the hands of his clock to the maker to have them fixed, because they did not keep proper time. Of course, the clock maker demanded the works, as in them lay the trouble. Boils and blotches, pimples and other eruptions on the exterior tell of a disordered condition of the blood within. Be you man or woman, or aught else human, if you have these indications, be wise in time and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the liver and kidneys in good working order, purifies the blood, cleanses the system from all impurities from whatever cause arising, and tones up the functions generally.

"Golden Medical Discovery" checks the frightful inroads of Scrofula, and, if taken in time, arrests the march of Consumption of the Lungs, which is Lung-scrofula, purifies and enriches the blood, thereby curing all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ulcers, Sores, Swellings, and kindred ailments. It is powerfully tonic as well as alterative, or blood-cleansing, in its effects, hence it strengthens the system and restores vitality, thereby dispelling all those languid, "tired feelings" experienced by the debilitated. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and lung remedy, sold by druggists, and guaranteed by its manufacturers, to do all that it is claimed to accomplish, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

$500 OFFERED for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head by the proprietors of DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness, difficulty of clearing throat, expectoration of offensive matter; breath offensive; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once. Thousands of cases result in consumption, and end in the grave.

By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Remedy cures the worst cases. This infallible remedy does not, like the poisonous irritating snuffs, "creams" and strong caustic solutions with which the public have long been humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the lungs, as there is danger of doing in the use of such nostrums, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, loss or impairment of the sense of taste, smell or hearing, watering or weak eyes, and impaired memory, when caused by the violence of Catarrh, as they all frequently are. By druggists, 50 cents.

Not Wholly Ornamental.

Every seat in the North State Street car was taken, and four or five persons were standing. One of the latter was a young woman, who stood near the middle of the car. A tall young man, rather too slim for his height from an athletic point of view, rose from his seat near the rear door and stepped forward to inform the young woman, who was looking the other way, that there was a seat for her. As he did so a man dropped into it.

"I beg your pardon," said the young man. I didn't get up to give you a seat."

"But I got it," said the man.

"I entended it for the lady," said the young fellow.

"But I got it," retorted the other with a sneer.

He was the bigger man, but the young fellow's hand descended on his shoulders and he was on his feet and on the platform before he knew it.

"Conductor! conductor!" he cried, but the conductor had a far-away look in his eyes, and was interested in something going on down the street. The man was in the street before he had time to call out again.

The hero—for he was a hero in the eyes of all the passangers by this time—reentered the car, and, lifting his hat, politely said:

"Madame, there's a seat for you."

And the passengers were so tickled that they actully began to clap their hands. The young man simply smiled, and said:

"College athletics are of some value now and then."

Then he leaned up against the front door and became absorbed in a paper, while the young woman watched him admiringly.

The Lady and the Cigar.

The train from Paris to Versailles was to leave there in five minutes, says the Texas Siftings. An elegantly dressed gentleman enters a first-class carriage. He has a burning cigar in his mouth. He is about to take his seat when he perceives an elderly lady is in the carriage. Being a gentleman he raises the window and is about to throw out the cigar, when the old lady says:

"Don't you know that you are forbidden to smoke in a first-class carriage when there are ladies in it?"

"My dear madame, you see I was just about to anticipate your wish by throwing away my cigar. However, I will not disturbe you further," and bowing very stiffly he left the car, and, purchasing a third-class ticket, he took his seat among some peasants where he could smoke undisturbed.

There was sitting near the gentleman a wretched-looking tramp, who smelt horribly of garlic and who was about as disagreeable a neighbor as can well be imagined.

"My good fellow," said the gentleman, "did you ever ride in a first-class carriage?"

"Never."

"Well, here's a ticket that I can't use. Just you go into that first-class carriage. There is a vacant seat next to an old lady; just take it."

The man, who was sadly in need of disinfectants, did as he was told. A few minutes after he entered the door of the first-class carriage was closed, and off went the train, which does not stop at any stations between Paris and Versailles. You can imagine whether or not the gentleman got even.

It Killed the Show.

From the New York Mail and Express.

Tom Jackson, the author of those funny stories of "Squatter Sovereignty" and the "Harlam Goat," was down in luck at one time and at a last resort took to the ministrel business. He and a brother of Judge Welde organized a company. The company turned out to be a funny one. Jackson and his partner, Welde, were the end men, and while showing at a little Maine town the former hit upon the idea of putting "poetry," as he called it, into the performance.

He circulated a number of blank cards, of the playing card style, among the audience, and requested the holders to write some subject on the pasteboard, and he proposed to compose a rhyme for any one of their selection. The business was old to the minstrel stage, but new to the audience, so all were a bit timid about sending up subjects. After a great deal of persuasion Jackson succeeded in convincing two of the auditors that they would not be fleeced alive if they followed his request, and these two returned their cards. On one was written the single word "Dog." The other bore this hint, "Pay for your washing."

Jackson glanced at the cards for a second and coming down to the footlights said:

Pay for your washing.
That's funny.
I didn't think I owed your mother money.

Then he came to the other card, and this is what he said:

Dog. That's hard.
I'm much obliged to the dog
For sending up his card.

Two-thirds of the audience insisted that Jackson had insulted them and they arose in a body and left the show. The news spread around that little Maine town, and the next night the minstrel show had empty benches to play to. That settled the card-rhyming business, and since that eventful night witty Tom Jackson has never aspired to the combined position of poet and end man.

The Sewing Machine Man's Say.

"Gentlemen," said the sewing machine man, "one spring father and I had a sugar camp down in the edge of the grove. About half a mile from us was a corn field owned by a widow, and this widow never picked her corn clean. On the other side was a man who owned a blind sow. She had one pig, and they used to go over into that corn field every day to eat the corn. Right in front of our camp was a creek. At one place about 40 rods from our camp there was a felled tree across the creek. This was the only place that the sow and pig could cross. Of course the sow could not see to cross on the log, so the way they used to do was for the old sow to take hold of the pig's tail, and the pig would lead her across. Well, one day we were sitting in front of our camp when the old sow and pig were crossing that log. I said to father, 'Hand me the rifle and see me cut that pig's tail off.' I took aim and fired, cutting the little pig's tail off smack smooth. The pig ran for the corn field, but the old sow didn't know which way to go. So father went over and took hold of the pig's tail and led the old sow clear into camp."—Lewiston Journal.

The Awful Alternative.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } SS.
County of Crow Wing. }

On this 20th day of January, A. D. 1890, personally appeared before me, Louis Tache, Auditor of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, who being first duly sworn, deposes and says, That the foregoing is a true and correct list of delinquent taxes upon real estate within the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, for the year 1888, which became delinquent the first day of June, A. D. 1889, and remaining delinquent on the 20th day of January, A. D. 1890.

LOUIS TACHE,
County Auditor,
Crow Wing County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of January, A. D. 1890.

{SEAL.} S. F. ALDERMAN,
Clerk District Court,
Crow Wing County.

Delinquent Tax List.

—OF—

Cass County.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, }
Counties of Crow Wing } SS.
and Cass. }

District Court, Fifteenth Judicial District.

The State of Minnesota, to all persons, companies or corporations, who have or claim any estate, right, title, or interest in, claim to, or lien upon any of the several pieces or parcels of land in the list hereto attached, described:

The list of Taxes and Penalties on real property for the County of Cass, remaining delinquent on the 1st Monday in January, 1890, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the County of Crow Wing, to which Cass county is attached for judicial purposes, of which that hereto attached is a copy. Therefore, you, and each of you, are hereby required to file in the office of said Clerk on or before the 20th day of March, 1890, your answer in writing, setting forth any objection or defense you may have to the taxes or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have, or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien, and in default thereof judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and costs.

{SEAL.} S. F. ALDERMAN,
Clerk District Court, Crow Wing and Cass Counties, Minnesota.

A list of Delinquent Taxes upon Real Estate, within the County of Cass, State of Minnesota, for the year A. D. 1888, remaining delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1890, and the penalties accrued thereon.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Sara E. Kindred and Charles F. Kindred, her husband, mortgagors, to Calvin L. Spaulding and Halsey J. Spencer mortgagees, dated the fourth day of November A. D. 1886, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the county of Crow Wing in the state of Minnesota, on the ninth day of November A. D. 1886, at eleven o'clock and forty-five minutes A. M., in book E of Mortgages, on page 85, on which there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, the amount of four thousand six hundred thirty-seven and 50-100 dollars ($4637.50) and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. And Whereas, mortgage was duly assigned by the said Calvin L. Spaulding and Halsey J. Spencer to J. J. Howe by assignment, dated the 26th day of December A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on the 27th day of December A. D. 1888, at two o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., in book H of mortgages on page 222.

Now, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House in the City of Brainerd in the county of Crow Wing and state of Minnesota, on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1890 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon, and costs and expenses of sale, and fifty dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Crow Wing and state of Minnesota and known and described as follows, to-wit: Block numbered one hundred sixty-four (164) in the town (now part of the city) of Brainerd according to the plat of said town of record in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Crow Wing County.

Dated Feb. 4th, 1890.

J. J. HOWE,
Assignee of Mortgagee.

LEON E. LUM,
Attorney.

Probate Notice.

County of Crow Wing. }

In Probate Court, General Term, Feb. 3, 1890.

In the Matter of the Estate of Chauncey B. Sleeper, Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Sarah L. Sleeper, John L. Smith and Edward Hazen, executors, of the estate of Chauncey B. Sleeper, deceased, representing, among other things, that they have fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining and allowing the final account of their administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard, by this court, on the Third day of March, A. D. 1890, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the City of Brainerd in said County.

And it is further ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested by publishing a copy of this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Brainerd Dispatch, a weekly newspaper printed and published at the City of Brainered, in said County.

By the Court.
[SEAL.] W. P. SPALDING,
Judge of Probate.

LEON E. LUM,
Attorney for Executors.

In the matter of the estate of J. O. Phillips, deceased.

Letters of administration upon said estate having been this day granted by said court to W. R. Philips, of said County of Crow Wing.

It is ordered, That the creditors of said deceased be allowed to present their claims against said estate, for examination and allowance by this court, on any day hereafter until the 1st Monday in August, 1890.

Ordered further, That the 1st Monday in each month thereafter, until and including said 1st Monday in August, 1890, at the general terms of said court, at the office of the Judge of said court, at the City of Brainerd, in said County of Crow Wing, proofs to substantiate such claims will be taken before said Judge, and all such claims have to be presented and filed in said court during the period fixed by this court.

Ordered further, That notice thereof be forthwith given to such creditors, and all others concerned, by publication of this order four successive weeks in the Brainerd Dispatch, a weekly newspaper printed and published in said County, and by posting a copy of this order at four public places in said County of Crow Wing.

By the Court.
[SEAL] W. P. SPALDING,
Judge of Probate.

District Court, Fifteenth Judicial District.

Samuel R. Lind, Plaintiff, against
Mat A. Karjola, Defendant.

Notice is hereby given, that an action has been commenced in this court by the above named plaintiff against the above named defendant, Mat A. Karjola, for the purpose of reforming a certain deed executed and delivered to said plaintiff by said defendant on the 3rd day of May, 1888, in which an error was made in the description of the premises intended to be conveyed by said deed.

The premises affected by said action are situated in the County of Crow Wing, and described as follows:

The east thirty-five feet (35 feet), being subdivision number four (4), of Mertz & Lum's subdivision—of Lots number five (5) and six (6), of Block number seven (7), in the Town of East Brainerd, according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the Registry of Deeds for the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota.

Dated January 8th, 1890.

Plaintiff's Attorney,
Brainerd, Minn.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, Default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed and delivered by Mrs Julia Lowe (widow) mortgagor, to Patrick H. Carney, mortgagee, dated the 22nd day of September, 1885, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, of the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota, on the 22nd day of September, 1885, at 3:15 p. m., in Book E of Mortgages, on page 30, on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the amount of two hundred twenty-five dollars and eighty-three cents ($225 83-100), and no proceeding or action has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Brainerd, in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, on Monday, the 24th day of February, A. D. 1890, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold, are, all those tracts or parcels of land, lying and being in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit:

The northwest quarter (NW¼), of Section number twelve (12), in Township number forty-four (44), of Range number thirty-one (31), according to the United States government survey, except a strip of land four rods wide, running from the southwest corner of the above described land east to the stream known as Buffalo Creek, being the land deeded to Julia A. Stillings.

Dated January 9th, 1890.

PATRICK H. CARNEY,
Mortgagee.

W. A. FLEMING,
Attorney for Mortgagee.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Mary Shontell and Benjamin Shontell, her husband, mortgagors, to The National Building Loan and Protective Union, mortgagee, dated the first day of August, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Crow Wing, in the State of Minnesota, on the 24th day of August, A. D. 1888, at 3 o'clock p. m., in book I of mortgages, on page 1, on which there is claimed to be past due, at the date of this notice, the amount of twenty-seven and 50-100 dollars, ($27.50), being interest and premium for eleven months and the mortgagee elects to consider the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable and therefore there is now due and payable under and on said mortgage the sum of three hundred twenty-seven and 50-100 dollars, ($327.50), and no action or preceeding has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Notice is hereby given, That by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, at public auction at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Brainerd, in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1890, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, and costs and expenses of sale, including twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

The east half of the southwest quarter (E½ SW¼), of Section two (2), in Township forty-four (44), of Range thirty-one (31).

Dated January 30th, 1890.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } SS.
County of Crow Wing. }

On this 20th day of January, A. D. 1890, personally appeared before me, Louis Tache, Auditor of Crow Wing County, Minnesota, who being first duly sworn, deposes and says, That the foregoing is a true and correct list of delinquent taxes upon real estate within the County of Crow Wing, and State of Minnesota, for the year 1888, which became delinquent the first day of June, A. D. 1889, and remaining delinquent on the 20th day of January, A. D. 1890.

LOUIS TACHE,
County Auditor,
Crow Wing County.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of January, A. D. 1890.

Clerk District Court,
Crow Wing County.

Delinquent Tax List.

—OF—

Cass County.

STATE OF MINNESOTA. } SS.
Counties of Crow Wing } and Cass. }

District Court, Fifteenth Judicial District.

The State of Minnesota, to all persons, companies or corporations, who have or claim any estate, right, title, or interest in, claim to, or lien upon any of the several pieces or parcels of land in the list hereto attached, described:

The list of Taxes and Penalties on real property for the County of Cass, remaining delinquent on the 1st Monday in January, 1890, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the County of Crow Wing, to which Cass county is attached for judicial purposes, of which that hereto attached is a copy. Therefore, you, and each of you, are hereby required to file in the office of said Clerk on or before the 20th day of March, 1890, your answer in writing, setting forth any objection or defense you may have to the taxes or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have, or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien, and in default thereof judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and costs.

[SEAL.] S. F. ALDERMAN,
Clerk District Court, Crow Wing and Cass Counties, Minnesota.

A list of Delinquent Taxes upon Real Estate, within the County of Cass, State of Minnesota, for the year A. D. 1888, remaining delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1890, and the penalties accrued thereon.

THE BRAINERD DISPATCH.
SUPPLEMENT.

VOLUME 9, NUMBER 13. | BRAINERD, MINNESOTA FRIDAY. FEBRUARY 21, 1890. | INGERSOLL & WIELAND, PUBLISHERS

I recently witnessed a strange, and to me an almost unprecedented, sight—viz., a perfectly tame, full-grown, ruffed grouse, says a writer in Forest and Stream. It is a fine, large, male bird. I at first, in passing the window on the street, thought it a skilled specimen of the taxidermist's art. I stopped, went into the store, and, upon inquiring of the proprietor, learned its history. It was an acquisition of but a few days' possession. He found it in an almost expiring state from starvation in an unoccupied house in the suburbs of the city. You know of the wild, frenzied flight of these birds in autumn, frequently dashing themselves to death against houses or windows; several have been thus killed in our city this season. This one seems to have dashed through a window of a deserted house, and, not being able to find its way out, was almost in articulo mortis when picked up. With much difficulty it was restored. A drop of water was inserted in its mouth, then a bit of grape pulp, and so little by little nourished until the bird now feeds kindly and confidently from the hand. It is almost omniverous in its tastes—takes clover leaves, raw cabbage, grape, apple, parched corn, or what is known as "pop-corn," corn, birch buds, etc. Solitary, silent starvation seems to have annihilated the wild, unconquerable instinct.

The secret to a door seems here to have been opened to its possible domestication. Its kind-hearted possessor is already inquiring round among the boys for a partner and wife for his solitary pet. Some starving, imprisoned bird may yet be found by the farmer boys beneath the snow-crust after some winter storm and allow us to carry out this curious experiment to domesticate a hitherto deemed incorrigibly untamable bird.

ONLY NINE, YET A HERO.

A little black boy on the Senegal river, in Africa, is the proud possessor of a gold medal sent to him by the French minister of marine and colonies. The boy is now 12 years old, and the act which has received this token of recognition from the French government occurred when he was only 9. He lives near Bakel, the chief town, far inland, on the upper Senegal, and he witnessed some of the stirring scenes three years ago, when the Marabout Lamame laid waste a large district and gave French interests in upper Senegal such a lively shaking up.

One day he was with his mother in their straw hut when he saw some of the Marabout soldiers set fire to some huts near by and then start to apply the torch to his own home. He picked up his father's breech-loader, and though he was not strong enough to hold the weapon to his shoulder he shot two of the soldiers dead and the others ran for dear life. The incident is mentioned in the official reports on the French campaign against the Marabout, and the boy now has a medal to show what a plucky 9-year-old he was.

A PRINTER'S EXPERINCE.

A printer, well known in Atlanta, says the Constitution had an experience during the last few days which he is likely to remember. Like many a better man he got hard up in Birmingham last week. He wanted to come to Atlanta and he crawled into the first vacant stock car he saw, and, as it was night, rolled into one corner and went to sleep. He was awakened in a little while by a lot of mules which were driven in on him.

"Scared? Well, I think I was," he says in telling the story. "But I wanted to come, and I thought I could pacify the mules so they would let me alone. I soon found that wouldn't work. They eyed me suspiciously, then bit at me and kicked me until I began to realize that there must be some change or my last days had come. I made up my mind to ride one of the mules. I tried one and was promptly landed against the top of the car. Then another, and another, with the same result. The fourth one was docile, and on that mule's back I rode for a day and a night. It was the most horrible ride anybody had ever experienced, and you need not wonder at my hair turning gray."

North Germany's Old Men.

The German papers have recently spoken of the veteran Johann Dose, aged 106, living near Lubeck, as the oldest man in North Germany, but this is an error. At Bielfeld, in Westphalia, there is a private gentleman named Markus Jordan, who completed his 110th year in a comparatively robust state of health, on the 6th of October. A gold medal bearing a portrait of the late Emperor William, who was an infant when Herr Jerdan was already a youth of eighteen, was presented to him in the name of the present Emperor on the last anniversary of his birth.

Wonderful Cave in California.

Some miners at Homer, Cal., broke into a cave the other day while at work drilling and came upon a chamber about forty feet square and quite as high, the sides and roof of which were chalcedony bulged out in all sorts of grotesque and fantastic shapes. The interior of the cave flashed with the iridescence of a million colored gems. It seemed, says one of the miners, as if all the glittering stars in the firmament had come down to hold high carnival and flash themselves through lenses of variegated hues. Exploring farther they found still more cause for wonder. Petrifactions of animals, birds, and reptiles abounded. There were great owls and monstrous bats, and several snakes as hideous as if endowed with life. Some of these petrifactions, says the Homer Index, have been removed in perfect condition.

A Big Crocodile.

A monster crocodile, measuring 17 feet and 8 inches, was killed in the Houghly river at Utterpara, India, in front of Baboo Joykissen Mookerjee's library. The superintendent of the Dakinshaw powder magazine had tried eight shots unsuccessfully, when Baboo Sivrarayan Mookerjee arrived and lodged three Snider rifle bullets in its head and thus mortally wounded it. The animal, exasperated and nearly done to death, made for the bank and on reaching it was again assailed by Baboo with a fourth bullet, which put an end to its life. The carcass made its appearance on the surface of the river and was dragged ashore by some boatmen, who exhibited it afterward to the inhabitants.

ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS.

Common Sense and Their Own Stomachs Are to Be Strictly Obeyed.

All dyspeptics should avoid anything which they (not others) cannot digest, says the New York Ledger. There are so many causes for and forms of dyspepsia that it is impossible to prescribe one and the same diet for all. Nothing is more disagreeable or useless than to be cautioned against eating this or that, because your neighbor "So and So" cannot eat such things. If we would all study the nature and digestion of food, and remember that air and exercise are as essention as food in promoting good health, we could easily decide upon the diet best suited to our individual needs. The diabetic should abstain from sugar and anything that is converted into sugar in digestion, such as starchy foods, sweet omelets, custards, jellies, sweet sauces, starcy nuts, wines and liquors.

The corpulent should abstain from fat as well as sugar and starch. A diet of whole wheat, milk, vegetables, fruits and lean meat will produce only a normal amount of fatness, while an excess of acids, sweets, spices and shortening keeps the system in an unhealthful condition. Those who can digest fine flour, pastry, sugar and fats become loaded with fat, but are neither strong nor vigorous.

Thin people with weak digestion should also avoid such foods; for thin people are often kept thin by the same food which makes others fat. If they cannot digest the starch, butter and fine flour the system is kept in a feverish, dyspeptic state; they become nervous or go into consumption for no other reason than that the life is burned out by a diet which only feeds the fire and does not renew the tissues.

The fact now seems clearly demonstrated that at various spots across the great African continent, within a few degrees north and south of the equator, extending from the Atlantic coast to near the shores of the Albert Nyanza, and perhaps even farther to the east, are scattered communities of these small negroes, all much resembling each other in size, appearance and habits, and dwelling mostly apart from their larger neighbors, by whom they are everywhere surrounded. Our information about them is still scanty, and to obtain more, the London Times thinks, would be a worthy object of ambition for the scientific traveler. In many parts, especially at the West, they are obviously holding their own with difficulty, if not actually disappearing, and there is much about their condition of civilization and the situations in which they are found to induce us to look upon them, like the bushmen of South Africa and the equally diminutive negritos of the Indo-Malayan regions, as the remains of a population which occupied the land before the incoming of the present dominant races. If the account of thr Nasamonians be accepted as historical the river they came to flowing from west to east must have been the Niger and the northward range of the dwarfish people far more extensive twenty-three centuries ago than it is at the present time.

LONG-LIVED FRIENDS.

How Intermarriage Affect the Life and Success of Quakers.

It is quite true that many "Friends" live long, says the London Hospital. It is equally true that certain circumstances in their history militate against long life. Among these latter, intermarriage is perhaps the most important of all. The followers of George Fox have never been very numerous, but until late years they have been extremely exclusive. The inevitable result of that has been extensive intermarriage throughout the whole community. The consequences of the frequency of intermarriage have been, and are still, very evident. Quakers, as a class, are not muscularly robust; many of them are decidedly anæmic, and not a few are mentally feeble.

Yet, in spite of these practices and serious drawbacks, the Friends, as a class, do more than their proportion of the world's serious business, and they manage to attain a high average of longevity. Now, this is exactly the kind of fact that true medical science likes to get hold of and interrogate and learn from. What is the reason, asks the sensible man, why the Quakers, with so many undoubted disadvantages, attain such a high average of success in all that constitutes worthy life, and also succeed in enjoying their success to an exceptionally old age? The reason, we are convinced, is to be found in their quiet habits and disciplined life. An ordinary doctor, or even layman, would probably have felt much more interest in the subject at that point if we would have been able to affirm that the Quakers owed their success and long life to certain drugs, as, for example, to arsenic, phosphorus, strychnia, and the like, or to certain methods of feeding, as vegetarianism, or meat-eating, or fruit-eating, or wine-drinking, or teetotalism, or smoking, and so on. But we submit that that shows a want of real mental capacity. For what, after all, is the true importance of the subject? Does it not consist in the undoubted character of the results? The results are really the things to be considered.

As a matter of fact the Quakers are successful in life. As a matter of fact they do live long. Then, surely, true science will not curl the lip of scorn because these results are obtained by what may be called "natural and simple" processes instead of by elaborate preparations or out-of-the-way methods.

SHAKING HANDS.

The Latest English Style as Adopted by New York Anglomaniacs.

The new fashion of shaking hands is absurd, says the Brooklyn Eagle, but it has been adopted, and it will be some years before society is emancipated from its grotesque influence. The old fashion of shaking hands was good enough and simple enough, but the universal desire for a change has abolished it. Formerly when two people met their arms swung forward naturally, their hands met, and the arms dropped back in place. The mere act of shaking hands was as natural as that of taking a seat or lifting a book. It is far different now. The whole ceremony is instinct with deep thought and careful elaboration. A man and a woman meet and both burst into a smile of welcome. Then the woman swings her right arm, which is perfectly rigid, straight out from the shoulder and directly in front of her. When the hand has reached the height of her chin she holds it there, with the thumb toward the face and the palm turned slightly outward. The man who has been approaching her gently takes hold of the hand a good deal as one might grasp the rung of a ladder. He bows slightly, as though intending to press his lips to the lady's hand, and then lets go abruptly and drops his hand to his side. Then the woman drops her stiffened arm and the ceremony is over. This is English. It first appeared in Punch about six years ago and it has since then been extensively copied in British society. Its full adoption in New York occurred at the McAllister ball, where the society ladies received the 1,400 guests in precisely this fashion during the evening.

Paris Horse Abattoirs.

A visit to one of the horse abattoirs in Paris is not calculated to make one a confirmed hippophagist. A journalist visited one of the largest of these slaughter houses early one morning and saw the sort of animals that are thought fit for human food in Paris. This abattoir is in the south of Paris, in the Boulevard de l'Hopital, not many yards from the famous manufacture des Gobelins. There were forty horses waiting to be slaughtered. They were decrepit old invalids, lame, spavined, diseased, and fleshless old hacks, suffering all the infirmities which afflict the equine race. When a horse becomes useless for everything else he is taken to these abattoirs and killed, unless he dies on the way. Some of those in the stables were so rickety that they could not stand up.

The Length of the Day.

At London, England, and Bremen, Prussia, the longest day has sixteen and a half hours. At Stockholm, Sweden, it is eighteen and a half hours in length. At Hamburg, in Germany, and Dantzic, in Prussia, the longest day has seventeen hours. At St. Petersburg, Russia, and Tobolsk, Siberia, the longest is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours. At Tornea, Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours in length. At Wardburry, Norway, the longest day lasts from May 21 to July 22, without interruption, that is to say the sun is never set in that time, and in Spitsbergen the longest day is three and a half months.

At Philadelphia the longest day is somewhat less than fifteen hours, and in Montreal, Canada, it is sixteen.

Roscoe Whitcomb of Waldo, Mo., has a shepherd dog which he prizes highly. One day last week a colt that was fastened by a halter got his feet through the stall and fell in such a manner that he was choking to death. The dog was in the barn, saw the trouble, and, running to the house, caught Mrs. Whitcomb by the dress and attempted to pull her out of doors. The dog would run toward the barn and then catch Mrs. Whitcomb by her clothes. She finally went to the barn, arriving just in time to save the colt.

A Thief Detected.

"I'll tell you how I ran down a thief recently," said a man in the Lewiston, Maine, police-station. "I lost $80 in money. I did not say a word. I did not even tell my wife. I hardly told myself. The other day, two years after the occurrence, a woman in my neighborhood said: 'By the way, did you ever find out who stole your $80?' I looked her in the face and said: 'I never did until just this minute.' She turned as pale as a ghost, and the result was that she paid me $80 and interest on the same for two years."

TAME RUFFED GROUSE.

The Possibility of Dymesticating a Hitherto Untamable Bird.

I recently witnessed a strange, and to me an almost unprecedented, sight—viz., a perfectly tame, full-grown, ruffed grouse, says a writer in Forest and Stream. It is a fine, large, male bird. I at first, in passing the window on the street, thought it a skilled specimen of the taxidermist's art. I stopped, went into the store, and, upon inquiring of the proprietor, learned its history. It was an acquisition of but a few days' possession. He found it in an almost expiring state from starvation in an unoccupied house in the suburbs of the city. You know of the wild, frenzied flight of these birds in autumn, frequently dashing themselves to death against houses or windows; several have been thus killed in our city this season. This one seems to have dashed through a window of a deserted house, and, not being able to find its way out, was almost in articulo mortis when picked up. With much difficulty it was restored. A drop of water was inserted in its mouth, then a bit of grape pulp, and so little by little nourished until the bird now feeds kindly and confidently from the hand. It is almost omniverous in its tastes—takes clover leaves, raw cabbage, grape, apple, parched corn, or what is known as "pop-corn," corn, birch buds, etc. Solitary, silent starvation seems to have annihilated the wild, unconquerable instinct.

The secret to a door seems here to have been opened to its possible domestication. Its kind-hearted possessor is already inquiring round among the boys for a partner and wife for his solitary pet. Some starving, imprisoned bird may yet be found by the farmer boys beneath the snow-crust after some winter storm and allow us to carry out this curious experiment to domesticate a hitherto deemed incorrigibly untamable bird.

ONLY NINE, YET A HERO.

A little black boy on the Senegal river, in Africa, is the proud possessor of a gold medal sent to him by the French minister of marine and colonies. The boy is now 12 years old, and the act which has received this token of recognition from the French government occurred when he was only 9. He lives near Bakel, the chief town, far inland, on the upper Senegal, and he witnessed some of the stirring scenes three years ago, when the Marabout Lamame laid waste a large district and gave French interests in upper Senegal such a lively shaking up.

One day he was with his mother in their straw hut when he saw some of the Marabout soldiers set fire to some huts near by and then start to apply the torch to his own home. He picked up his father's breech-loader, and though he was not strong enough to hold the weapon to his shoulder he shot two of the soldiers dead and the others ran for dear life. The incident is mentioned in the official reports on the French campaign against the Marabout, and the boy now has a medal to show what a plucky 9-year-old he was.

A PRINTER'S EXPERINCE.

A printer, well known in Atlanta, says the Constitution had an experience during the last few days which he is likely to remember. Like many a better man he got hard up in Birmingham last week. He wanted to come to Atlanta and he crawled into the first vacant stock car he saw, and, as it was night, rolled into one corner and went to sleep. He was awakened in a little while by a lot of mules which were driven in on him.

"Scared? Well, I think I was," he says in telling the story. "But I wanted to come, and I thought I could pacify the mules so they would let me alone. I soon found that wouldn't work. They eyed me suspiciously, then bit at me and kicked me until I began to realize that there must be some change or my last days had come. I made up my mind to ride one of the mules. I tried one and was promptly landed against the top of the car. Then another, and another, with the same result. The fourth one was docile, and on that mule's back I rode for a day and a night. It was the most horrible ride anybody had ever experienced, and you need not wonder at my hair turning gray."

North Germany's Old Men.

The German papers have recently spoken of the veteran Johann Dose, aged 106, living near Lubeck, as the oldest man in North Germany, but this is an error. At Bielfeld, in Westphalia, there is a private gentleman named Markus Jordan, who completed his 110th year in a comparatively robust state of health, on the 6th of October. A gold medal bearing a portrait of the late Emperor William, who was an infant when Herr Jerdan was already a youth of eighteen, was presented to him in the name of the present Emperor on the last anniversary of his birth.

Wonderful Cave in California.

Some miners at Homer, Cal., broke into a cave the other day while at work drilling and came upon a chamber about forty feet square and quite as high, the sides and roof of which were chalcedony bulged out in all sorts of grotesque and fantastic shapes. The interior of the cave flashed with the iridescence of a million colored gems. It seemed, says one of the miners, as if all the glittering stars in the firmament had come down to hold high carnival and flash themselves through lenses of variegated hues. Exploring farther they found still more cause for wonder. Petrifactions of animals, birds, and reptiles abounded. There were great owls and monstrous bats, and several snakes as hideous as if endowed with life. Some of these petrifactions, says the Homer Index, have been removed in perfect condition.

A Big Crocodile.

A monster crocodile, measuring 17 feet and 8 inches, was killed in the Houghly river at Utterpara, India, in front of Baboo Joykissen Mookerjee's library. The superintendent of the Dakinshaw powder magazine had tried eight shots unsuccessfully, when Baboo Sivrarayan Mookerjee arrived and lodged three Snider rifle bullets in its head and thus mortally wounded it. The animal, exasperated and nearly done to death, made for the bank and on reaching it was again assailed by Baboo with a fourth bullet, which put an end to its life. The carcass made its appearance on the surface of the river and was dragged ashore by some boatmen, who exhibited it afterward to the inhabitants.

ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS.

Common Sense and Their Own Stomachs Are to Be Strictly Obeyed.

All dyspeptics should avoid anything which they (not others) cannot digest, says the New York Ledger. There are so many causes for and forms of dyspepsia that it is impossible to prescribe one and the same diet for all. Nothing is more disagreeable or useless than to be cautioned against eating this or that, because your neighbor "So and So" cannot eat such things. If we would all study the nature and digestion of food, and remember that air and exercise are as essention as food in promoting good health, we could easily decide upon the diet best suited to our individual needs. The diabetic should abstain from sugar and anything that is converted into sugar in digestion, such as starchy foods, sweet omelets, custards, jellies, sweet sauces, starcy nuts, wines and liquors.

The corpulent should abstain from fat as well as sugar and starch. A diet of whole wheat, milk, vegetables, fruits and lean meat will produce only a normal amount of fatness, while an excess of acids, sweets, spices and shortening keeps the system in an unhealthful condition. Those who can digest fine flour, pastry, sugar and fats become loaded with fat, but are neither strong nor vigorous.

Thin people with weak digestion should also avoid such foods; for thin people are often kept thin by the same food which makes others fat. If they cannot digest the starch, butter and fine flour the system is kept in a feverish, dyspeptic state; they become nervous or go into consumption for no other reason than that the life is burned out by a diet which only feeds the fire and does not renew the tissues.

Men dig their graves with their teeth; not only by drinking whisky and using tobacco, but by eating food loaded down with inflammatory materials,

AFRICAN DWARFS.

The fact now seems clearly demonstrated that at various spots across the great African continent, within a few degrees north and south of the equator, extending from the Atlantic coast to near the shores of the Albert Nyanza, and perhaps even farther to the east, are scattered communities of these small negroes, all much resembling each other in size, appearance and habits, and dwelling mostly apart from their larger neighbors, by whom they are everywhere surrounded. Our information about them is still scanty, and to obtain more, the London Times thinks, would be a worthy object of ambition for the scientific traveler. In many parts, especially at the West, they are obviously holding their own with difficulty, if not actually disappearing, and there is much about their condition of civilization and the situations in which they are found to induce us to look upon them, like the bushmen of South Africa and the equally diminutive negritos of the Indo-Malayan regions, as the remains of a population which occupied the land before the incoming of the present dominant races. If the account of thr Nasamonians be accepted as historical the river they came to flowing from west to east must have been the Niger and the northward range of the dwarfish people far more extensive twenty-three centuries ago than it is at the present time.

LONG-LIVED FRIENDS.

How Intermarriage Affect the Life and Success of Quakers.

It is quite true that many "Friends" live long, says the London Hospital. It is equally true that certain circumstances in their history militate against long life. Among these latter, intermarriage is perhaps the most important of all. The followers of George Fox have never been very numerous, but until late years they have been extremely exclusive. The inevitable result of that has been extensive intermarriage throughout the whole community. The consequences of the frequency of intermarriage have been, and are still, very evident. Quakers, as a class, are not muscularly robust; many of them are decidedly anæmic, and not a few are mentally feeble,

Yet, in spite of these practices and serious drawbacks, the Friends, as a class, do more than their proportion of the world's serious business, and they manage to attain a high average of longevity. Now, this is exactly the kind of fact that true medical science likes to get hold of and interrogate and learn from. What is the reason, asks the sensible man, why the Quakers, with so many undoubted disadvantages, attain such a high average of success in all that constitutes worthy life, and also succeed in enjoying their success to an exceptionally old age? The reason, we are convinced, is to be found in their quiet habits and disciplined life. An ordinary doctor, or even layman, would probably have felt much more interest in the subject at that point if we would have been able to affirm that the Quakers owed their success and long life to certain drugs, as, for example, to arsenic, phosphorus, strychnia, and the like, or to certain methods of feeding, as vegetarianism, or meat-eating, or fruit-eating, or wine-drinking, or teetotalism, or smoking, and so on. But we submit that that shows a want of real mental capacity. For what, after all, is the true importance of the subject? Does it not consist in the undoubted character of the results? The results are really the things to be considered.

As a matter of fact the Quakers are successful in life. As a matter of fact they do live long. Then, surely, true science will not curl the lip of scorn because these results are obtained by what may be called "natural and simple" processes instead of by elaborate preparations or out-of-the-way methods.

SHAKING HANDS.

The Latest English Style as Adopted by New York Anglomaniacs.

The new fashion of shaking hands is absurd, says the Brooklyn Eagle, but it has been adopted, and it will be some years before society is emancipated from its grotesque influence. The old fashion of shaking hands was good enough and simple enough, but the universal desire for a change has abolished it. Formerly when two people met their arms swung forward naturally, their hands met, and the arms dropped back in place. The mere act of shaking hands was as natural as that of taking a seat or lifting a book. It is far different now. The whole ceremony is instinct with deep thought and careful elaboration. A man and a woman meet and both burst into a smile of welcome. Then the woman swings her right arm, which is perfectly rigid, straight out from the shoulder and directly in front of her. When the hand has reached the height of her chin she holds it there, with the thumb toward the face and the palm turned slightly outward. The man who has been approaching her gently takes hold of the hand a good deal as one might grasp the rung of a ladder. He bows slightly, as though intending to press his lips to the lady's hand, and then lets go abruptly and drops his hand to his side. Then the woman drops her stiffened arm and the ceremony is over. This is English. It first appeared in Punch about six years ago and it has since then been extensively copied in British society. Its full adoption in New York occurred at the McAllister ball, where the society ladies received the 1,400 guests in precisely this fashion during the evening.

Paris Horse Abattoirs.

A visit to one of the horse abattoirs in Paris is not calculated to make one a confirmed hippophagist. A journalist visited one of the largest of these slaughter houses early one morning and saw the sort of animals that are thought fit for human food in Paris. This abattoir is in the south of Paris, in the Boulevard de l'Hopital, not many yards from the famous manufacture des Gobelins. There were forty horses waiting to be slaughtered. They were decrepit old invalids, lame, spavined, diseased, and fleshless old hacks, suffering all the infirmities which afflict the equine race. When a horse becomes useless for everything else he is taken to these abattoirs and killed, unless he dies on the way. Some of those in the stables were so rickety that they could not stand up.

The Length of the Day.

At London, England, and Bremen, Prussia, the longest day has sixteen and a half hours. At Stockholm, Sweden, it is eighteen and a half hours in length. At Hamburg, in Germany, and Dantzic, in Prussia, the longest day has seventeen hours. At St. Petersburg, Russia, and Tobolsk, Siberia, the longest is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours. At Tornea, Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours in length. At Wardburry, Norway, the longest day lasts from May 21 to July 22, without interruption, that is to say the sun is never set in that time, and in Spitsbergen the longest day is three and a half months.

At Philadelphia the longest day is somewhat less than fifteen hours, and in Montreal, Canada, it is sixteen.

Roscoe Whitcomb of Waldo, Mo., has a shepherd dog which he prizes highly. One day last week a colt that was fastened by a halter got his feet through the stall and fell in such a manner that he was choking to death. The dog was in the barn, saw the trouble, and, running to the house, caught Mrs. Whitcomb by the dress and attempted to pull her out of doors. The dog would run toward the barn and then catch Mrs. Whitcomb by her clothes. She finally went to the barn, arriving just in time to save the colt.

A Thief Detected.

"I'll tell you how I ran down a thief recently," said a man in the Lewiston, Maine, police-station. "I lost $80 in money. I did not say a word. I did not even tell my wife. I hardly told myself. The other day, two years after the occurrence, a woman in my neighborhood said: 'By the way, did you ever find out who stole your $80?' I looked her in the face and said: 'I never did until just this minute.' She turned as pale as a ghost, and the result was that she paid me $80 and interest on the same for two years."

The county superintendent has this week issued second grade certificates to Miss Blanche Scougale, Miss Belle Graham and Miss Rosemond Neidhart. Third grade certificates were issued to Mrs. Della M. Curtis and Miss Jessie P. Gibb.

Prof. Gould is on the sick list this week, and Supt. Wilson has charge of the high school department. Miss Bessie Mulrine, also a teacher in the city schools, is confined to the house on account of illness caused from falling down stairs, and her department is in charge of Miss Nettie McCulloch.

As train No. 5 was pulling out of Crow Wing Tuesday noon, an axle under the second class coach broke and the wheels ran for some considerable distance on the ties. The peculiarity of the accident was that the axle should give out just as the train was starting up instead of when the train was under full motion, but probably loss of life was averted by it. The passengers were brought to Brainerd in the baggage car.

On Sunday morning last as the church bells were pealing out their morning chimes fire was discovered in the attic of Mrs. Fanny Mulrine's residence on Eighth street north. The fire department responded as quickly as possible, and the flames were subdued, but not until the roof and upper portion of the building was gutted. The household goods were nearly all removed, but, of course, in a somewhat damaged condition. This is the second fire Mrs. Mulrine has had inside of four months in the same building.

The sixth annual ball of Pine City Lodge, No. 81, B. of L. F., will be given on the evening of Easter Thursday, April 10th, and already the members of that organization are making arrangements for a grand good time on that occasion. The committee of arrangements contains the following names: J. F. McGinnis, chairman, Geo. Watts, E. Simmons, Geo. Hass and E. Efner.—The reputation which this organization has established for first-class parties in all particulars by their previous efforts will insure them a large attendance.

The State Fireman's Association which meets in Brainerd in June will bring many people to our city from all over the State, and it is desirable to make the meeting one of the most successful in its history. The department of this city will have matters in charge and have already set the ball rolling. The council will be called upon to make a contribution towards expenses, and there should be no hesitancy in their so doing when the time comes. Brainerd has one of the best volunter departments in the State and they deserve to be encouraged in this undertaking. It goes without saying that the coming meeting of the State Firemen in Brainerd will be one of the most enjoyable in the history of the organization.

Joy Turned to Sorrow.

A peculiarly sad incident occurred in this city on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. A Dean, on 9th street north. On that evening Miss Lillie Dean and James J. Bulmer were united in marriage, at the residence of the bride's mother, in the presence of invited guests. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock which joined the young people for life, and how little they thought that that life meant but three hours of wedded happiness. The guests departed at a little before 11 o'clock. The bride and groom sought their room and retired for the night and but ten or fifteen minutes had elapsed when the bride was alarmed by the peculiar breathing of her husband, and what seemed to her a gasping for breath. She spoke to him but no answer came and she arose hurriedly and turned up the light and returned to his side to find him dead. The alarm was given and assistance called but of no avail. The cause of death was heart disease and the sudden termination of his life was due to the excitement incident to the wedding. The case is certainly a sad one. Mr. Bulmer was a highly respected young man, 28 years of age, and had been in the employ of the Northern Pacific company here for two years. His parents, who reside in Canada, were notified by wire of the death of their son. The remains were taken to Marshal, Mich., on the noon train today, accompanied by the sorrowing wife, Mrs. Dean, and Mr. and Mrs. Brown, where they will be laid to rest.

A Republican City Ticket.

The matter of placing a republican city ticket in the field at the coming municipal election is receiving considerably attention these days, and while no move has as yet been made in that direction it is quite likely there will be if the sentiment continues to be expressed as favorably as has been done during the past week. If such a step is taken, and it is high time for it, it will be by concerted action of the republicans of Brainerd and by no clique, clan or ring, as will be seen later on. In a movement of this kind to insure success harmony must prevail and the selection of candidates must be practically unanimous. The DISPATCH will favor no movement in which the majority of the republican voters of this city do not have a voice, and if it is considered advisable to nominate a ticket a mass meeting will be called at some public place and due notice will be given so that every republican voter may have a chance to express himself. We desire that the republicans throughout the city canvass the subject, get at the real sentiment and act accordingly. In our next issue we will have more to say in regard to the matter.

Do not be Deceived.

Brother Stivers in his yesterday's paper says a "secret meeting" was held a few nights ago by a few republicans. As usual he is mistaken, for the meeting which he refers to was no more secret than any little gathering would be where several gentlemen are discussing matters of interest. Bro. Stivers would have been as welcome there as any man present. The fact that politics was discussed, however, was enough for him—inasmuch as it was republican politics. Do not be deceived, Bro. Stivers, nor try to deceived others into believing that there will be any "star-chamber" business, for if the republicans desire to put up a party ticket it will be done openly and by a majority of the voters. Candidates or possible candidates have not been suggested, mentioned, or thought of as yet.

A Very Successful Ball.

The occasion of the masquerade ball given by the members of the Chenquatana Club, of this city, on Monday evening was one of the most delightful events of the season. The Armory was artistically decorated and long before the time for the opening, the seats in the gallery and those reserved below for the spectators were taken and standing room was at a premium. At 9:15 the grand march took place, and it was indeed a gorgeous affair in which probably one hundred couple participated.—There were rich and expensive costumes, and they ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous. "McGinty's" band was also a feature, and a decided hit. The attendance was so large and many of the costumes so elaborate that it would be an impossibility for us to undertake to describe them. The members of the club can congratulate themselves on the successful termination of the event and the success of future entertainments of this class by the club is assured.

As Was Expected.

Dr. J H. Howes and J. H. Koop returned on Tuesday from the Mille Lacs Indian reservation where they went at the request of Agent Shuler to investigate the reports of death and destitution and report little or no foundation for the alarming reports. But few deaths have occurred from the grippe and sickness among them is no more than usual. Dr. Howes says the Indians were found to be pursuing their usual mode of life, and were actually shipping considerable quantities of fish from the winter catching through the ice. Undoubtedly less exertion than usual has been made towards supporting themselves owing to their high anticipations, but there is nothing existing, in fact, to justify the loud wails they made for help. As a matter of fact, most of the Mille Lackers have decided to take their lands in severality on the reservation where they now are, instead of removing to the White Earth reservation, so that they had no reason to expect immediate benefits.

As to Delinquent Taxes.

In this issue the list of delinquent taxes on real estate in the counties of Crow Wing and Cass for the year 1888 appears. Every real estate owner in these two counties should look it over carefully as it is often the case that some piece of property that he has intended to pay the taxes on has been forgotten or overlooked and if so such descriptions will be found advertised for sale. Errors in names will creep in although the description is always correct, because many times land is sold and the name on the assessment rolls is not changed. Errors also occur at times by the piece not being checked off. The extra cost for paying taxes before the sale is thirty cents more than the total amount shown in the list to cover cost of publishing and docketing. Additional costs will be added in May on account of sale, etc. Extra copies of the DISPATCH containing the list can be obtained at this office.

K. P. Anniversary.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the order of Knights of Pythias was celebrated by White Cross Lodge at their Castle Hall in this city, on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst., and it was pronounced by all present as a most enjoyable occasion. About 250 persons, including knights and invited guests were in attendance, the Grand Chancellor of the state, Hon. B. F. Stahl, of St. Paul, honoring the occasion by his presence. The entertainment was was of a literary and musical character of superior merit, and was enjoyed by all present. Grand Chancellor Stahl delivered the principal address of the evening, in which he reviewed the causes which led to the establishment of the order, the benefits to be derived by membership, and the remarkable growth and progress made during the 26 years of its existence. Hon. W. A. Fleming delivered a short address of welcome to the invited guests on behalf of the lodge. At the conclusion of the literary exercises refreshments were served in a manner which reflected great credit on those having this part of the entertainment in charge. After some time spent in pleasant social intercourse the company dispersed, all declaring themselves as more than satisfied with the evenings entertainment.

In this connection it would not be amiss to add a few words concerning the remarkable growth of the order. Twenty-six years ago, on the 19th of Feb., Justus H. Rathbone and four others established the first lodge of Knights of Pythias, and to-day, only a quarter of a century later, the order has grown to be one of the most powerful of secret societies in existence, almost every town and hamlet in the United States having a lodge, the order being especially strong on the Pacific slope. White Cross Lodge of this city was established six years ago last October, and to-day has nearly 125 members in good standing, among whom are the best, most prominent and most influential men in Brainerd. It is an organization of which its members should be proud, and we wish it and the order continued success and prosperity.

Doings of the Council.

The regular session of the city council on Monday evening was attended by all the members except Ald. Howe, Koop and Pres. Wheatley, and the meeting opened with Ald. Gardner in the chair. Bills were allowed as follows:

J. W. Jones, hauling hose cart	$2 00
J. S. Gardner	6 10
D. D. Clark & Co., supplies	17 28
Brainerd Tribune, printing	7 05
Dr. L. M. Roberts, health officer	25 00
Ed. Breheney, flushing hydrants	6 00

The street committee and the electric light committee were each granted further time to report on matters referred to them. A motion to keep all children under fifteen year of age off the streets after nine o'clock P. M. unless accompanied by parents or guardians, was made and carried.—Ordinance No. 87, prohibiting the throwing of missiles and the using offensive language in streets and alleys, was adopted. Policeman Johnson's bill for three days pay while ill in December was referred to a committee. A communication from Leon E. Lum, was read as follows, and the council adjourned:

BRAINERD, Minn., Feb. 12, 1890.
To the City Council of the City of Brainerd.

Gentlemen: You will please take notice that I am the owner of and entitled to the rents due to the Brainerd Water company, having purchased the rights, title, property and franchise of said company at sheriff's sale on the 16th day of Jan. 1890. You will therefore pay all rents due said company from said city to me.

Respectfully,
LEON E. LUM.
By W. A. Fleming, his attorney.

Club Life in the Metropolis.

"An Ocular Delusion" is the title of a bright social study in serial shape, which will begin in the New York Ledger of March 1st. The story holds the mirror up to club life in the metropolis, and touches lightly but with the masterly and suggestive stroke of the etching hand, some of the more distinctive sides of New York society life. Several of the characters are so startlingly typical that they may be taken for any one of scores of the members of the "Four Hundred." The hero is a fine combination of manliness, ready ingenuity and audacity, a youth with a rare amount of phosphorus in his cerebral gray matter and an equally generous amount of red corpuscles in his viens—a character which the author has elaborated with sympathetic interest, and which, according to the impression given by the advance sheets, represents an oarsman of a recent crew of a leading American college. The author, by the way, is that brilliant young newspaper worker, Frank Howard Howe, son of the late postmaster-general, Timothy, F. Howe, of Wisconsin.

Gull River News.

"Occasional" was too busy last week, stirring bear's oil with a whale bone, to appear in public.

Mrs. Crocker is lying dangerously sick, with neuralgia of the heart.

Miss Mary Thompson has been spending a few days in the Lhafer lumber camp visiting her sister.

Messrs. Yates, Bull, Hallet, Burgoyne and others came down from the camps to spend Sunday with their families.

A subscription is being taken to print the names of all the people in town, which list is to be presented to "Regular" with the hope that his spelling will improve.

"Toot" Mooers is having a busy winter keeping their lumber camp supplied with the necessaries of life. Mrs. Campbell, of Brainerd, and Mrs. Mooers made the trip with him last week.

Our school will have a "Washington Day" and unfurl the stars and stripes above the school building on Friday. That is right. If Boston, Chicago and St. Paul consider that the proper thing to do, we certainly do not wish to be left behind. Our teachers merit our thanks, and have them, too, for thus keeping the Gull River school up to the mark.

A "dark horse" is sometimes heard of about the time of political conventions but they seem out of season now. However, one got up here from Brainerd Monday, and though it came at a furious pace, was stopped and securely tied before reaching the school house. It was a great Risk, but no one was hurt. The driver was obliged to get help to get the animal home.

The sudden change to cooler weather is going to be rather hard on the mustaches of some of our young gentlemen. Some that were supposed to be sprouting, but which had not appeared, have, during the past week, suddenly sprung up and are now visible to the naked eye. We do not know what to advise, boys, unless you put a layer of jewelers' cotton over them until the weather moderates again. OCCASIONAL.

The Georgia Minstrels.

The Georgia Minstrels drew a crowded house last night, and the unanimous verdict of all those present was that it is the best minstrel show that has visited Ohio in a number of years. Billy Kersands and Billy Farrel, the two best colored comedians in the business kept the audience in an uproar whenever they appeared. They are a whole entertainment in themselves. The singing of the Crescent City Quartette was one of the finest features of the programme. The "Drum Major's Dream" was excellent, and the "Majors" performed their parts like clock-work. W. G. Huff's exhibition on the harmonica was the best we have ever listened to. The company is one of the best on the road, and should the Georgia's ever ever come to Chio again they will be greeted with another packed house.—Chico Enterprise.

Will appear at Sleeper Opera House Thursday evening Feb. 27th. Seats 25, 50 and 75 cents.

Rev. Tieganney, of Brainerd, will preach regularly at M. E. church in this village on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, beginning to-morrow.—Aitkins Age.

Mrs. S. F. Alderman enjoyed a visit from her brother, Judge R. B. Smith, of Madison, Wis., on Tuesday. Mr. Smith was on his way to Grand Forks on legal business.

It is reported that Dr. W. H. Allport, assistant surgeon at the N. P. Sanitarium in this city, has resigned to accept a position in Chicago with the Chicago & Northwestern.

Joe. Guyot, better known as Crow Wing Joe, was on trial for blacking the eyes of a Long Lake citizen on Saturday last. The jury disagreed and the case will be tried again tomorrow.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U., will give a tea at the residence of Mrs. F. L. Matteson, North Ninth street, on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 25th.—Literary exercises at 3:45 and tea at 5 P. M. All are invited.

The county superintendent has this week issued second grade certificates to Miss Blanche Scougale, Miss Belle Graham and Miss Rosemond Neidhart. Third grade certificates were issued to Mrs. Della M. Curtis and Miss Jessie P. Gibb.

Prof. Gould is on the sick list this week, and Supt. Wilson has charge of the high school department. Miss Bessie Mulrine, also a teacher in the city schools, is confined to the house on account of illness caused from falling down stairs, and her department is in charge of Miss Nettie McCulloch.

As train No. 5 was pulling out of Crow Wing Tuesday noon, an axle under the second class coach broke and the wheels ran for some considerable distance on the ties. The peculiarity of the accident was that the axle should give out just as the train was starting up instead of when the train was under full motion, but probably loss of life was averted by it. The passengers were brought to Brainerd in the baggage car.

On Sunday morning last as the church bells were pealing out their morning chimes fire was discovered in the attic of Mrs. Fanny Mulrine's residence on Eighth street north. The fire department responded as quickly as possible, and the flames were subdued, but not until the roof and upper portion of the building was gutted. The household goods were nearly all removed, but, of course, in a somewhat damaged condition. This is the second fire Mrs. Mulrine has had inside of four months in the same building.

Men's song service at the Y. M. C. A. hall Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Come and enjoy the singing. Admission free. Singing by the Y. M. C. A. quartette.

Miss McColl reopens her class for landscape, animal, and decorative oil painting and crayon portrait drawing, March 1st, over McColl's Art Gallery. Vacancies for a few more pupils—Lessons in painting, 50 cents. Portraits 75 cents.

A play is in course of preparation by local talent and will be placed on the boards at the opera house on St. Patrick's day for the benefit of the Catholic church. We are informed that the title of the play is "Waiting for the Verdict."

Two Indians bearing the names of Naytowaykesig and Magnenoyun were before the court this morning and plead guilty to drunkenness.—The fine was $5 each which the buck paid but allowed his squaw to go to jail for five days.

The sixth annual ball of Pine City Lodge, No. 81, B. of L. F., will be given on the evening of Easter Thursday, April 10th, and already the members of that organization are making arrangements for a grand good time on that occasion. The committee of arrangements contains the following names: J. F. McGinnis, chairman, Geo. Watts, E. Simmons, Geo. Hass and E. Efner.—The reputation which this organization has established for first-class parties in all particulars by their previous efforts will insure them a large attendance.

The State Fireman's Association which meets in Brainerd in June will bring many people to our city from all over the State, and it is desirable to make the meeting one of the most successful in its history. The department of this city will have matters in charge and have already set the ball rolling. The council will be called upon to make a contribution towards expenses, and there should be no hesitancy in their so doing when the time comes. Brainerd has one of the best volunter departments in the State and they deserve to be encouraged in this undertaking. It goes without saying that the coming meeting of the State Firemen in Brainerd will be one of the most enjoyable in the history of the organization.

Joy Turned to Sorrow.

A peculiarly sad incident occurred in this city on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. A Dean, on 9th street north. On that evening Miss Lillie Dean and James J. Bulmer were united in marriage, at the residence of the bride's mother, in the presence of invited guests. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock which joined the young people for life, and how little they thought that that life meant but three hours of wedded happiness. The guests departed at a little before 11 o'clock. The bride and groom sought their room and retired for the night and but ten or fifteen minutes had elapsed when the bride was alarmed by the peculiar breathing of her husband, and what seemed to her a gasping for breath. She spoke to him but no answer came and she arose hurriedly and turned up the light and returned to his side to find him dead. The alarm was given and assistance called but of no avail. The cause of death was heart disease and the sudden termination of his life was due to the excitement incident to the wedding. The case is certainly a sad one. Mr. Bulmer was a highly respected young man, 28 years of age, and had been in the employ of the Northern Pacific company here for two years. His parents, who reside in Canada, were notified by wire of the death of their son. The remains were taken to Marshal, Mich., on the noon train today, accompanied by the sorrowing wife, Mrs. Dean, and Mr. and Mrs. Brown, where they will be laid to rest.

A Republican City Ticket.

The matter of placing a republican city ticket in the field at the coming municipal election is receiving considerably attention these days, and while no move has as yet been made in that direction it is quite likely there will be if the sentiment continues to be expressed as favorably as has been done during the past week. If such a step is taken, and it is high time for it, it will be by concerted action of the republicans of Brainerd and by no clique, clan or ring, as will be seen later on. In a movement of this kind to insure success harmony must prevail and the selection of candidates must be practically unanimous. The DISPATCH will favor no movement in which the majority of the republican voters of this city do not have a voice, and if it is considered advisable to nominate a ticket a mass meeting will be called at some public place and due notice will be given so that every republican voter may have a chance to express himself. We desire that the republicans throughout the city canvass the subject, get at the real sentiment and act accordingly. In our next issue we will have more to say in regard to the matter.

Do not be Deceived.

Brother Stivers in his yesterday's paper says a "secret meeting" was held a few nights ago by a few republicans. As usual he is mistaken, for the meeting which he refers to was no more secret than any little gathering would be where several gentlemen are discussing matters of interest. Bro. Stivers would have been as welcome there as any man present. The fact that politics was discussed, however, was enough for him—inasmuch as it was republican politics. Do not be deceived, Bro. Stivers, nor try to deceived others into believing that there will be any "star-chamber" business, for if the republicans desire to put up a party ticket it will be done openly and by a majority of the voters. Candidates or possible candidates have not been suggested, mentioned, or thought of as yet.

A Very Successful Ball.

The occasion of the masquerade ball given by the members of the Chenquatana Club, of this city, on Monday evening was one of the most delightful events of the season. The Armory was artistically decorated and long before the time for the opening, the seats in the gallery and those reserved below for the spectators were taken and standing room was at a premium. At 9:15 the grand march took place, and it was indeed a gorgeous affair in which probably one hundred couple participated.—There were rich and expensive costumes, and they ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous. "McGinty's" band was also a feature, and a decided hit. The attendance was so large and many of the costumes so elaborate that it would be an impossibility for us to undertake to describe them. The members of the club can congratulate themselves on the successful termination of the event and the success of future entertainments of this class by the club is assured.

As Was Expected.

Dr. J H. Howes and J. H. Koop returned on Tuesday from the Mille Lacs Indian reservation where they went at the request of Agent Shuler to investigate the reports of death and destitution and report little or no foundation for the alarming reports. But few deaths have occurred from the grippe and sickness among them is no more than usual. Dr. Howes says the Indians were found to be pursuing their usual mode of life, and were actually shipping considerable quantities of fish from the winter catching through the ice. Undoubtedly less exertion than usual has been made towards supporting themselves owing to their high anticipations, but there is nothing existing, in fact, to justify the loud wails they made for help. As a matter of fact, most of the Mille Lackers have decided to take their lands in severality on the reservation where they now are, instead of removing to the White Earth reservation, so that they had no reason to expect immediate benefits.

As to Delinquent Taxes.

In this issue the list of delinquent taxes on real estate in the counties of Crow Wing and Cass for the year 1888 appears. Every real estate owner in these two counties should look it over carefully as it is often the case that some piece of property that he has intended to pay the taxes on has been forgotten or overlooked and if so such descriptions will be found advertised for sale. Errors in names will creep in although the description is always correct, because many times land is sold and the name on the assessment rolls is not changed. Errors also occur at times by the piece not being checked off. The extra cost for paying taxes before the sale is thirty cents more than the total amount shown in the list to cover cost of publishing and docketing. Additional costs will be added in May on account of sale, etc. Extra copies of the DISPATCH containing the list can be obtained at this office.

K. P. Anniversary.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the order of Knights of Pythias was celebrated by White Cross Lodge at their Castle Hall in this city, on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst., and it was pronounced by all present as a most enjoyable occasion. About 250 persons, including knights and invited guests were in attendance, the Grand Chancellor of the state, Hon. B. F. Stahl, of St. Paul, honoring the occasion by his presence. The entertainment was was of a literary and musical character of superior merit, and was enjoyed by all present. Grand Chancellor Stahl delivered the principal address of the evening, in which he reviewed the causes which led to the establishment of the order, the benefits to be derived by membership, and the remarkable growth and progress made during the 26 years of its existence. Hon. W. A. Fleming delivered a short address of welcome to the invited guests on behalf of the lodge. At the conclusion of the literary exercises refreshments were served in a manner which reflected great credit on those having this part of the entertainment in charge. After some time spent in pleasant social intercourse the company dispersed, all declaring themselves as more than satisfied with the evenings entertainment.

In this connection it would not be amiss to add a few words concerning the remarkable growth of the order. Twenty-six years ago, on the 19th of Feb, Justus H. Rathbone and four others established the first lodge of Knights of Pythias, and to-day, only a quarter of a century later, the order has grown to be one of the most powerful of secret societies in existence, almost every town and hamlet in the United States having a lodge, the order being especially strong on the Pacific slope. White Cross Lodge of this city was established six years ago last October, and to-day has nearly 125 members in good standing, among whom are the best, most prominent and most influential men in Brainerd. It is an organization of which its members should be proud, and we wish it and the order continued success and prosperity.

Doings of the Council.

The regular session of the city council on Monday evening was attended by all the members except Ald. Howe, Koop and Pres. Wheatley, and the meeting opened with Ald. Gardner in the chair. Bills were allowed as follows:

J. W. Jones, hauling hose cart	$2 00
J. S. Gardner	6 10
D. D. Clark & Co., supplies	17 28
Brainerd Tribune, printing	7 05
Dr. L. M. Roberts, health officer	25 00
Ed. Breheney, flushing hydrants	6 00

The street committee and the electric light committee were each granted further time to report on matters referred to them. A motion to keep all children under fifteen year of age off the streets after nine o'clock P. M. unless accompanied by parents or guardians, was made and carried.—Ordinance No. 87, prohibiting the throwing of missiles and the using offensive language in streets and alleys, was adopted. Policeman Johnson's bill for three days pay while ill in December was referred to a committee. A communication from Leon E. Lum, was read as follows, and the council adjourned:

BRAINERD, Minn., Feb. 12, 1890.

To the City Council of the City of Brainerd.

Gentlemen: You will please take notice that I am the owner of and entitled to the rents due to the Brainerd Water company, having purchased the rights, title, property and franchise of said company at sheriff's sale on the 16th day of Jan. 1890. You will therefore pay all rents due said company from said city to me.

Respectfully,
LEON E. LUM.

By W. A. Fleming, his attorney.

Club Life in the Metropolis.

"An Ocular Delusion" is the title of a bright social study in serial shape, which will begin in the New York Ledger of March 1st. The story holds the mirror up to club life in the metropolis, and touches lightly but with the masterly and suggestive stroke of the etching hand, some of the more distinctive sides of New York society life. Several of the characters are so startlingly typical that they may be taken for any one of scores of the members of the "Four Hundred." The hero is a fine combination of manliness, ready ingenuity and audacity, a youth with a rare amount of phosphorus in his cerebral gray matter and an equally generous amount of red corpuscles in his viens—a character which the author has elaborated with sympathetic interest, and which, according to the impression given by the advance sheets, represents an oarsman of a recent crew of a leading American college. The author, by the way, is that brilliant young newspaper worker, Frank Howard Howe, son of the late postmaster-general, Timothy, F. Howe, of Wisconsin.

Gull River News.

"Occasional" was too busy last week, stirring bear's oil with a whale bone, to appear in public.

Mrs. Crocker is lying dangerously sick, with neuralgia of the heart.

Miss Mary Thompson has been spending a few days in the Lhafer lumber camp visiting her sister.

Messrs. Yates, Bull, Hallet, Burgoyne and others came down from the camps to spend Sunday with their families.

A subscription is being taken to print the names of all the people in town, which list is to be presented to "Regular" with the hope that his spelling will improve.

"Toot" Mooers is having a busy winter keeping their lumber camp supplied with the necessaries of life. Mrs. Campbell, of Brainerd, and Mrs. Mooers made the trip with him last week.

Our school will have a "Washington Day" and unfurl the stars and stripes above the school building on Friday. That is right. If Boston, Chicago and St. Paul consider that the proper thing to do, we certainly do not wish to be left behind. Our teachers merit our thanks, and have them, too, for thus keeping the Gull River school up to the mark.

A "dark horse" is sometimes heard of about the time of political conventions but they seem out of season now. However, one got up here from Brainerd Monday, and though it came at a furious pace, was stopped and securely tied before reaching the school house. It was a great Risk, but no one was hurt. The driver was obliged to get help to get the animal home.

The sudden change to cooler weather is going to be rather hard on the mustaches of some of our young gentlemen. Some that were supposed to be sprouting, but which had not appeared, have, during the past week, suddenly sprung up and are now visible to the naked eye. We do not know what to advise, boys, unless you put a layer of jewelers' cotton over them until the weather moderates again. OCCASIONAL.

The Georgia Minstrels.

The Georgia Minstrels drew a crowded house last night, and the unanimous verdict of all those present was that it is the best minstrel show that has visited Ohio in a number of years. Billy Kersands and Billy Farrel, the two best colored comedians in the business kept the audience in an uproar whenever they appeared. They are a whole entertainment in themselves. The singing of the Crescent City Quartette was one of the finest features of the programme. The "Drum Major's Dream" was excellent, and the "Majors" performed their parts like clock-work. W. G. Huff's exhibition on the harmonica was the best we have ever listened to. The company is one of the best on the road, and should the Georgia's ever ever come to Chio again they will be greeted with another packed house.—Chico Enterprise.
